When the last section of harbor wall is complete, the whole wall will be topped with a concrete cap, sidewalk and granite curb will be installed as well as a new fence. The granite curbing will be similar to that used in a portion of the center of Town with a 2" radius. This design seems to have worked well for us in other areas.

Grass doesn't always have to be greener

TOWARD A SUSTAINABLE COHASSET

JOANN MIRISE

Walking around town recently, I encountered one of those "Caution, Pesticide Application, Keep Off" signs. When I spot these little yellow placards of doom I get anxious.

My walk turns into a run, and I hold my breath until I clear the area. It's not that I actually think that I can protect myself during those few seconds as a passerby. It's more a visceral need to get away from the evidence that some people still have a higher regard for their lawn than for our collective well-being.

What drives our high regard for lawns anyway? No one seems particularly happy to work on their lawn. In fact, it's one of the biggest complaints I hear among my homeowner peers come springtime. It certainly doesn't conjure up the joy of other outdoor pursuits like gardening. And I haven't heard of any lawn care social clubs. It's also not something that we sit around the dinner table to discuss over a glass of wine. Why, then, do we even have lawns if they take so much work and suck our resources? It also makes me wonder if environmentally friendly lawn care practices are a little like adding a filter to a cigarette without acknowledging the real danger of smoking.

The concept of cultivating grass in America is not much more than a century-long marketing project. The origins trace back to a desire to emulate upper-crust Europeans in the mid 1800s, followed by some heavy marketing by the USDA and US Golf Association in the early 1900s, and made possible to the masses by left-over chemical warfare technology post-World War II. Not exactly reasons relevant to the present day. And certainly not enough reason to ignore the proven health and ecological dangers we face in favor of an antiquated ideal.

Most lawns never get enjoyed or even used. Parallel to the simplicity mantra "If you haven't worn it for a year, get rid of it", it is time to task ourselves with the challenge: If we have not enjoyed our lawns to an extent greater than our efforts to seed, water, fertilize, mow, rake, manicure, trim, lay sod, weed and spray with chemicals, then it is time to let them go.

I am not entirely anti-lawn. Grass creates texture and depth in our landscape. We play sports and picnic on it. And it makes a comfortable blanket for late-night star-gazing. After all, grass is a plant. And plants absorb CO2 from our atmosphere. As with most things in life, however, the problems arise when we force the unnatural and gorge to excess.

So what is an excessively large lawn? If it requires fertilizing and pesticides, if it needs to be groomed with power tools and mowers, if it needs irrigation systems to keep it thriving, then it is excessive and fundamentally unsustainable.

The options for redefining our landscapes in favor of productive, meaningful, and green alternatives are plenty. These options are harmonious and, I believe, cultured. A new ideal.

A logical starting point is to replace grass in some areas with more sustainable plantings. Native plants that are appropriate for the place (wet, rocky, shady, etc.) are most fitting. They typically require less intervention, efficiently use water and promote biodiversity. The American Beauties collection, a project through the National Wildlife Federation, makes it easy to go native by providing specific plant types, planting tips, landscape plans and a list of garden centers which carry the plants.

Even conservationist gardeners don't limit their choices to natives though. As long as plantings aren't invasive, any plants from ground covers to shrubs to trees that are adequate for site conditions can make a difference. Also, keeping soil healthy by adding organic matter and mulching (which prevents evaporation) can significantly help in conserving water.

Another aspect of the de-lawning movement which I find to be the most compelling is the re-emergence of the backyard fruit, vegetable and herb garden. By addressing not only environmental degradation, but food production, community interaction and inherent self-sustainability, I believe this step truly takes the green movement to a whole new level. Plus there is much joy to be had around the growing, harvesting and preparation of food (glorious food!)

In my family's yard we have begun to replace sections of our lawn with plantings as our budget allows. We are absolutely hooked and are continuing the process, with the goal of saving only one small parcel of grass for the kids to play on.

The monotony of our boring and unused front yard grass has been replaced with plants that require no work and yet stimulate my senses every time I walk outside. Another example of how a sustainable life is a better life.

Cohasset to receive road funding

State Sen. Robert L. Hedlund and Rep. Bradley announced the release of $160,990 in Chapter 90 funding to the town of Cohasset for fiscal 2008.

This funding is part of $3,507,739 in state aid allocated to the eight South Shore towns in Hedlund's Plymouth and Norfolk Senate District. The funding comes from the broader $150 million package in Chapter 90 monies approved recently by the state Legislature and signed by Gov. Patrick.

The funding represents a 15 percent increase in funding for the South Shore and provides resources for upgrades to local roads and bridges.

For the third year in a row, Hedlund and Bradley worked for an early release of Chapter 90 funding that immediately aids towns before the upcoming spring construction season. The early release of funding helps municipalities plan and prepare for local projects.

This funding is part of $3,507,739 in state aid allocated to the eight South Shore towns in Hedlund's Plymouth and Norfolk Senate District.

Since 1991, the state has provided Cohasset with $2,266,066 in Chapter 90 funding.

"Construction and maintenance of local roads and bridges is critical to our transportation infrastructure," said Hedlund, a member of the Transportation Committee. "I am pleased this funding was prioritized."

Bradley said, "It's critical that the state directs money to our roadways and bridges to ensure that we maintain them properly. I am happy that the town of Cohasset will benefit from this increase."

Each year, Chapter 90 funding is allocated to cities and towns based on a formula that takes into account the number of miles of local roadway, population and the employment rate in a given community. The funding is reimbursed to the communities on approved transportation projects as construction unfolds.

A bittersweet farewell

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

If you're a senior, next week is your last to walk these halls. Depends on how you look at it, but there seems to be two schools of thought: either you're hitting the ground running with no plans of looking back, or you're trying to savor every last moment.

Prepare to hear the sound of car horns on the class of 2007's last day, in what has become an unofficial tradition of graduating seniors. Well, since I'll be leaving too, it seems like now is the right time to pass the torch, and hand over all Life at CHS responsibilities to my replacement. Christine Kent will be taking the helm of this column for the rest of the year and reporting to you weekly next year. A member of the class of '08, Christine hopes to pursue a career in journalism. No worries, you'll still be getting your updates on school news, with a new spin on things.

One last time, here's this week's school news.

• Monday AP Bio and Physics took their exams.

• Wrestling Boosters met in the Library Monday night.

• AP Chemistry's exam was held Tuesday morning.

• The Superintendent's Administrative Council met Tuesday morning.

• High School faculty met after school Tuesday.

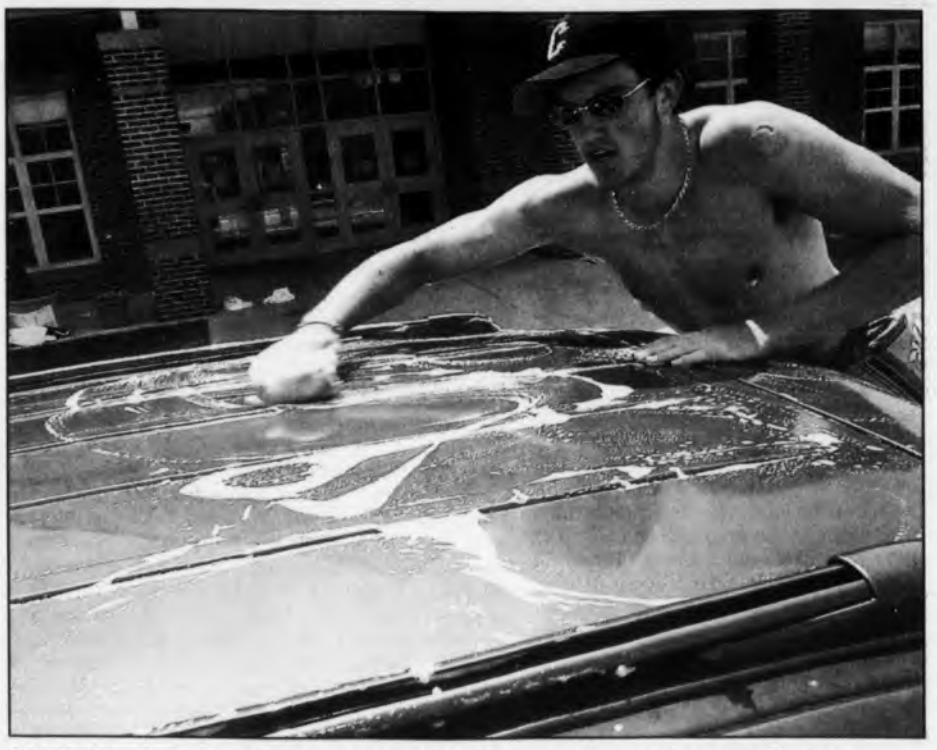
• AP English took their exam Wednesday morning.

• Relay for Life met in the Library Wednesday night.

• Arts & Pops Night was held in the Upper Lobby Wednesday night, featuring art from CHS students and performances from the Band and Chorus.

• School Committee held a meeting Wednesday night.

• Today the Band and Chorus traveled to a Competition, followed by some well-earned fun at the immensely popular Six Flags. If you find yourself waiting in long lines at Superman: Ride of Steel, try heading to the big wooden rollercoaster, the Cyclone. The location of this exciting ride is somewhat secluded, so you can ride it a few times if you're lucky.



• This morning a Mock Crash Assembly was held.

• Mid-Term notices went home today.

It's been an incredible experience writing for The Mariner, and I'd like to thank Mary Ford, Mrs. Berman, my parents, and anyone who read the column and gave me feedback, support or criticism. Writing Life at CHS helped me find my voice and played a role in deciding to pursue a career writing books and screenplays. I'd like to leave with one final thought. Archimedes once said, "Give me a place to stand and I can move the world." I'll paraphrase that. Give me a pen in hand and I can move the world. Enjoy the weekend and stay safe. Cheers.

Deer Hill School has new principal

Dr. Jennifer deChiara has accepted the position of principal at Deer Hill School. She will assume her position on July 1. She comes to Cohasset with more than 20 years of experience in education and 10 years in an administration role. Currently, she is the principal of the Dean S. Luce Elementary School in Canton, Mass. Previous to that position she was an assistant principal at Hobomock Elementary School in Pembroke. Both schools were kindergarten through fifth grade.

DeChiara recently received her doctorate in Educational Studies from Lesley University. Her dissertation topic was "Decision Making and Ethical Dilemmas in the Elementary School Principalship."

Superintendent of School Denise Walsh announced her acceptance of the position at the School Committee meeting on Wednesday evening.

"She will be a great addition to our administration," said Dr. Walsh. Current Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley is leaving Cohasset schools for another principalship at an elementary school in Brewster, Mass.

Schools plan ahead

effort by the Deer Hill and Middle-High School Councils made up of administrators, teachers, parents and members of the community.

The plans are meant to be a foundation for the administrators and staff to build upon throughout the year. Each goal aligns with the School Committee's Strategic Plan and district goals. It includes ways the administration will be able to measure the student and staff's success in each goal, as well as the strategies the school will use to achieve the objectives.

Gauley represented the Deer Hill School Council with his presentation of six goals for the forthcoming year. The first goal is to "meet or exceed target improvement goals for all students in regard to student understanding, skill development, and the application of learning standards in English language arts, math, and science, technology and engineering." The range of subjects covered in this goal is "core subjects," as Antolini later described. Performance will be measured through benchmark testing, survey data and other assessment systems.

The second goal is to "enhance and refine" programs within and beyond the school day. The objective is to focus classroom instruction and EMC^3 programs to align with student needs, increase student motivation, and encourage the development of individual talents and interests.

"We want to make sure all the time during the school day is used productively," said Gauley. The staff will work to find ways to accommodate accelerated learners and struggling students through flexible groupings and differentiated instruction.

Goal three is directed at professional development for teachers and other staff.

"Much of my focus is on meeting student achievement and student needs," Gauley noted and said he realized, after a discussion with Superintendent Denise Walsh, he needs to focus on teachers' needs as well. "We also need to support staff and help them to help students."

The objective is to create a professional development plan and technology plan to enhance teachers' effectiveness. Some strategies include collaborating district wide to better utilize resources and allocate budgeted funds to professional development.

Maintaining class size to less than 23 students in grade 3 and less than 26 in grades 4 and 5 is the fourth goal outlined. School Committee member Alfred Slanetz questioned this goal, saying that the five-year plan includes class sizes less than 16 and this goal does not move the school toward that objective.

Gauley explained that the actual class size would likely be less than what the goal indicates, hovering between 22 and 24 for all grades. He said it was his belief that the resources it would take to get to a lower class size would likely take away from other school programs. He did not feel a class size in the lower twenties would be a negative over the next year. According to research cited by Gauley, 16 is the class size needed to alter the dynamics between teachers and students.

The last two goals address the need to improve the level of safety and respect in the school and increase community outreach. In the last year, Gauley said there has been significant improvement in this area. Supervision at lunches and recess has increased 50 percent and there has been a 25 percent reduction in discipline referrals. Gauley said he hopes that trend will continue.

Antolini presented the Middle-High School plan, which is similar to goals presented in last year's improvement plan. However, the strategies and methods to achieve the goals have changed and developed as the schools evaluate performance and explore alternate strategies, antolini said.

"The goals will be there year after year, it's the strategies that will move in and out," Antolini said.

The first goal is to maintain and increase student proficiency in core subjects through curriculum support, purchase of textbook, increased electives, diversified teaching methods, professional development and evaluation of program effectiveness. The second goal is to employ teachers who are highly qualified in their areas of expertise and continue their development through workshops and courses.

Promoting a sense of social responsibility, good citizenship and life-long learning within each student is the premise of the third goal. Antolini said many efforts are already in place to achieve this goal, such as leadership standards, peer leadership program, school handbooks and safety drills.

He hopes through encouraging student leaders to be role models, their behavior will "trickle" down to all students. Antolini said the staff as adults could only do so much and believes that will the help of student leaders the school environment can be elevated.

The fourth and last goal for the Middle-High School looks ahead to the future — five years down the line. It outlines strategies the schools can implement to project population growth and identify future staff, program and resources that will be needed in the not-so-distant future. The strategies delineated include furthering academic support services, developing an English as a second language curriculum, addressing student service needs, increasing career education and exploration, providing adequate counseling support and health services, and strengthening of extracurricular programs.

Two unanimous votes by the School Committee approved both School Improvement Plans.

Train on track

"This will only be the first of many, many more train runs. The safety issue depends on all of us and becomes even more critical than in the past," says Gruber.

He and Mark Brennan, also a Greenbush liaison, are concerned about trespass issues, especially with the town's youth. However, they say the MBTA will have many extra safety measures in place on this first trip down the line, including reduced speed and flagmen along the route.

The test trains serve a dual purpose. First, to properly test the railroad signal system to ensure it is fully operational and second, to train the crews that will be operating the trains.

Full commuter service for the Greenbush line is planned for the fall. It has been close to 50 years since the last train made its way to South Station in 1959. Saturday's test train, which will include a locomotive and some passenger cars, will travel the 17.7-mile long corridor that cuts through Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate. It will travel at a restricted speed, around 10 miles per hour, in order to check clearances.

"Be aware that test trains may operate at any time, day or evening, seven days a week, and will not operate on a set schedule."

— Tom Carroll, CBB Community Outreach Director

For safety reasons, as not all grade crossing warning systems are operational, train horns will be sounded as the train approaches grade crossings. Horns will also be sounded as required to alert crews working on the tracks. Flagmen will stop roadway traffic at grade crossings during test train operations until the warning systems are thoroughly tested and placed into operation, Carroll said.

All five towns have requested that the entire line be declared a "quiet zone." The final step in the process, gaining Federal Railroad Administration approval, is in the works. Until all grade crossing warning systems are working properly and the quiet zone is officially in place, horns will be sounded throughout the route.

Sustainable film series: 'The Power of Community'

A highly unusual documentary, a film of ironic victory emerging from the maelstrom of environmental problems, is due to be shown next by Sustainable Cohasset at the Paul Pratt Library on Monday, May 21 at 7 p.m. View what actually happened when a nation relatively recently did run out of oil. The film, "The Power of Community," depicts one of our worst fears. But this remarkable documentary also leaves the audience with hope and reassurance that all is not lost.

During the film series, viewers have seen the mysterious disappearance of what some considered the perfect car, an electric vehicle designed for today's lifestyles and today's highways. Viewers have seen another documentary on how the establishment of American suburbia was predicated on the supposed infinite supply of cheap oil. These provocative films have left viewers somewhat gasping as they contemplate America's future. "The Power of Community" needs to be seen by as many as possible to have our faith restored in ourselves and in our future.

Refreshments will be served.

Lady laxers need one more win

The Cohasset High girls lacrosse team needs one win in its final three games to qualify for the Div. 2 state tournament.

The Skippers got their first crack at it yesterday (May 17) at Scituate in a game played after the Mariner went to press. Cohasset's final two games are Saturday at Wakefield (10 a.m. start) and Monday at home against Notre Dame Academy (7 p.m.).

Cohasset (7-6) put itself in this position with a critical win Wednesday against Cape Cod Academy.

Skippers 15, CCA 10

At 6-6, both teams entered this game needing a win to keep playoff chances high.

Cohasset jumped out to a 4-0 lead, with Caitlin Mahoney and Tessa Leahy each picking up a goal and an assist. Lindsay Durkin and Caren Garber added goals during the run. After CCA scored on a penalty shot, Amy Meikleham and Durkin made it 6-1 for the home team.

But CCA netted two more penalty shots to close the gap, and then thunder interrupted the game for 30 minutes. When the delay was over, the Seahawks gave up a quick score to Durkin, but then stormed back with two goals — one on yet another penalty shot — to draw to 7-5 and to have all of the momentum entering the second half.

The scene was similar to a year ago, when CCA had tied Cohasset at the break, only to see the Skippers storm out of the box and turn the game into a rout just minutes into the second stanza.

And that's precisely what happened again.

Durkin scored her fourth of the day 14 seconds into the second half, and Kara Wilcox followed just 13 seconds later. Durkin converted a Meikleham feed, and then each of those players scored solo goals as Cohasset stretched the lead to 12-5 just 10 minutes into the second half. Durkin's seventh goal of the game — marking the second time this year she had hit Cape Cod Academy for that many goals — made it 13-6, at which point the home team substituted liberally.

Sophomore Grace Clougherty struck for the first two goals of her career — both on penalty shots — to close out the Cohasset scoring. The Seahawks made a run at the end of the game, helped by two more penalty shots, to make the final 15-10.

Aisling Guinee made 16 saves in the Cohasset net, leaving the game with a 15-8 advantage.

NDA 11, Cohasset 6

Cohasset controlled the first half against a Notre Dame Academy team that, to this point in the season, had not lost a game. Two goals from Durkin and a Wilcox score off a feed from Meikleham made the count 3-0 with 15 minutes gone by.

Notre Dame broke the seal at the 20-minute mark and scored its second goal just 40 seconds later, but Durkin finished a Wilcox feed to make it 4-2. When Notre Dame scored at 24:06 to draw to within one, Wilcox finished a fast break just 10 seconds later to re-establish the lead.

Durkin's third goal of the day was the 150th of her Cohasset High School career.

A Cohasset mishap in its defensive zone resulted in a disputed goal as the half expired. The Notre Dame team scooped up a loose ball and scored, but the timekeeper had zeroed the clock. The goal stood, making it 5-4 at the half.

McKenna Teague's only goal of the game for NDA tied the score, but Cohasset answered on a score from Garber. NDA answered 20 seconds later, and from there the strain of three games in three days started to take its toll on Cohasset, as NDA was able to establish a lead and keep the ball away from an exhausted group of Skippers.

Cohasset's Maura Barnes scored twice for NDA.

A split once again

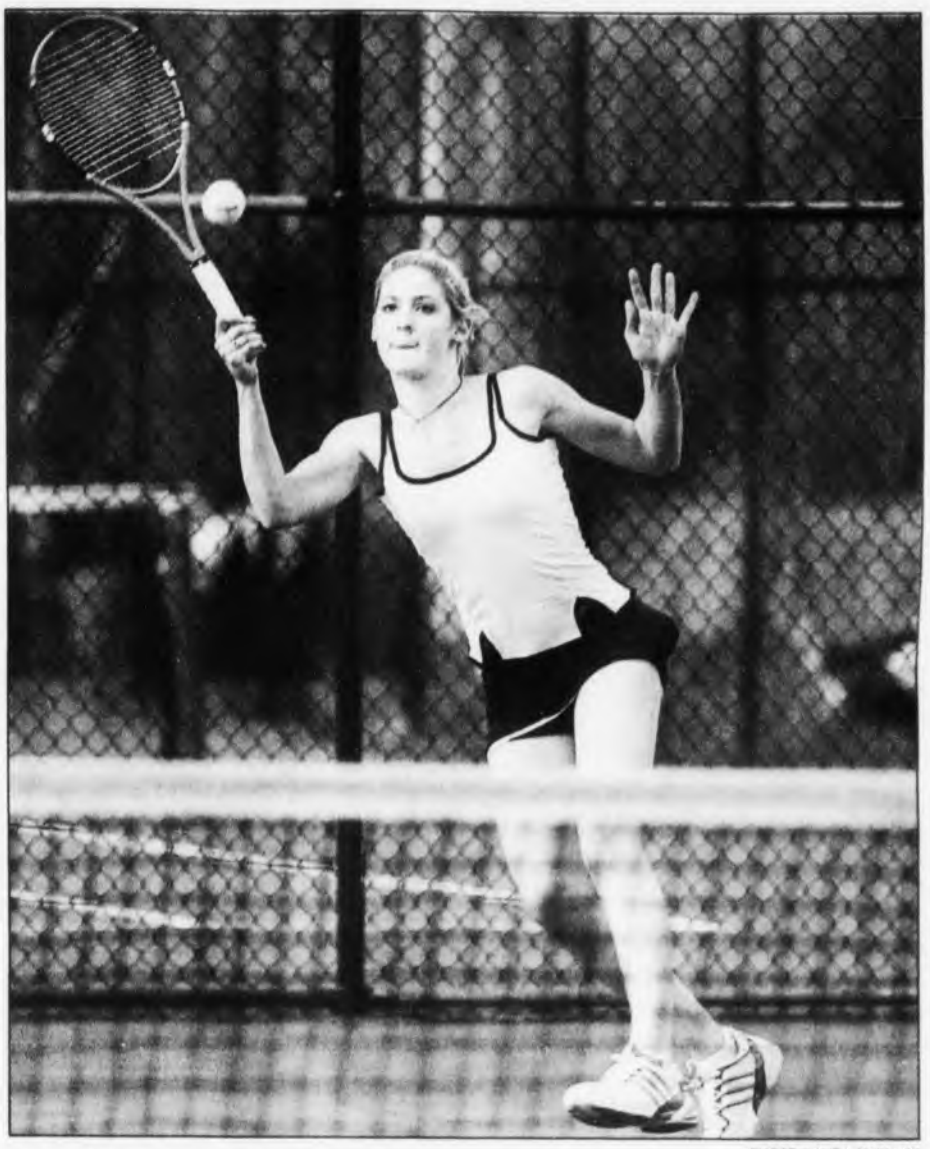
CHS girls tennis to share league title with Norwell

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

It's a different season, but one local tennis storyline remains the same.

In the South Shore League, it's Norwell and Cohasset, and then everybody else.

The Clippers' 3-2 win over the Skippers Tuesday all but assures the teams will split the league championship for the second straight spring. Both teams are 10-1 in league play with one SSL match to go, as Cohasset traveled to Mashpee yesterday (May 17) and Norwell goes to Abington today.



Tuesday's showdown showed again just how close these two teams are, with a pair of matches going to three sets and two others being closely contested. For the Clippers, the two biggest wins came in the doubles matches.

Seniors Marissa Dalferro and Rachel Thomas, coming off a solid showing at the weekend's MIAA individuals tournament, paired up for a 4-6, 6-4, 6-4 win over Cohasset's duo of senior Elizabeth Landon and sophomore Maggie McGoldrick.

After playing together season, the Clippers duo had spent most of this year playing with different partners: Dalferro with junior Meghan Logue and Thomas with junior Aliza Ritzko. Norwell coach Judy Field said after Tuesday's match her seniors have had a notable effect on their doubles teammates.

"I really used and counted on their experience to spread that knowledge with the other two players, and all throughout the season the other players have been building on their confidence and their experience," Field said.

For this match, however, Field put the two seniors back together, and it paid dividends. Both players made their share of key shots, both at the net and from the baseline, with Thomas finishing the match in style with a couple strong shots from the baseline.

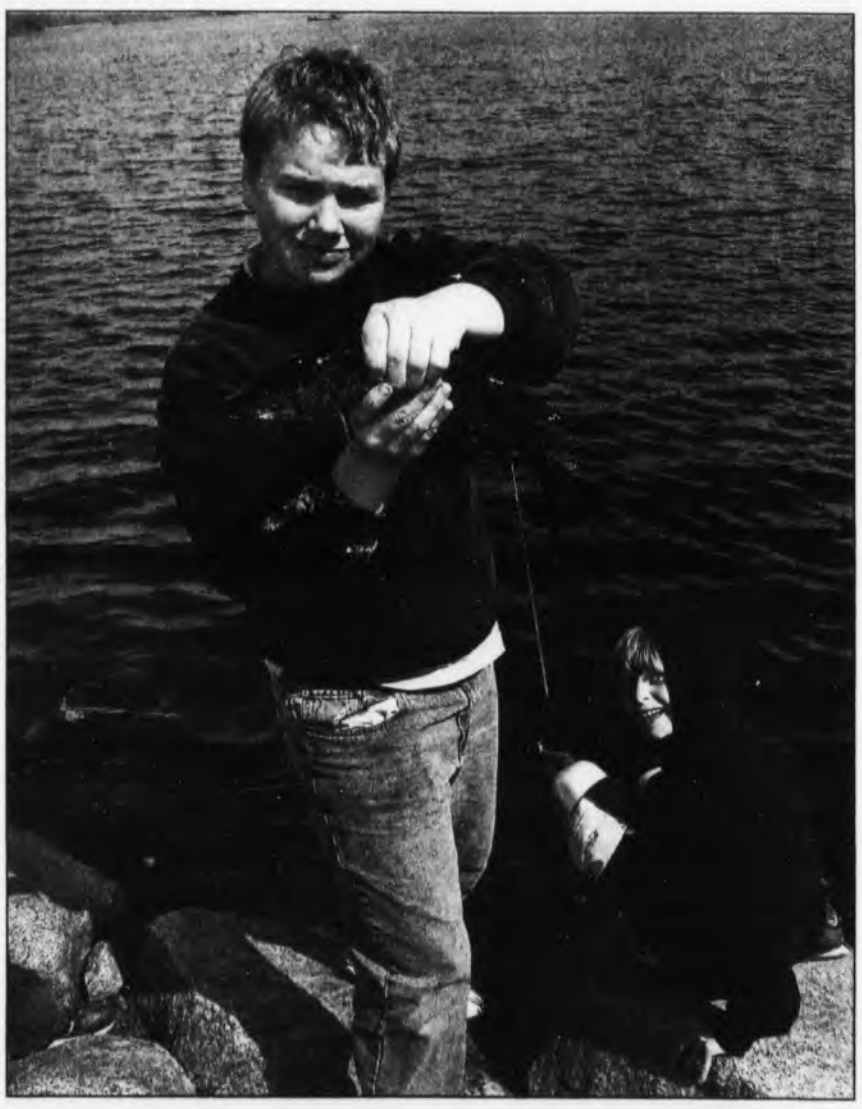
Cohasset's Sally Meehan won a tough three-set match Tuesday against Norwell, but the Clippers still emerged with a 3-2 victory.

When the final game was over, Norwell had clinched the match.

"Sometimes, earlier in the season, they didn't give it their best when they played together. I wanted them to really want it [Tuesday], and they did...They wanted this," Field said of her first doubles team. "And what a great memory for them as seniors. That match allowed their team to share the league title. I'm thrilled for them."



At second doubles, Ritzko and Logue defeated Cohasset senior Charlotte Landon and freshman Maddy Altholtz, 6-4, 6-4.

Skippers coach Gigi Meehan said after the match that the visiting doubles teams wanted to win just a bit more than Cohasset's, with the Skippers' win in the teams' first match on April 30 serving as motivation.

"I felt like my doubles was just a little flat today, and Norwell was a little hungrier, with good reason," Meehan said. "Sometimes when you play with

The big comeback

CHS boys pull out 4th quarter win against Hingham

Tuesday saw a tale of two neighboring rival towns and two halves in this exciting high school boys' lacrosse game.

Before a packed house at Alumni Field on Cohasset Spirit Night, Hingham jumped out to an 8-4 halftime lead but could not hold off a furious Cohasset finish in the fourth quarter. Ahead 9-6 at the end of the third, Hingham had no answer for Cohasset's charge led by the defense and playmaking of Dan Trendowicz and the spectacular play of junior attackman Mike Grimm, who scored four straight unanswered goals to tie the game, put the Skippers ahead for good and the victory.

"I have been waiting for this kind of offensive explosion from Grimmy all season," said Cohasset head coach Stew Curran. "It could not have come at a better time. The team recognized that Mike wanted the ball on every possession in that final period and our middies PJ McCaw, Chuck Czerkawski, Pete Ernst, Andrew Smith and Dan Trendowicz did the hard work of getting the ball to our man on fire, Mike Grimm.

"The exhausted Hingham defenseman couldn't keep up with Mike's pace. With his intensity, quickness and athleticism, Grimme is a tough match-up for anybody."

The Harbormen's senior attackman, Tim Schmitt, opened the scoring on a fast break assisted after a nice run by junior defenseman Chris Johnson. Cohasset answered when Mike Bunstein found junior midfielder Peter Ernst alone on the crease for a quick stick goal. Schmitt put Hingham back on top on a well-placed shot to the lower corner after dodging from behind.

Junior middie Austin Driscoll scored unassisted on a nice left-handed outside bullet to the upper shelf. Senior Brendan Garrity then assisted classmate John Kelliher's goal for a 4-1 Hingham lead. Grimm found PJ McCaw with a nice inside pass to bring Cohasset closer. But after sophomore attackman Brendan Wilbur scored dodging from behind and senior Jay Dupras put a jump shot into the upper corner, the Harbormen led 6-2 at the close of the first period.

The Skippers were frustrated by the outstanding play of Hingham's junior goaltender Max Vatckus, who had 25 saves for the game and seemed to be everywhere when Cohasset shot the ball. Cohasset also shot with a little bad luck in the first period as Mark Flibotte hit the post once and Grimm clanged two off the pipes. Cohasset hit the post seven times in all.

The frenetic pace of the game slowed in the second and third periods as the teams traded goals. Grimm scored unassisted on a laser to the near side upper corner. After Driscoll answered with a goal, Bunstein scored for Cohasset on a roll dodge from

Local 9's boat finally sunk

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset High baseball team was finally eliminated from state tournament contention last week with its loss to Harwich. The team has struggled all season and barely kept its hope of making the tournament alive. With a 5-2 loss to Harwich the hopes were finally thrown overboard.

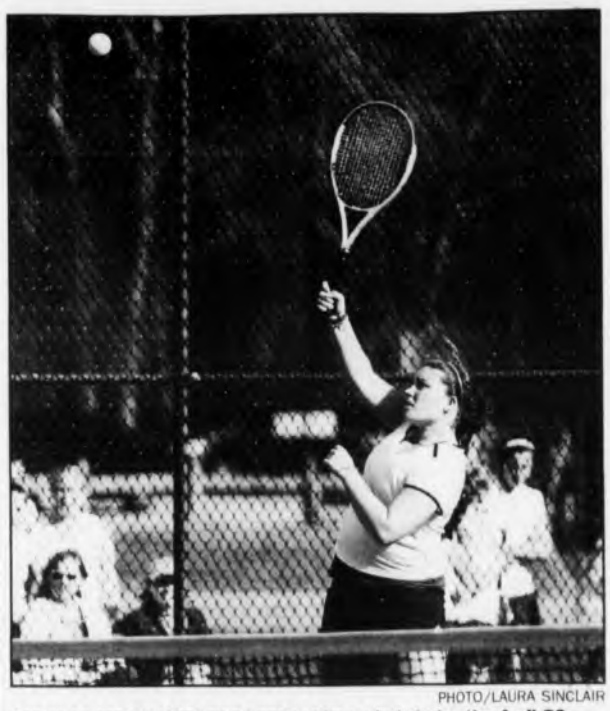
On the mound for Cohasset was junior Brian Hill. Hill, although he received the loss, pitched pretty well overall, not allowing too big of a deficit and keeping the Skippers in the game. The real story of the game, though, was junior catcher Kyle Pinkus.

Pinkus gave the Skippers a boost when in the first inning he hit a 2-run homerun. Pinkus came very close to hitting another round-tripper, but the ball rolled up a set of bleachers in deep center field for a ground rule double.

The Skippers faced more trouble when they faced the Hull Pirates, who were in last place in the South Shore League going into the game. With junior Dave Snowdale on the mound, the Skippers lost 7-1. Snowdale pitched well after the first inning, but in that inning he gave up five runs on five hits. He eventually settled down the rest of the game.

Snowdale faced stiff competition, as the starting pitcher for Hull had a no-hitter gong into the final inning of the game. Cohasset head coach Al Gallotta said of his offense, "It's been a season long problem for us: no hitting. You're not going to win a lot of games with two hits."

Those two hits for Cohasset came in the seventh inning when junior slugger Kenny Muir broke up the no-hitter and senior captain Nick Zappolo drove him in.



Cohasset continued its long losing streak against the Norwell Clippers on Tuesday as they lost yet another heartbreaker, 5-4.

"We out-pitched them, we out-hit them, we played better defensively than them; we just outplayed them, yet we lost," said Gallotta of the game.

The Skippers, who did almost everything better than the Clippers, were still unable to come away with the victory. Junior pitcher Sam DeGiacomo pitched a complete game and gave up only four earned runs. DeGiacomo also had a good day at the plate. He apparently hit a home run that was unfortunately ruled a ground rule double on which he was never able to come around and score. Junior Chris Rose also had a good game with two singles, and multiple players had one hit.

The fun started in the seventh inning when Rose had an RBI single to tie the game up at 4-4. In the bottom of the seventh inning, Norwell was able to load up the bases on two Cohasset errors. Gallotta called the outfield in, but the Clippers came away with the win after a hit over the outfielders' heads.

The Cohasset Skippers have three games left on the season and hope to finish off strong. With many players returning next year, the Skippers can build momentum and hopefully roll it into next year.

behind. Schmitt then found Wilbur to keep the Hingham lead at four at the half.

Trendowicz opened the second half scoring, finding a small opening to the near side over Vaickus' shoulder. After a Cohasset penalty, Dupras answered with a beautiful sidearm shot to the upper corner. Flibotte then caught Vaickus outside of his crease, stripped the ball on an aggressive ride and passed to Bunstein, who assisted a McCaw goal to close the third period.

Trendowicz started the Cohasset comeback with a face dodge followed by a roll dodge and opposite hand shot that beat Vaickus to the far side lower corner. Grimm then took over the game. Trendowicz assisted Grimm on the first goal of the run while Cohasset had the man advantage. Grimm tied the score with a sidearm shot beating Vaickus to the near side after dodging from up top.

After hitting the pipe still another time, Grimm got another feed from Trendowicz on the man-up and rocketed a shot which trickled off Vaickus' stick into the goal for the first Cohasset lead of the game. Dodging off a solid pick at the restraining line by junior midfielder Chuck Czerkawski, Grimm scored again unassisted to give Cohasset a two-goal margin. After Bunstein scored dodging from behind, Grimm picked up a ground ball on the sideline, bounced off and dodged by five Hingham defenders and found Flibotte on the crease for Cohasset's final tally.

The 7-0 Cohasset run in the final period was made possible by the great face-off work of Czerkawski and McCaw, who won 18 of 26 draws overall.

Hingham coach John Todd felt his team played well in the first three quarters.

"We just did not have any answers when Cohasset exploded in that final quarter," Todd said. "Cohasset is a well-coached team and Stew had them firing on all cylinders at the end."

In addition to Grimm, Curran singled out the play of Trendowicz, saying, "Trendo showed a lot of senior leadership out there today. He controlled the ground balls at the midfield and quickly transitioned the ball to our attack. I'm very proud of the way my guys battled back in this one."

Grimm led all scorers with five goals and two assists. Trendowicz and Bunstein each had two goals and two assists. McCaw added two goals for the victors. Nate Porter had 15 saves for the Skippers.

Dupras, Driscoll, Wilbur and Schmitt each had 2 goals for Hingham.

Cohasset improved to 11-3 and is looking to cement the number-1 seed and homefield advantage throughout the Division 3 state tournament. Hingham fell to 8-6 on the year.

that win already in your pocket, it's harder to ramp yourself up, whereas they (Norwell) did a good job taking advantage of that big situation."

Cohasset's lineup had a different look to it, with Altholtz – who has been outstanding this season at third singles – making the switch to second doubles. In her place at singles was Lauren Allen, who topped Norwell junior Sarah Dargon, 6-4, 6-4. Meehan said she made the move to try and strengthen her doubles squads and because she had enough trust in Allen to get the job done at singles.

"Lauren Allen was brilliant at third singles," Meehan said. "Lauren has tons of match experience. She plays year-round, and I felt very confident doing that as a coaching move."

Norwell picked up its other point at first singles, where junior Susan Bitetti ousted Cohasset junior Meg Anderson, 6-1, 6-0.

And then there was...

The match that wouldn't end

Clippers junior second singles Katherine Kelley has played some long matches this season, and Tuesday was her second such outing with Cohasset junior Sally Meehan.

The girls' first meeting last month was the deciding match and went three sets, with Meehan pulling it out for the Skippers. Meehan cruised through Tuesday's first set, 6-2, but Kelley turned it around in the second, breaking serve three times for a 6-4 second set win, ending it with a great little drop shot.

A back-and-forth third set had all the makings of a tiebreaker, and that's precisely what happened. After Meehan broke Kelley's serve – in a game that lasted at least 10 minutes – to take a 6-5 advantage, the Clippers' lefty showed her trademark perseverance and forced a tiebreaker.

With both players appearing exhausted, having played tennis for over two hours at this point, Meehan had just a bit more left in the tank and won the tiebreaker, 7-5.

"I give Katherine a lot of credit. She pulled Sally out of her game," said coach Meehan. "She's a smart player, and she fights her to the end."

Said Field of Kelley, "She has all the patience in the world; we saw it again today in the same scenario. She'll work on that, build her repertoire a little bit more, and I'm looking forward to having her come back to playing singles next year."

Cohasset Sailing Club registration

Is it possible? Is summer almost here? Soon the docks will be in, all the boat bottoms painted, the clubhouse swept, the rocking chairs placed on the porch, and the kids with life preservers around their necks, faced filled with expectations, enthusiasm and glee, ready to sail.

Here are a few important dates to remember from the Cohasset Sailing Club: Registration Days are May 19 and 20; Junior classes start July 2; Launch party, July 7; Classes end Aug. 24.

To register, arrive at the Sailing Club on Government Island on May 19 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., and May 20 from noon to 2 p.m. No mail-in applications will be accepted.

The Sailing Club is open to all Cohasset residents and offer Junior (10-16 years old) and Adult (17 and over) training on the Club's fleet of nine 15' Capri 14, four Club 420s, and two lasers. The learning process includes a combination of classroom instruction and sailing. Adult training courses meet for three hours on Saturday mornings for shore class and water training. Children must have completed fourth grade or be 10 years old by Sept. 1.

Girls

U15 White

For the first time in several years Mother's Day dawned with good weather, and the girls celebrated with strong performances throughout the day.

The Cohasset U15 White team traveled to Norwell for a game against Norwell Blue. Cohasset raced out to a 2-0 lead off goals from Lindsay MacNaught and Alison Whelan. Kaci Kucinski answered a Norwell goal and Olivia Murphy netted a feed from Allie Farren to put Cohasset up 4-1. While Norwell mounted a comeback, Kathleen Kelly finished a feed from Murphy, Kucinski scored twice and Paige DeSisto rifled home a shot at the end of a long upfield run to give Cohasset an 8-4 lead.

When DeSisto scored again to open the second half, it appeared Cohasset would cruise through the rest of the afternoon. But Norwell would have none of it.

The home team scored three straight goals - two on penalty shots - and after a dash-and-score goal by Farren, the home team added three more goals to tie the score. Whelan's second of the day gave Cohasset an 11-10 lead, but it would be short-lived, as two quick Norwell scores put the home team on top for the first time all day.

Upset at squandering the lead, the Cohasset team refocused, grabbed the ensuing draw and Whitney Jaffe drew - and then netted - a penalty shot. Whelan did the same on the team's next possession, and Jaffe's wrap-around goal with 20 seconds left sealed the deal in the 14-12 seesaw battle.

Ellie Tedeschi made six saves in the net, most of them in the first half but none of them easy. Kucinski's third goal of the day was the 80th of her youth career. She is just the third player in the history of the girls youth program to score that many times.

The coaches and several players then raced down to Duxbury, where the U15 Blue team squared off against Duxbury 7.

U15 Blue

Unlike the Norwell contest, this game was never in doubt. Whitney Jaffe opened the scoring with two carbon-copy goals, driving each time to her left, then crossing back to her right and getting her shot off on the run. Anna Michalowski netted a free-position shot, and Kelsey Erler sandwiched two goals around Jaffe's third of the game to make it a 6-1 lead. A late Duxbury score made it 6-2 at the half.

Cohasset dominated the early going of the second half. Erler netted a feed from Alison Whelan and then one from Jaffe. Jaffe then scored her fourth of the game and assisted on Michalowski's second. The two goals in the game pushed Michalowski past the 40-point mark during her youth career, good for 10th place on the all-time points list, one spot behind her teammate, Lindsay MacNaught. Caroline Fein finished the scoring for Cohasset, and while Duxbury scored three late goals, the contest was never in doubt, ending with an 11-5 victory for the Blue team.

Sarah Evans made three saves in the Cohasset net. Emily Toomey led a defense, which along with Taylor Kennedy, Lauren Hayes, Eloise Lucas and Charlotte O'Callaghan played particularly well in starting the transition game and moving the ball to the Blue team's powerful attack.

U13 White

The 13-and-Under teams played the earliest Mother's Day games on the turf in Scituate, and came away on the right side of the score.

The Cohasset White team started slowly for the third game in a row, but came back strong. After Scituate jumped out to a 2-0 lead, Lexa Grasz put Cohasset on the board, only to see Scituate extend its lead to 4-1. A Mariel Teague goal - off a feed from Hope Kissick - made it 4-2 as the game went to the half.

The Cohasset players upheld a Mother's Day tradition of giving flowers to their moms during the break, and came back energized.

As the White team started to win the ground-ball battle, the tempo of the game changed. Mackenzie Axelson, Emily Robbins and Kylie Coffman all scooped up several loose balls and got the transition game going. The defense turned up the intensity as well. Molly Fitzgerald and Coffman stopped good Scituate scoring chances with aggressive play. Goalie Maddie Curley made seven saves in another strong effort in the cage.

Kissick scored a hat trick in the second half and picked up another assist to finish with five points. Kristen Alexander came off the bench in the second half and added a goal and an assist. Teague rounded out her three-point day with another goal and an assist. In the end, Cohasset had just enough for a come-from-behind 7-6 win that raised its record to 3-2 on the season.

U13 Blue

The 13-U Blue team also got off to a slow start, possibly from the hangover of serving their mothers breakfast in bed. While Cohasset was dusting off the cobwebs, an energetic Scituate Blue squad scored three goals. Mariel Teague brought the team to life connecting on a perfect pass to Abby Carrier who was open in front of the net and fired in the first goal for Cohasset.

By the time the half arrived - Cohasset players again took roses out to their Moms at half-time (perhaps to make up for not having served breakfast in bed) - Scituate held a 4-1 lead.

The second half brought Cohasset to life, with improved passing and defense. Teague converted a slick pass from Victoria Bryan to start the scoring. Then Isabella Flibotte netted a great feed from Kate Bodner. Scituate had a few quick shots on goal blocked by new goalie, Olivia Blackburn, who made great good stops to help Cohasset gain steam.

Cohasset moved the ball efficiently down the field where Katie McKenna set up behind the net, wrapped around the goal, and sunk a great shot into the corner of the net to tie the game. Scituate bounced back with two goals, but Cohasset came back again on goals from Teague and Bodner. Cohasset had several opportunities to take the lead, but Scituate's goalie turned away three shots down the home stretch and Scituate was able to score two late goals to squeak out an 8-6 win.

U11 White

The 11-and-Under teams played on the turf in Scituate, with both squads scoring five goals and making them stand up for a victory.

The White team came away with a dominating 5-1 win in a total team effort that saw solid contributions from virtually every player.

Annie McElgunn and Charlotte Allard led the offense. McElgunn scored a hat trick, while Allard scored twice. Lily McCarthy, Corey Golden, Lanie Schwartz, Holly Maher, Hanna Cooper, Caroline Farren, Valerie Farren, Caroline Prescott, Madeleine Tesauro, Alison Bodner, and Regan O'Donnell all provided solid play. McCarthy picked up six ground balls and added an assist.

The defense was stout throughout the day, led by the strong play of Dagmar Sepala, Meredith Corry and Samatha Mushin. Colleen McGowan, in her first game as goalie, stood tall in the net to keep Scituate from mounting any comeback.

U11 Blue

The Blue team got off to a rocky start, falling behind 2-0 just minutes into the game. From there, however, the game turned around and it was all Cohasset.

Dagmar Seppala scored three goals, Elizabeth Baker and Morgan Montgomery added solo markers and Callahan O'Neill's all-around hustle and finesse helped to set up several scoring plays as the Blue team went on to win 5-2.

Alexandra Leahy showed great speed and stopped one Scituate possession with a key interception. Meghan Fitzgerald and Christine Guinee showed tremendous team effort, especially in the second half in getting the ball out of the defensive end. Alexandra Raymond turned in a particularly good defensive effort, in helping Cohasset keep the home team at bay.

Boys

Once again, the U15 Blue squad demonstrated its superior lacrosse skills and easily knocked off Marshfield by a score of 14-4 last Sunday at Marshfield. With only one substitute on its bench, Cohasset used a combination of face-off domination, solid defense and goaltending, smooth transition, and dazzling offensive movement to maintain control of the entire game. Effective use of time outs and movement between positions gave its run-and-gun midfielders a break, leading to a 6-2-halftime lead. Although Marshfield's bench was deeper, Cohasset did not show fatigue and cruised in the second half posting eight more goals to Marshfield's two. With possession granted to the team down by five goals, Cohasset didn't even face-off in the second half.

Charlie Coffman, Alec Hurd, Gus Helbock and Chase Murphy controlled the ball on the attack end of the field and gave Cohasset multiple looks. Coffman and Hurd each posted a goal, while Murphy scored twice and added two assists.

Morgan Grasz, Kyle Livingstone and Alex Kinnealey played mostly at midfield and picked apart Marshfield's defensive unit. Grasz (five goals, one assist) and Kinnealey (four goals, five assist) provided the bulk of the scoring. A team effort results in the final goal.

Jake Kissick, Jack Nelson and Derek Froio held down the defensive end of the field for their goalie Willy Brown, who saved just about everything. Kissick even recorded an assist on a full field clear.

COHASSET YOUTH LACROSSE

FROM YOUTH LACROSSE, PAGE 17

The Cohasset U15 White team pulled off one of its most stunning victories of the season last week when it beat an extremely talented Duxbury team at Milliken Field. With the Ministers of Defense (Sam Leahy, Geoff Swain and Dean McNary) as the anchors of what can only be described as one of the toughest backlines to penetrate in the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League (MBYLL) and the red-hot goal-tending of Brennan Bukowski the talented Duxbury squad was held to just four goals while the hometown boys scored nine to best their rivals from down the coast. The game was much closer than the score reflects, as the teams battled up and down the field with both having numerous shots on goal.

Pete McKenna turned in a breakout day at midfield. The hustling middie picked up a number of key ground balls and streaked out of the pack to spark several fast break goals. McKenna's two-way hustle was all the more impressive given the team was without several of its players and was working with just two midfield lines.

The trio of Thomas Flibotte (four goals), Charlie Neaves (three goals), and Mitch McNary (two goals) provided all of the offense, but it was a collective team effort that won the day. Sam Richardson (one assist) on a beautiful give and go, Danny Czerkawski (one assist) and several other players provided key assists, while Johnny McGoldrick was again Mr. Clutch on face-offs winning upwards of 70% of his draws. Also, from the midfield, Jack Carrier provided outstanding hustle until his back gave out and he had to watch from the sidelines during the second half. Graydon Foley and James McKelvey were instrumental in keeping the attack moving and their strong rides contributed to several turnovers of Duxbury clears.

U15 Black

The Cohasset U15 "Black Plague" used both resistant defense and an opportunistic attack to defeat the Abington Green Giants, 5-4. The final score belies a gutsy, hang tough performance by a team that was outweighed by several pounds at every position, and outscored until the final minute.

Although the horizon loomed dark and foreboding, down 4-1 late in the third period, the boys in blue found inspiration in the aggressive goal tending of Brendan Horrigan. Stopping all but four shots over three periods, Horrigan also steam-rolled his way the full length of the field unleashing a canon shot just high of the far side top corner. Eric Wasel took over in net during the fourth quarter. Wasel weathered a furious fusillade and posted a scoreless final 10 minutes keeping Cohasset in the game. Luke Ernst added to his first quarter tally with a second goal early in the fourth and the final game-winning goal with a minute left in the contest. Chris Lunde and Horrigan each netted second half goals bringing Cohasset within striking distance for the last minute win.

Long-pole defenders Coleman Hernon, Matt Swanborg, Scott Wilson and Patrick Dunn aggressively disarmed repeated Abington assaults. Midfielders, "Bub" Hill, Andrew Whitney, Adrian Dunne and Chris Wilson played strong two-way lax, systemically disabling the opposing offense with smothering back checking, and infiltrating the defense with sharp cuts and quick shots. In addition to strong offensive play, Alex Evans also toppled one unfortunate barging opponent with an NHL highlight hip check, and Mark Dick enforced order end to end, start to finish. Abington established control early, but the Cohasset team showed poise and perseverance coming back in dramatic fashion from a 4-1 deficit.

U13 Blue

Sunday the Cohasset U13 Blue team lost at Marshfield, 7-3. Marshfield dominated the early play scoring within the first 30 seconds of the game, but Cohasset found strength and began to compete with a physically powerful Marshfield midfield. The first quarter ended with Marshfield up 2-1, with Will Golden scoring on a nice feed from Andrew Fontaine. Marshfield resumed its attack in the second quarter scoring three times, with Cohasset only adding one as Ryan McGovern scored on a feed from Tommy Powers. Marshfield ended the half up 5-2.

The second half began with Cohasset continuing to battle hard and drawing within two when Chris Sylvia scored with an assist to Henry Brown. Sylvia's goal was started by a fine fast break led by Tommy O'Brien. Marshfield responded though by netting its sixth of the game, ending the third up 6-3. Marshfield controlled much of the fourth quarter, although the Cohasset boys continued to battle hard.

Next up for the squad is a home game against Hanover this Sunday.

U13 White

The Boys U13 White team hosted perennial regional powerhouse Duxbury last weekend. As expected the two teams went back and forth, but in the end the visitors edged out the home team by two in the waning moments.

The Skippers struck first with two unanswered goals on strong face-off work from Nick Tangherlini, Jimmy Maher, Neil Durham and Zach Coggins. John Leahy, John Mills, Alex Kent and Axel Seppala also played a key role in the goals. Evan Yeager stretched his lax legs with a fantastic first half of goaltending keeping the game close and preserving the lead throughout the first two quarters. Strong defensive efforts by Chandler Skolnik, Mark Brown, Jack O'Brien and Derek Benson limited Duxbury to only one tally in the first half.

Skolnik "cowboy'd up" in the second half by stepping in between the pipes. He received continued strong defensive coverage from Connor Green and Brendan Queenan. The pair also saw some action at midfield. As usually happens with close games, this one came down to the final quarter and Duxbury came back on some great possession play of its own and took the lead with multiple goals in the fourth quarter.

U13 Black

The complete membership of U13 Black assembled in Abington to face a large and well-coached team last weekend. In the end the two teams played to a 3-3 tie.

Cohasset took the lead with a crisp goal by Max Montgomery. On the other side of the field, goalie Jim Lydon made six saves and allowed no goals in the first quarter.

The second quarter began with an assist by Charlie Steele to Colin Whelan. The middie crew of Hunter Forrer, Anthony Nahill and Devin Kennedy controlled the center field with several key checks and ground ball recoveries. Cohasset's strong defensive unit was tested, but Teddy Patsos hammered the opponent with sharp checking all day, Jack Stangenelli made the smart and fast plays, Jack McElgunn overpowered the attack, winning several ground balls and Hamish Redfield ran down his opponent in key open field play. Midfielder Drew Nahill used terrific dodges to blaze a trail through the opposition. Joe Silvia ran hard and threw a blistering shot on cage. Foster Eymer ran like the wind and contributed to the offense and defense of the midfeild.

With a lead of two goals, Cohasset began the second half with the forceful middies of Matt MacCormick, Will Lucas and Jack Leffel controlling the field by running over the opposition. An unassisted goal by Colin Whalen gave Cohasset a three-point lead. A new goalie, Jack Conte, made key saves before being wounded by a full speed shot, which he blocked with his knee. Jim Lydon returned to the goal and Conte rebounded as a midfielder and produced two shots on cage.

In the fourth quarter, Abington found its game and produced three goals to tie the game. Cohasset; however, never lost momentum. Charlie Steele fed Jack Leffel for a strong shot on cage, Hunter Forrer made a shot after scooping a ground ball, and McElgunn, Stanganelli and Patsos kept up their relentless checking. Time expired before either team could find the back of the net again.

The victory in this game came as the Cohasset coach asked the players, "Who wants to play a tie breaker?" Every player jumped up and hollerd, "Yes," but unfortunately the playing field was committed to another pair of teams.

RECREATION DEPARTMENT

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a variety of sports programs during the summer of 2007, designed specifically and individually for boys and girls, ages 4 through 18. All programs have individual applications, should you wish to register for any of these programs, call the Recreation Dept. office at 781-383-4109, or stop by the office on the first floor of Town Hall. Programs are limited in size. To insure acceptance into a program, register as soon as possible. Family discounts are available for some programs. Sports programs are scheduled to meet regardless of weather conditions in most cases and should it be necessary to move into the High School, you will be notified at drop-off time for the status that day.

Teen Center Dance – A dance will be held for Cohasset youth in grades 6 to 8 only, Friday, May 18, from 7 to 10 p.m., at the Cohasset Teen Center. The cost is $5 per person and student identification is required to sign in for the dance. It is important to be sure you are able to gain admittance to the dance before your ride leaves. Once the Teen Center gets to full capacity no further admittance will be allowed. There will be no one admitted after 8:30 p.m. for the dance. Snacks and refreshments will be for sale. This is not a school function.

Boot Camp – Boot Camp fitness training classes will be instructed by Betsy Callanan. This unique physical training opportunity will meet from 6 to 7 a.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays, starting Tuesday, June 12, for 10 weeks through Thursday, Aug. 16, on Cohasset Common in front of Town Hall. The fee for the 20 class sessions is $100, and checks can be made payable to the Town of Cohasset. Ms. Callanan will run an interval calisthenic and running fitness program for both men and women for all levels of ability. While running and/or walking remains an essential aspect of this cardiovascular training format, inclusive will be various integrated calisthenics such as jump roping, stairs or hills, squat thrusts, lunges, push-ups, skipping/running knees, sit ups, etc. Ms. Callanan has designed this program to improve cardio-vascular endurance and strength. Dress in layers as weather conditions dictate, bring a water bottle and jump rope to class and wear running shoes. Success in this class is based upon your individual personal best, not as competition with others.

Dance with Caroline – A dance workshop will be held for youth ages 7 and older from 3 to 4:30 p.m., Monday, June 18 through Thursday, June 21, in the Town Hall auditorium. The class, directed by Caroline Carr, will include basic jazz and hip hop dance techniques. Emphasis will be placed on developing a healthy, active lifestyle, building strength, flexibility, and endurance, as well as feeling good and having fun. Participants are encouraged to dress in comfortable clothing and take a bottle of water, a snack and an open mind to class. The fee is $80 per participant. Registration forms are available in the foyer of the Town Hall or by calling the Recreation Department.

Youth Tennis – Youth tennis will begin Monday, June 25, and continue for seven weeks, through Friday, Aug. 10. Registration will be held from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 3 p.m., Monday June 11 through Wednesday, June 13 and an evening registration will be held from 5 to 7 p.m., Tuesday, June 12. The program is offered for children ages 7 through 18 years. Participants can choose from two schedules, Mondays and Wednesdays or Tuesdays and Thursdays. The fee for the seven-week session is $80 per person. Lessons for beginners, intermediate, and advanced players are offered. Rain day policy: If it rains before 9 am, all tennis classes may have to be canceled for that day. Call the Recreation Office at 781-383-4109 for weather status reports. Fridays are rain make-up days.

South Shore Baseball Club – Held Monday, June 25 through Friday, June 29, at Milliken Field. Ages 7 to 12 will meet from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Fee: $185. Ages 5 to 7 will meet from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Fee: $125. Directed by Frank Niles of the South Shore Baseball Club.

South Shore & Cape Basketball Academy –Held Tuesday, July 10 through Friday, July 13, in the Cohasset High School gym. Boys and girls in grades 7 to12, meet from 9 a.m. to noon. Fee: $125. Directed by Dorian Bryant, CHS Varsity Basketball Coach.

South Shore Basketball School – For ages 8 to15, this program meets in the Cohasset High School gym from Monday, July 16 through Friday, July 20. Youths ages 8 to 11 will meet from 8:30 to11:30 a.m. and youth ages 12 to15 will meet from 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. Fee: $125. Directed by Ron Ford, Cohasset Athletic Director.

Boys and Girls Lacrosse Clinic – For youth in grades 3 to 6, this clinic will be held Monday, July 23 to Friday, July 27, from 8 to 10 a.m., at Milliken Field. Fee: $85. Directed by Jamie and Ronan Buick.

Soccer Squirts South Shore Soccer Camp – This camp for ages 4 to 6 will take place from 8 to 9:30 a.m., Monday, July 30 through Friday, Aug. 3, at Milliken Field. The fee of $95 includes ball and camp shirt. Directed by SSSC member, Jon Anderson, Babson College coach.

DESTINATIONS

Seeing Sedona

A revitalizing trip to Arizona's Red Rock Country

By Chris Bergeron
DAILY NEWS STAFF

SEDONA, Ariz. - On first seeing the red rock buttes of Sedona rising from the desert, I finally felt New England's winter blahs melting from my bones.

An afternoon sun warmed our rental car. Scraggly cottonwoods lined Rte. 17. Johnny Cash sang about lowdown gamblers. The desert stretched for miles beneath clear blue skies.

Like the Anglo settlers who first arrived in 1876, my wife and I were drawn to Sedona by the prospect of open spaces and new things to do.

We only had six days to recharge our depleted emotional batteries. And in early December, we both needed a relaxing interlude from holiday season stress and the impending winter.

Sedona fulfilled virtually every expectation.

We hiked through quiet canyons and beside crystaline rivers. We visited remote ancient Native American ruins and cave dwellings where the walls were covered by intriguing pictographs. We climbed a mesa claimed as the site of a "power vortex" by New Agers and watched the setting sun bathe the vast plains a brilliant orange.

And when my wife tired of my company, she shopped for Native American art, handcrafted jewelry and the usual tourist baubles.

Vast yet manageable, Sedona and its environs combine the natural wonders and cultural charms of the Southwest in a series of affordable, manageable day trips.

Just a scenic two-hour drive from Phoenix, Sedona is located in the Verde Valley of north central Arizona in what locals call Red Rock Country.

The town of 11,000 is situated around the convergence of a Y-shaped intersection where routes 89A and 179 meet not far from Old Marketplace Plaza.

Visitors don't come for the two downtowns but what is around them. A stretch called Uptown Sedona is a little artsy, a little kitschy and on the verge of overcooking the town's laid-back charm. The much larger West Sedona is a sprawling strip of budget motels, gift shops, generic restaurants and gas stations that provide the essentials but little reason for hanging out.

For visitors with time on their hands, Sedona is centrally located for excursions to the Painted Desert, Monument Valley, the Petrified Forest and Grand Canyon about three hours away.

While I'm leery of "must see" lists, I made a flexible one to suit our limited time, and am glad for it.

On your first day, head to Airport Overlook off Highway 89A about an hour before sunset. From a cliff top along Airport Road, you'll be treated to breathtaking vistas that stretch across miles of desert, scrub brush and landmark formations like Capital Butte, Coffee Pot Rock and Bear Mountain.

It is a panoramic sight where photographers, artists, New Age meditators and Navaho women selling crafts from blankets share a curious community.

Depending when you arrive, the singular Chapel of the Holy Cross is a perfect start to see Sedona as a place where natural beauty inspires spirituality.

Built into the side of Twin Butte, the chapel features a remarkable glass-and-crucifix facade rising from red rock that seems at once contemporary and ancient.

PHOTOS BY CHRIS BERGERON/METROWEST DAILY NEWS STAFF

The Chapel of the Holy Cross in Sedona, Ariz., is a Catholic church built into the rocks. It was completed in 1957 and designed by Marguerite B. Staude.

Designed by Marguerite Brunswig Staude and completed in 1957, it is a functioning Catholic church open to all denominations. The sacristy features a wrought iron crucifix and Madonna of elegant simplicity. Sitting in wooden pews, visitors face the altar and look out through a tall rectangular window that incorporates the cross that forms the chapel's exterior wall.

My wife said the chapel reminded her of mountain caves in her native China where Taoist monks spent years meditating to empty their minds of human frailty.

Just two years before, we had visited the Vatican in Italy, and I later wondered how two such different places both touched me as sacred spaces of undeniable power.

Even if you are visiting for just a few days, one of your first errands should be to buy a Red Rock Pass sold at many hotels or the U.S. Forest Service Center.

The pass lets you park at trail heads and gets everyone in your car into national forests and designated Native American sites. They cost $5 for one day or $15 for a week. While they don't cover the two state parks in the area, they make economic sense for most visitors.

We spent much of one very enjoyable day visiting the remains of two Native American cliff dwellings and rock art sites that stirred echoes of vanished people who lived there as long as 12,000 years ago.

Located about 10 miles outside Sedona in the vast natural amphitheater of Boynton Canyon, the Palatki Red Cliffs Heritage Site provides a wondrous window into the daily lives and mysterious religious activities of people called Sinagua, or "without water," and later Yavapai and Apache who settled there.

Many visitors arrive on guided Pink Jeep Tours, the best-known local company that uses its namesake four-wheel drive vehicles to explore rugged back country. Preferring to go on our own, we drove the packed dirt and rocky trail in our mid-size rental car Á an adventure packed with anxious moments. It took us at least an hour to drive 12 miles, and I worried about blowing out a tire or busting an axle.

Jouncing along, I felt like some tenderfoot in "Wagon Train" wondering if we would get stranded miles from help.

But after arriving, we spent several glorious hours exploring the nine-room 2-story brick dwellings built into a soaring cliff where archaeologists believe the Sinagua people lived starting around 1125 A.D. A well-informed ranger explained why the first inhabitants likely chose the site, how they used the structure and even pointed out a thumbprint 10 centuries old that one of the builders left in a mud brick.

Just a half-mile hike away, another ranger showed us a natural "alcove" sculpted from a cliff that contains some of the area's oldest rock markings dating back 12,000 years. Blackened in some areas by centuries of fires, the walls are covered with scores of pictographs made from mineral pigments and dyes from plants and petroglyphs that were scratched or dug into the surface.

They represent clan symbols, hunting totems, prayers for rain and crops and possibly the first instance of the mysterious humpbacked flute player popularly known as Kokopelli.

There are scores of hiking and biking trails rated from "easy" to "strenuous" within a short drive of Sedona.

While shops selling everything from trinkets and T-shirts to Native American kachina dolls have sprouted like mushrooms, the picturesque Tlaquepaque Arts and Crafts Village offers the most concentrated selection of affordable to high-end galleries.

More than 40 stores and restaurants are clustered in a self-contained district designed to resemble a Mexican village with a cobblestone plaza and fountain, twisting alleys and a chapel and bell tower.

OBITUARIES

Barbara E. Collins, Homemaker, social worker, librarian

Barbara Elinor Collins, 72, of Long Beach Island and Barnegat, N.J., died May 8, 2007.

Born in Somerville, she was the daughter of Leo and Bernice Jennings. She graduated from Cambridge High and Latin High School and earned her bachelor's degree from Harvard University in Cambridge. Mrs. Collins was a part time resident of Long Beach Island for 20 years and former resident of Cambridge, Tonawanda and Somers, N.Y.; Antwerp, Belgium; South Barrington, Ill; and Houston, Texas. She was a homemaker, social worker and librarian and will be remembered for her family devotion, volunteerism and her love of art, music and literature.

She leaves her husband of 50 years, John Joseph Collins; her son, John Joseph Collins, of Cohasset; her daughters, Joanne Collins Downey of Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y., Amy Collins Fierro of Closter, N.J., and Eileen Collins Kauffman of Riverdale, N.Y.; their spouses and eight grandchildren.

Arrangements were handled by Clark Associates Funeral Home in Katonah, N.Y. Entombment will follow at Ferncliff Mausoleum in Hartsdale, N.Y.

Helen King Andrews, World War II nurse's aide

Helen King Andrews, 86, of West Hartford, Conn., died May 8, 2007, at Sunrise Assisted Living in Cohasset.

Mrs. Andrews was born in Hartford, Conn., the daughter of the late George Walter and Helen (Curtiss) King. She graduated from Oxford School and attended Pine Manor College. She volunteered as a nurse's aide during World War II.

Mrs. Andrews was a member of the Jr. League of Hartford, Seed & Weed Garden Club, Hartford Golf Club, Asylum Hill Church and Hartford Tennis Club.

Wife of the late Frederick Leete Andrews, she leaves three daughters, Betsey Unger of Denver, Susan O'Brien of Cohasset and Nancy Dyer of Natick; three sons-in-law, Robert Unger, Emmett O'Brien and Michael Dyer; nine grandchildren, Todd Unger, Matthew Unger, Elizabeth Unger, Scott Unger, Douglas O'Brien, Taylor O'Brien, Stacia McMillan, Timothy Dyer and Brett Dyer; and two great grandchildren, Sean McMillan and Madilyn McMillan.

Funeral services will be held at Taylor & Modeen Funeral Home, 136 South Main St., West Hartford, at 10:30 a.m., Saturday, May 12. Calling hours will be one hour prior, from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., at the funeral home. Interment will be in Fairview Cemetery, West Hartford, immediately following the service.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to Alzheimer's Association, 279 New Britain Ave., Kensington, CT 06037.

Peter R. Souther, Automotive mechanic

Peter R. Souther, 61, a lifetime Cohasset resident, died May 11, 2007, at his home.

Born in Weymouth, Mr. Souther was raised in Cohasset and attended Cohasset High School.

For more than 30 years, he worked as an automotive mechanic serving the South Shore at Bill Poland's Jenny Gas Station in Cohasset and at Wilder Brothers Tire and Car Care Center in North Scituate.

Mr. Souther loved fishing and lobstering. He was a Weight Master at Minot Light's Tuna Club.

He leaves his wife, Pamela H. (Rice) Souther; his daughter, Sharon Silvia of Scituate; his brother, Kenneth E. Souther Jr. of Scituate; and his grandchildren, Shannon A. and Shelby N. Silvia of Scituate. He was the brother of the late William O. Souther.

A graveside service was held at Woodside Cemetery. McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home handled arrangements.

Memorial donations may be made to Golden Living Center Activities Fund, Route 3A, CJC Hwy., Cohasset, MA 02025.

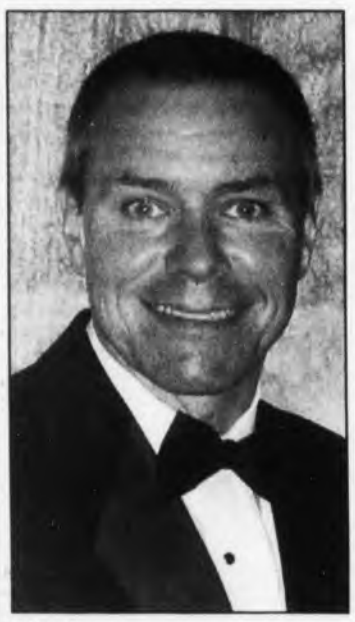
Lyons shares his love of music

Former cop now leads Blue Moon Orchestra



By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Mike Lyons achieved a childhood career goal when he became a police officer in his hometown of Lincoln, R.I. Now retired from the force, Lyons is pursuing another of his longtime career aspirations as a big band leader with the Blue Moon Orchestra, which comes to Norwell's Company Theatre on Sunday.

"My dad loved swing music and he had so many 78s of Frank Sinatra, Harry James, Duke Ellington and Count Basie that I fell in love with it, too. When I was a boy, it was a dream of mine to one day play this kind of music," explained Lyons by telephone last week. "I played trumpet in high school, but growing up in the 1960s I wasn't only listening to my Dad's records, I was also into The Rolling Stones and Led Zeppelin."

"We have note-for-note transcription of the arrangements Quincy Jones did for the Count Basie Orchestra so we really achieve an authentic sound."

— Mike Lyons, big band leader with the Blue Moon Orchestra

Mike Lyons

Lyons also had an interest in law enforcement. He joined the Lincoln Police Department, where a 1993 critical incident led him to take early retirement and changed his life forever.

"In 1993, I responded to a call and was attacked by a club-wielding suspect. The assailant was swinging the club at me and I was blocking headshots. Finally, I had to shoot him to stop the attack and he died," recalls Lyons. "Training prepares you to be a police officer, but nothing can really prepare you for what happened to me. To this day, it is still a very emotional experience for me to even think about."

In addition to the emotional scarring, Lyons also still suffers from nerve damage incurred in his hands during the incident.

The Blue Moon Orchestra

As part of his recovery, Lyons returned to music. In 1997, he attended Berklee College of Music, studying privately with several of the school's faculty members. In the years that followed, Lyons played trumpet and sang with several big bands.

"By March 2004, after years as a singer and trumpeter with big bands, I founded the 17-member Blue Moon Orchestra for which I'm bandleader and male vocalist. We have note-for-note transcription of the arrangements Quincy Jones did for the Count Basie Orchestra so we really achieve an authentic sound."

Lyons knows a thing or two about sound. He also works as a recording engineer when he is not on the Blue Moon bandstand playing to audiences of all ages.

"People, even kids, really dig this music. Even high school students, who are exposed to every imaginable genre, find this music hard to ignore thanks to shows like 'Dancing with the Stars.' It's always a special night, too, when people at our shows dance along."

While Lyons stays busy with Blue Moon gigs and serving as co-director of the jazz band at Lincoln Middle School, his first career remains on his mind, too.

"I miss policing. Once you're a cop, you're always a cop, but I also love what I'm doing now."

Mike Lyons and his Blue Moon Orchestra will perform at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park, Norwell, on May 20 at 2 p.m. For tickets and information, call 781-871-2787 or visit companytheatre.com.

Movie review

Georgia (Jane Fonda) steps back to let her wild granddaughter Rachel (Lindsay Lohan) do some venting.

You won't be Fonda 'Georgia'

"Georgia Rule" (C-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

In the mood for a comedy about incest?

In "Georgia Rule," Lindsay Lohan, who was publicly spanked for misbehaving on the set of this film, is Rachel Wilcox, a 17-year-old spoiled sex siren. Who'd a thunk? .

Rachel is caught between the summer after high school and her first semester at Vassar. Because she has been behaving scandalously at home, Rachel's — villain alert! — Ferrari-driving, San Francisco attorney stepfather, Arnold (Cary Elwes), and her alcoholic mother, Lilly (Felicity Huffman), banish her to sleepy, small-town Hull, Idaho, and the modest home of her supposedly dragon-lady grandmother, Georgia (Jane Fonda).

Rachel almost literally blows into town, seducing a big piece of fundamentalist man-candy named Harlan (Garret Hedlund).

"Are you one of those back-country sodomy boys?" Rachel buoyantly asks when they meet.

Are you laughing yet?

Rachel also tries to get a rise out of Simon (Dermot Mulroney), a sage, 40ish veterinarian who also practices, with a wink and a nod, on the townfolk. In one of the film's few laugh lines, Simon accuses Rachel of being the Antichrist.

The plot really heats up when Rachel, who has a reputation for lying, tells Mom her step dad molested her when she was 12.

Directed by veteran Garry Marshall ("Pretty Woman," "The Princess Dairies") and scripted by Mark Andrus ("Divine Secrets of the Ya-Ya Sisterhood," "As Good As It Gets"), "Georgia Rule" is an almost complete washout that is going to get eaten alive at the box office by spiders and zombies.

This is probably all for the good since there are almost no sympathetic characters in the film. Rachel, whose wardrobe might have been acquired at Tramps-R-Us, is a horror, and Lohan lets her heaving breasts and flashing thighs do all the work.

Her mother, Lilly, is a delusional fool, and Huffman, whose performance in "Transamerica" was a wonder, can't do a thing with the role or the egregious wig she must wear for half the film. For her part, Fonda's Georgia says the word "poop" within seconds of her first appearance and conjures up some species of the Katharine Hepburn role in "On Golden Pond." All that's missing is that trademark wavering voice.

Compared to this, "Monster-In-Law" was Noel Coward. In one badly edited scene, a tipsy Lilly wrestles a local boy for command of a lawn mower and somehow ends up topless. Hee-haw.

"Everybody's savable," Georgia assures her daughter in their prefab, big confrontation. Maybe, but not every movie.

Rated R. "Georgia Rule" contains sexually suggestive scenes and profanity.

Greenbush is back on track

Peter Tolman of Cohasset takes a photograph of the commuter train as it crosses Sohier Street on Saturday. Tolman said his wife used to take the train from Cohasset to go to Derby Academy in Hingham. The old Greenbush line was abandoned in 1959.

Maiden voyage rolls through town Saturday

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Crowds gathered in the misty rain last Saturday morning to wave hello to the first train passing through Cohasset in 48 years. Some older residents were welcoming the train back after a long hiatus, while young locals were seeing a train on the streets of their hometown for the very first time. The train horns, blown primarily as a safety measure, seemed to answer back a buoyant hello as the locomotive made its way through Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate.

"It was an amazing sight and a very big train," said Selectmen Ted Carr, who stood next to former Fire Chief Roger Lincoln and watched the train go by. Carr noted how he and Lincoln had entirely different perspectives on the train, as Lincoln lived in Cohasset when Old Colony Line was abandoned in 1959.

Saturday's test train chugged along the 28-mile track from Boston's South Station into Scituate at a slowly but surely pace of 10 mph. It stopped at stations in East Weymouth and at the end of the line in Scituate. Project managers and engineers on board quickly made short observations and measurements before the train got underway again. Test trains will continue to run throughout the summer, eventually reaching normal speeds of 60 to 70 mph as testing continues.

Louis Eaton of Beach Street commuted on the train to Boston from 1946 to 1959 until it was shut down with the completion of the Southeast Expressway and couldn't be happier the train is coming back to town.

"I'm looking forward to riding on it again," said Eaton, pointing out he felt many of the adversaries to the train were not residents when the train was in service during the 1950s, "I think it will be surprising to see how many people do take the train."

Eaton laments the fact opponents in Hingham delayed "the inevitable" with legal suits. The Town of Hingham, concerned about its historic districts and the train's impact on Hingham Square, fought Greenbush restoration for years.

Total estimates for the cost of the Greenbush project are upwards of $500 million. The Greenbush line is the third leg of the restoration of the Old Colony Railroad, which included lines to Plymouth and Middleboro. Both those phases were completed in 1997. Ten years later, the Greenbush line is poised to begin regular commuter service in the early fall.

'Adopt-a-street' gaining momentum

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cleaner streets could soon be coming to Cohasset. The Town is in the final stages of developing an "Adopt-a-Street" program that would involve residents and local community groups in an effort to rid the town's byways of litter.

Jim French, a Jerusalem Road resident, came before the Selectmen in February to propose a clean-up program to resolve what he saw as a growing problem in the town. With the support of the Selectmen, Town Manager Bill Griffin has worked with French in the last few weeks to draft the program guidelines. Health inspector Tara Tradd was recruited to help identify "hot spots" for litter in town and serve as program coordinator.

Tradd said she regularly fields calls regarding litter in town and knows there is a need for this type of community effort.

"[Participants] will own it for themselves and be able to feel good about the service they're doing in the community," said Tradd.

"This is overdue in certain areas and there are hot spots that continue to be a problem," said French, who will work with Tradd to identify and pair groups up with a problem area.

"People respect what they think is clean and over a period of a few years, it will get easier," said French. He also hopes the program will get young people and residents to respect the environment and be more "green."

The program will be a partnership between the town and volunteers. Civic organizations, social clubs, neighbor-

School security

Teachers' union bargains for camera language

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Video surveillance is an integral part of the security measures taken by Cohasset's schools to keep the students and staff safe. Cameras are found in all three schools and are positioned outside and within the school's walls. The presence of cameras within the halls and classrooms of the school seems to be a cause for concern for the Cohasset Teachers' Association. The union is currently in negotiations with the School Committee to reach a memorandum of understanding.

"Whenever there's a change in working conditions, there is bargaining," said Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh in a recent phone interview.

The cameras were installed as one of the last acts of the School Building Committee in 2006. The latest of the enhancements, a $65,000 security system was installed at the Osgood School last summer. Special Town Meeting allocated the funds for the purchase after the installation. According to the town's director of finance, Mike Buckley, a total of $261,222.83 has been spent on the school security system since June 2006, the majority of the funds ($192,005) coming from the School Building Committee budget. School operating budget ($56,267.83) and a school grant ($12,950) covered the remaining costs.

An agenda item, "Memorandum of Understanding re: surveillance cameras," has been on the School Committee meeting agenda the last two meetings (April 25 and May 16). On April 25, the agenda item was postponed with no discussion from the Chief acknowledges outstanding service

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The town police force goes to great lengths to keep the streets and residents of Cohasset safe — and all too often their valiant efforts go unrecognized. Chief James Hussey is out to change that. On Monday evening, he presented awards to four officers who he felt deserved to be credited for their performance in specific incidents during the past year.

"We're always looking to recognize people who go above and beyond," said Chief Hussey. The four officers, Sergeant Detective Gregory Lennon, Detective Garrett Hunt, Officer Edward Bagley and Officer John Small, were on hand to receive the commendations. Chief Hussey described the reasons and background of why the officers were chosen for the award.

Lennon and Hunt were able to bring the resolution to a town on edge following the receipt of three threatening notes on the Middle-High School in the fall of 2005. Their investigations ended with full, written confessions from the youths involved.

Detectives Lennon and Hunt responded to each of the three incidents and launched an investigation. They received a tip from a resident regarding a youth riding a bike well beyond dark. They pursued the tip, spoke with the youth's father and gained his trust and cooperation. An interview with the juvenile resulted in a full confession to two of the threat incidents.

The detectives determined that the third incident involved another suspect. The detectives contacted the FBI's Behavioral Analysis Unit and a document examiner to provide further insight into the case. However, no new leads developed until July 2006.

Detective Hunt was investigating an unrelated incident of destruction of property at the swim center. Hunt recognized that the suspect in this incident appeared to have very similar handwriting to the third, unsolved threatening note.

Hunt acted on his instincts and talked with the youth's parents. Based on the interview, the detectives were able to get another full, written confession from the juvenile outlining his responsibility.

"The solving of these three crimes brought a sense of relief to our schools and community," said Chief Hussey, "children, parents and school employee were able to get back to the business of education without the lurking fear of violence on their minds."

Lennon and Hunt were each honored with the Meritorious Service Award by the Chief. The detectives recently received the Robert F. Dana Distinguished Service Award for Law Enforcement on Law Day at Quincy District Court.

Excellence Award

The Cohasset Police Excellence Award was bestowed upon Officer Edward Bagley for his "quick and professional" actions that led to the arrest of five dangerous suspects in Cohasset.

Last August, Officer Bagley received a radio call while on patrol to respond to a residence on Cedar Street. The caller reported a rock has been thrown through the window of the home. While en route to the scene, Bagley noted two vehicles leaving the area of the incident. He alerted fellow responding officers of the vehicle descriptions. He continued to the residence to ensure the well being of the victims. The residents confirmed the two cars that left the scene were involved in the incident.

Officer Bagley caught up with the suspect vehicles traveling north on N. Main Street. A query of the vehicle's registration revealed that the same plate number had been run by Milton Police a short time earlier. The vehicle was suspected to be involved in a similar malicious destruction incident in Milton. He pulled over the vehicle.

The vehicle contained five occupants and upon approach observed two rocks on the front passenger side floor. Back-up officer Paul Wilson arrived to assist. During his investigation, Bagley learned the driver had a suspended license and developed probable cause to arrest all five occupants for vandalizing property. Once the suspects were placed under arrest, a search of the vehicle yielded the discovery of a fully loaded 9-millimeter semi-automatic handgun, a high capacity magazine and a defaced serial number.

"His actions are a credit to himself, the Cohasset Police Department and are a reflection of his commitment to excellence as well as his dedication to provide quality and courageous police service to the citizens of Cohasset," said Chief Hussey. Bagley also received the Robert F. Dana Distinguished Service Award for his exceptional work on patrol.

Lastly but certainly not least, Hussey conferred the Chief's Community Service Award to Officer John Small for his work with the Toys for Tots and other volunteer efforts within the town.

Small takes most of his vacation during the month of December to devote more time to the Toys for Tots effort, Hussey said. Small has been involved with efforts to dress up the harbor with nautical touches, including the Minot Replica, anchor statue and Lightkeepers' memorial.

"He has dedicated his own time and skill to enhance the harbor and the quality of life in town," said Hussey.

All four officers received a standing ovation from the Selectmen and members of the audience. Chief Hussey hopes to continue to recognize officers who demonstrate outstanding character and aptitude in coming years.

Police Beat

Urge vigilance

Hingham may be right next-door – but the town seems like it could be miles away when it comes to housebreaks. In the past two weeks, Hingham police say there have been 11 housebreaks in Hingham, 10 of which occurred in the middle of the night when the residents were sleeping. In all cases, the thieves entered through an unlocked window or door. Hingham police say it is too soon to tell if an arrest they made Monday evening of a Holbrook man – who was discovered hiding behind the front door by two women who were returning home – was involved in the other break-ins. There were also three arrests related to a break-in this week in Marshfield. Marshfield has had nine recent housebreaks and Rockland seven, police say.

Chief James Hussey says while Cohasset has escaped the rash of housebreaks, police are asking residents to report any suspicious activity or anything that is out of the ordinary, even a dog barking the in the middle of the night. Residents should also lock their first floor and basement windows and doors at night. "It is better to be safe than sorry," he said.

Hussey said he is concerned the thieves involved in these housebreaks have been very "brazen" by entering houses when the residents are home. "Usually this type of crime occurs when no one is around," he said.

Brushed by car

A walk-in at the police station at about 8:30 a.m. last Monday (May 14) told police that she and her son were in the crosswalk at Summer and Elm streets when a car came so close that it apparently brushed her clothing.

The woman reported that after talking with the operator she felt that the person might have been disoriented.

Chief Hussey said the woman provided a plate number and police followed up and contacted the operator, who is under medical treatment. The operator was issued a citation for failure to yield in a crosswalk and police have filed a report with the registry seeking a review of the person's medical condition to evaluate the person's ability to drive.

Vietnam Vet to speak on Memorial Day

Rain or shine, you can be assured that hundreds of local citizens will gather at Veterans Memorial Park on Monday for Cohasset's traditional Memorial Day observances.

The annual event that includes a parade down North Main Street to the Common and onto Elm Street and the harbor is always a draw in this small town that has lost more than of its share of soldiers, sailors and airmen over the years.

The Veterans Honor Roll — which will eventually include those who served in all the nation's wars — is one of the finest tributes anywhere and demonstrates the esteem in which Cohasset holds its veterans.

"It's an honor to be asked to speak on Memorial Day and represent the men and women in service."

— Donald Staszko, U.S. Air Force

The stone monument provides the backdrop for the ceremony that will include featured speaker Cohasset resident and Vietnam veteran Captain Donald Staszko of the US Air Force. Staszko said his speech would focus on Cohasset as a community.

"It's an honor to be asked to speak on Memorial Day and represent the men and women in service," Staszko said.

This year's Memorial Day weekend events begin with a dedication of the Healing Field on Saturday, May 26 at 2 p.m. Sons of The American Legion Commander Thomas W. Wigmore will be presiding over the event. The Healing Field is open to the public daily from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. until Wednesday, May 30 at 4 p.m. when the flags will be taken down. The Healing Field is located at the corner of Summer St. and Border St., across from the George H. Mealy American Legion Post 118.

Barry Butman places stakes into the ground to help set up the Healing Field which will be dedicated during a special ceremony at 2 p.m. Saturday.

On Monday, the parade arrives at the harbor at about 11:45 a.m. but the day's events actually begin much earlier, from 8 p.m. Sunday to 6 a.m. Monday, a Legion member will keep vigil at Veterans park. Then at 7 a.m. at the Legion Post on Summer Street hosts the annual veterans' breakfast. From the Legion veterans march up to the old Paul Pratt Library building (now the headquarters of the Cohasset Historical Society) where they board buses for the North Cohasset Cemetery and honor roll. The buses arrive at Woodside at about 9:30 a.m. that includes visiting the Gold Star Mothers Memorial. Then it's on to Beechwood Cemetery. The veterans join the parade that includes local bands, scouts, a contingent from the Daughters of the American Revolution, and veterans at the Music Circus parking lot at about 10:30 a.m. The parade marches to Central Cemetery at Joy Place, then down North Main Street to the Common, the POW/MIA Memorial, and onto Elm Street and the harbor, arriving at about 11:45 a.m.

Flower Girls needed for Memorial Day Parade

Girls ages 5-12 are needed to march in the Cohasset Memorial Day parade. Girls will meet at 10:30 a.m. and march from the common down to the memorial on the harbor across from American Legion Post. If your daughters, granddaughter etc. are interested or if anyone has questions please contact Dee Wigmore at (781) 740-8049.

Search for Veterans' Agent

When former State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray passed away in October, Cohasset lost both a great woman and their veteran's agent. As a result, Town Manager Bill Griffin posted the vacancy a couple of weeks ago and is waiting to hear back from interested citizens. The application deadline to apply is today, Friday, May 25. Griffin will then review the applicants and appoint the new veteran's agent.

Memorial Day schedule (Monday, May 28)

- 7 a.m., veterans breakfast at the Legion
- 8:15 a.m., buses leave former Paul Pratt Library building on S. Main Street for North Cohasset
- 9:30 a.m., buses arrive at Woodside Cemetery, then on to Beechwood Cemetery
- 10:30 a.m., parade steps off from Music Circus parking lot
- 11 a.m., ceremony at Central Cemetery at Joy Place
- 11:30 a.m., ceremony at MIA/POW Square at Depot Court.
- 11:45 a.m., parade arrives at Veterans Memorial Park.

Rachel McElroy awarded Fulbright Grant

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

WITH HONORS

Rachel McElroy, daughter of Joe and Mary McElroy of Windy Hill Road, and a 2003 graduate of Notre Dame Academy, graduated magna cum laude from the American University Honors Program at their May 13 commencement.

She was awarded a Fulbright Grant for a year of post-graduate independent study in Germany. The Fulbright program seeks to foster mutual understanding among nations through educational and cultural exchanges. Her grant proposal entails examination of Germany's unique KonTrag Law that requires firms to submit risk assessments for approval by the Federal Government before investing in high-risk regions and countries. Rachel's study results will be made available to the State Department, Homeland Security and other interested government and private sector organizations.

Rachel graduated with a 3.8 grade point average and received a Bachelor of Arts in International Services specializing in Foreign Politics as well as a Bachelor of Arts in Language and Area Studies, which included German language and culture.

Rachel McElroy has been awarded a Fulbright Grant for a year of post-graduate independent study in Germany.

Her undergraduate studies were highlighted by an Honors Colloquia in Berlin in 2004, in La Paz, Bolivia in 2006 and in Beijing, China in 2007. During the summer of 2004, she participated in the Global Leadership Program at Charles University in Prague. She matriculated at Freie University in Berlin for her entire junior year. Rachel supplemented her coursework with group trips to such countries as Tunisia, Morocco and Turkey.

Rachel's academic honors included receiving American University's full-tuition Presidential Scholarship, participation in AU's Honors Program, being published at the National Conference on Undergraduate Research in 2005 and her induction into the Alpha Lambda Delta Honor Society, as well as the Golden Key International Honor Society.

Rachel worked throughout her four years of undergraduate study. She was one of three high school students nationwide who were offered a Defense Intelligence Agency work-study program. During her senior, year she interned part-time for Corporate Risk International, a firm that specializes in assessing risks associated with firms planning to invest in volatile regions of the world. She is currently working for Washington Group International, a major construction conglomerate that does projects in third world countries and elsewhere.

EARTH DAY SCHOLARSHIP

An essay written by Amanda Thompson, a senior at Cohasset High School, was selected as the overall winner from entries submitted by Cohasset High School students to the fourth annual Aquarion Water Company 2007 Earth Day Essay Contest.

The theme of Amanda's essay was "Groundwater: Humanity's Lifeline." According to Larry Bingaman, Aquarion Senior Vice President, the company provides educational programs aimed at enhancing students' knowledge of the public water supply, as well as business and conservation issues throughout the towns serviced by the company.

Amanda Thompson won the Aquarion essay contest.

"In order to have long-lasting attitude changes about how we consume and protect water, Aquarion Water Company offers programs that reach the children from early in their school career and continue to teach them through high school," Bingaman said.

Bingaman continued, "Amanda will receive $500, which will be paid directly to her school, Gordon College in Wenham, Mass. where she plans to studying creative writing."

"All the entries that we received were excellent and we look forward to next year's scholarship award contest," Bingaman said.

DERBY SPIRIT

Congratulations to Cohasset's Jeffrey Cavanaro, who was the recipient of this year's Trustees' Major Banner Award at Derby Academy. This Spirit Award is one of Derby's highest awards and is given to an eighth-grade student in recognition of achievement in sportsmanship and character building in athletics. Jeffrey was recognized for his positive attitude toward teammates, coaches, opponents and officials.

Jeffrey Cavanaro has been recognized for sportsmanship.

Jeff also received the Outstanding Offense Award for baseball; Outstanding Defense Award for basketball; and the Coaches Award for soccer. He was also recognized for being a three-season captain.

Congratulations, Jeffrey!

DEAN'S LIST

Kathleen Elizabeth Dewaal of Cohasset has been named to the dean's list at Savannah College of Art and Design in Savannah, Ga., for the winter quarter 2007. Kathleen had to earn a grade point average of 3.5 or higher for this recognition. Well done!

That is all for this week. Send in all of your news to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Martha Gjesteby of Old Pasture Road is anxious to have the train come through Cohasset. She spent many years on the Citizens Advisory Committee, a group made up of Greenbush corridor community representatives, reviewing and commenting on the MBTA's environmental impact reports pertaining to the long planned train project.

"It never should have been eliminated," said Gjesteby. She believes the train will bring more commuters and business people to town.

Despite fairly positive reaction to the impending train's arrival overall, residents still see deficiencies in the project.

Gjesteby expressed concern about the lack of ample parking. The Cohasset station, located on Route 3A will have approximately 400 parking spaces. At this point, only time will tell if the parking lot will have enough spaces for train users.

Others, like Al Moore, chairman of the Planning Board, feel the location of the station is far from ideal.

"I think it's great the project is moving forward. But the sadness of the whole thing is there will be no stop in the village. I think that decision is the single largest strategic error made by the town in the last 50 years. It's a Board of Selectmen decision that will live in infamy."

With a stop downtown, a good portion of residents could have walked less than a mile to the train, said Moore. The station's location in the North end of town on the busy and business-oriented Route 3A makes a walk too far or too dangerous from most residences.

Mandy Burgoon, the owner of Carousel Antiques on Ripley Road, is a longtime village merchant owner who has been and will be affected by the train.

"[It] is extremely unfortunate that while the village business district will have to deal with the train dozens of times daily, there is no stop here," she said, "Dealing with the MBTA as a good or bad neighbor is a fact of life at this point. Carousel Antiques has been here for 31 years, we have no thoughts of leaving."

Safety

The test train is only a harbinger of things to come as more test trains are scheduled to run throughout the summer. It is important to note that the track—long barren—is now part of an active railway.

"It's an added feature that people haven't been used to over the last 50 years," said Greenbush liason, Mark Brennan, "we can't stress safety enough."

The test trains will operate now with little fanfare, although proper safety measure like blowing the horns and placing flagmen at crossings will be taken until the safety signaling system is operational. The MBTA has said trains may operate at any time, day or evening, seven days a week, and would not operate on a set schedule. Adults, children and pets should stay off and away from the tracks and vehicles should not stop on the tracks at any time.

The schools have taken measures to ensure the youth of the town is well informed about train safety. Assemblies have been held at all three schools in the district throughout the school year. The lessons, taught by a police officer, were designed to be age-appropriate. Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh has had ongoing communication with the MBTA and parents regarding the train. Most recently, a Connect-ED message went out to the school population to notify parents of the test train last Saturday.

In addition, Brennan said there are still ongoing major construction projects throughout town will conclude throughout the summer. The Pond Street and Spring Street intersection, one of the most complex intersections in town still undergoing construction. There is signaling work being done at all grade crossings. Fencing is still being installed along the route. Work is concluding on King Street with signaling equipment, fencing and drainage. The blasting in the village, adjacent to the town parking lot, began earlier this week to clear way for eight new parking spaces downtown. The station and associated parking lot will also get a lot of attention this summer.

Police Chief James Hussey said safety is a priority. He said police would work with the MBTA to insure proper signage is installed warning people about trespassing. "We don't want to see anyone get hurt," he said. Hussey explained that posting trespassing signs would give police the right to arrest should someone enter the railroad right-of-way.

The Greenbush train emerges from the $40 million downtown Hingham tunnel on Saturday. After passing through Hingham, the train headed to Cohasset and then Scituate.

TRAIN TIMELINE

- 1849 - Service on the Old Colony line begins
- 1959 - Passenger service on the Old Colony lines stops; Southeast Expressway opens
- 1971 - Red Line extends to Quincy, delaying talk of restoring the Old Colony Lines
- 1984 - Traffic congestion in the region prompts the state Legislature, with the support of then Gov. Michael Dukakis, to direct the MBTA to study the feasibility of restoring the Old Colony lines to Plymouth, Middleboro and Greenbush
- 1988 - Due to the complexity of the project, the Greenbush feasibility study is split from the Plymouth and Middleboro lines
- 1991 - At the ballot box, Hingham is the only town along the Greenbush corridor to vote against the train.
- 1994 - The Citizens Advisory Committee, appointed by the Secretary of Environmental Affairs to comment on Greenbush feasibility studies, votes to support the train with a short tunnel under Hingham Square.
- 1996 -The MBTA decides to pay for Greenbush using only state dollars; the Town of Hingham launches a lawsuit saying the MBTA is deliberately trying to skirt tougher federal environmental laws
- Sept. 1997 - The Plymouth and Middleboro lines open to much fanfare
- 1999 - the MBTA says a short tunnel under Hingham Square is feasible and would cost $29 million.
- March 2000 - Scituate voters approve spending up to $50,000 for any legal action against the MBTA over the Greenbush rail restoration project.
- May 2000 - Hingham signs a mitigation agreement with the MBTA and agrees to drop its lawsuit; is promised a short tunnel under Hingham Square at a cost of $39 million and a $1.35 million preservation fund to protect historic properties.
- March 2001 - MBTA decides to use the "design-build" method for Greenbush, where the contractor, designs, builds and pays for the project with the MBTA then paying the contractor back over 20 years. The "design-build" method has only been used once before, for the Route 3 North widening project.
- March 2001 - a new anti-rail group publicly surfaces, dubbed AfTA (Advocates for Transportation Alternatives) and is headed by John Bewick, a former state Secretary of Environmental Affairs.
- May 2001 - Cohasset signs a $5 million mitigation agreement with the MBTA.
- March 2002 - Scituate reaches an accord with the MBTA by signing a $10.4 million mitigation agreement with the transit authority.
- Aug. 2001 - then state Secretary of Environmental Affairs Robert Durand issues a certificate giving the Greenbush project the green light
- Sept. 2001 - In a closed-door meeting with local officials, then Gov. Paul Cellucci says Greenbush is a go, but sets a $408 million cost ceiling.
- Oct. 2001 - Scituate files a lawsuit against both the MBTA and Secretary of Environmental Affairs Robert Durand stating the final environmental impact report on Greenbush does not adequately comply with MEPA standards.
- Dec. 2001 - Weymouth and Braintree sign mitigation agreements. Weymouth's $16 million package does not include mitigation for Weymouth Landing.
- March. 2002 - Scituate becomes the last community to come to an accord with the MBTA by signing a $10.4 million mitigation agreement with the transit authority.
- April 2002 - MBTA awards $252 million construction contract to Cashman Balfour Beatty (CBB)
- June 2002 - MBTA opens construction office at 1580 Commercial St. in Weymouth's Jackson Square.
- February 2003 - Citing permitting and access issues, the MBTA suspends construction on the Greenbush project for six months.
- July 2003 - Gov. Mitt Romney finds himself in the midst of a "sticker war" at a stop at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham, where citizens wearing either pro- and anti-Greenbush lapel stickers try to get the governor's ear.
- August 2003 - The MBTA's $3.9 million purchase of 1.5 miles of track in East Braintree from CSX Corporation of Florida is a key development.
- Sept. 10, 2003 - Weymouth signs a mitigation agreement with the T for Weymouth landing. that provides an additional $28 million.
- Sept. 22, 2003 - Gov. Mitt Romney and the MBTA Board of Directors unanimously agree to resume the $479 million project. Opponents including AfTA and the Coastal Coalition vow to continue to fight it.
- Sept. 2003-Jan. 2007 - Construction on the Greenbush line continues in earnest, including building at tunnel under Hingham Square.
- Feb. 6, 2007, the "final spike" is driven into the rail line in Braintree signifying completion of Greenbush, the MBTA's 13th commuter rail line. Service is expected to start in late summer.
- May 19, 2007 – MBTA conducts Greenbush test run from South Station to the Greenbush station in Scituate and back.

Cohasset Lightkeepers to host Memorial Day cookout

Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation invites everyone for hamburgers, hot dogs, soft drinks or coffee immediately after the Memorial Day parade on May 28, at Bancroft Hall, on Government Island.

The nonprofit Lightkeepers Corporation was established in 1991 to renovate a former two-family lightkeepers residence – no longer used as such because of automation of Minot's light some years before – and convert it into a function room for community use. The building is leased from the town but is maintained and operated by the Lightkeepers Corporation. The surrounding gardens were established and are maintained by the Community Garden Club, Cohasset Garden Club, Amateur Garden Club and by the Lightkeepers.

This will be the 10th year that the Lightkeepers Corporation has hosted Memorial Day attendees in recognition of the generosity of supporters.

The generosity of Cohasset residents and others provided the funds for renovation. Operating and maintenance expenses, and reserves for capital replacements or improvements, are recovered from rental of two apartments on the second floor, and from fees charged to non-residents for use of the function room facilities. Cohasset residents may use the facilities for a nominal fee, and nonprofits at no charge.

This will be the 10th year that the Lightkeepers Corporation has hosted Memorial Day attendees in recognition of the generosity of supporters, and it is excepted that about 1,000 people will be served again this year.

Sustainable South Shore to meet

Sustainable South Shore regional meeting will take place at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, May 29, at First Parish Church, 24 River St., Norwell. All residents of South Shore towns are invited to attend.

Discussion will focus on what Sustainable South Shore communities are doing now and plan to do in the future, as well as plan participation in the Northeast Sustainable Energy Association fall tour of South Shore sustainable homes, businesses and buildings.

For more information, call 781-925-5665 or visit SustainableSS.org.

Liquid trail

At 11:18 p.m. on Sunday (May 13), a caller from a Cohasset restaurant on King Street reported that a customer was drunk and was being abusive to the manager of the establishment. Chief James Hussey said when the officers arrived, the subject had left the area.

Subsequently a different caller reported seeing a car speed up Pond Street that hit a barrel and kept driving toward Bancroft Road.

Hussey said the officer saw a liquid trail in the area by the barricade and followed it to a house on Norfolk Road. Based on the officer's interview with a couple of individuals at the residence, the officer placed a 26-year-old Cohasset male under arrest.

The man was charged with operating under the influence of alcohol, negligent operation of a motor vehicle, and leaving the scene after property damage.

Police determined that the subject was the same individual who had been reported as being drunk and causing a problem at the restaurant.

Abandoned MV

Police are investigating why a motor vehicle that had apparently been involved in an accident was abandoned at near the corner of Jerusalem Road and Jerusalem Lane last Tuesday (May 15). The car, a gray 2003 Kia Optima, had heavy front-end damage, Chief Hussey said. The registration came back to a Hull resident and police are following up to determine who was driving and what the car hit.

Damaged mirror

A walk-in to the police station last Thursday said his car had been vandalized. The driver's side mirror was damaged sometime between 2-3 p.m. the day before. The car was parked on the street in front of the house. Because of the timeframe, the walk-in thought that kids might be responsible. However, there is no evidence of that, Hussey said. There is also a chance the mirror was hit by a passing car.

No hitchhiking

Police sent an older woman who was hitchhiking in the area of South Main and Summer streets last week on her way. Hitchhiking is not allowed under state law, Chief Hussey said. A caller told police about the woman.

DK male

An officer took a drunken male home from a Stop & Shop after receiving a complaint from the manager. The call came in about 10:31 p.m. on Thursday (May 17). Chief Hussey explained that if there is a family member or friend that can take custody of an inebriated person – and the person is not out of control – then police will try to get the individual home.

MV crash

A collision occurred at about 1:10 p.m. on Saturday (May 19) at the intersection of Summer, Spring and South Main streets.

Police said based on witness reports, a 2005 Honda Accord was traveling northbound on S. Main Street when the operator of a 2001 Jeep that had stopped at the stop sign on Spring Street apparently pulled out to go across S. Main to Summer Street hitting the Honda, which had the right of way.

There were no injuries and the jeep had to be towed. The operator of the jeep was cited for failure to grant the right of way.

Hit & Run

A North Main Street resident reported to police that there was a hit and run in her yard the previous night. The report came in at 8:19 a.m. on Sunday (May 20). Police said there was evidence that a car that was heading north on N. Main crossed the center line and drove into the hedgerow. The vehicle made its way out of the hedge and drove away. Police have collected evidence at the scene including a beer bottle to see if any of it is tied to the incident. There were no witnesses. The incident remains under investigation.

Depot Court commercial building starts review process

Would replace structure that burned down

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Devastated by a two-alarm fire back in late January, the Depot Court lot sits now as a scar in the village. But the healing process is underway and in the coming months a new two-story commercial building may rise from the ashes. Richard Brown, the owner of the lot, came before the Planning Board on Wednesday evening to discuss his plans for the village parcel.

The new 4000-square foot building will have farmhouse-style architecture, including a farmer's porch, and room for four retail stores on the first floor. The second floor is currently earmarked for storage, however that could change if the Planning Board decides to ease the zoning restrictions on apartments in the village.

The structure will sit on roughly the same footprint with "modest expansion" to the front and rear of the building. Brown will appear in front of the Zoning Board of Appeals on June 6 to seek relief for increasing the nonconformity of the building.

The former site of Dramatic Kitchens and Sunroom Conservatories, Ltd., a kitchen and design shop had parking the front of the building, but those parking spaces are not included in the new design. With parking spaces at such a premium downtown, it raised some concerns among the Planning Board.

"I hate to see parking lost in the village," said Planning Board member Stuary Ivimey. The design includes a circular asphalt driveway that will include two parking spaces, and there will be six other spots on the property.

"The old building has parking in the front but it was not well defined and will not be reconstructed," said John Cavanaro of Cavanaro Consulting in Norwell who designed the building. He cited safety concerns with patrons backing directly onto the street.

"We'd be hard pressed to get a legal or near legal spot in the front of the building," Cavanaro said. Planning Board Bill Good agreed with the designer.

"It's a very busy spot with the Community Center across the street. The way you have it is safer and more aesthetically pleasing design."

The building will be handicap accessible from the front and side of the building. The designs include a pedestrian connection to both sides of the building. This aligns with a key item identified at the village consultant meeting recently: welcoming pedestrians to the village.

Given the lot's history, ensuring the building has adequate fire safety measures was one of the primary concerns of the site plan review. The Planning Board, along with Fire Captain Mark Trask, encouraged Brown to install a sprinkler system in the structure.

"We encourage new buildings to have sprinkler systems. If there's a sprinkler in building, there is flexibility in terms of what [type of business] can go in there," said Trask, offering a restaurant as an example. Brown said he planned to install a dry sprinkler system using halon in the building, however Trask said the use of halon due to health concerns was fading from widespread use.

The board also requested a complete list of materials to be used in the structure to ensure non-combustible materials were used in appropriate locations, as well as better description of window, doors and shutters. A complete landscape plan was also requested for the next meeting (June 6).

The board praised the aesthetics of the building.

"It has a nice shape to it," said Planning Board Chairman Al Moore, "it will be a great addition to downtown."

Clapboard shingles in a grayish tone will be used for the front of the building. The roof will have red cedar shingles and the trim will be a creamy color. The doors will be constructed of steel and will be a shade of blue. The farmer's porch will have recessed lighting.

"My intention is not to built it and then sell it. I'm going to keep this building for my retirement," said Brown.

The Planning Board gave its recommendation for the Brown's plan to move forward, pending final details of the landscape and materials. With recommendation in hand, Brown will now need to go before the Zoning Board to get their approval before a building permit is issued.

From the Archives of the Cohasset Historical Society

From the Archives is a weekly feature provided by the Cohasset Historical Society.

It's that time of year again. The first sign of summer in Cohasset is the raising of the South Shore Music Circus tent. For more than fifty years, the Music Circus' summer season has brought top-notch musicals and big name acts to our small community. We welcome the return of the "tent" and look forward to another great season.

Did you know that the Cohasset Historical Society has a vast theater archives? We have a large collection of photos, such as the three featured here, which were taken in 1962. In addition, we have theater memorabilia, play bills and props from the South Shore Music Circus, Dramatic Club and South Shore Players. Stop by 106 South Main St. and see this unique collection and maybe even help identify some old theater photos. For more information, call 781-383-1434.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Take time to remember

Their names and faces are still fresh in our memories.

Not much time has passed since South Shore natives Lance Corporal Walter O'Haire or Staff Sgt. William J. Callahan were laid to rest, a stark reminder of the consequences of war.

So as we ready for this Memorial Day, the somber notion from which this holiday was born should not be lost on us.

It seems each passing day brings more sad news about soldiers dying in this war against terrorism. And with each death, the debate rages on over our role in Iraq.

Whether or not you support the war is a relevant argument in the grand scheme of things, but this one day is really a chance to honor the men and women who died while serving our country. There have been unpopular wars and conflicts throughout time, but that does not diminish the sacrifice these men and women bore while carrying out their orders.

While we would rather not be reminded of horrible consequences of war, this particular war has given younger generations a true meaning of Memorial Day. For too long, the day had become a celebration of many things, least of which was the original purpose of the holiday.

When Congress passed an act in 1971 that turned Memorial Day into a three-day weekend at the end of May for most workers and students across the country, it became a perfect opportunity fire up the grill for family get-togethers to celebrate with hamburgers, hot dogs and iced-cold adult beverages. For many, it is the unofficial start of summer, not the somber day of remembrance for military personnel who lost their lives fighting for our country.

That has changed in recent years as the tragic events of Sept. 11, 2001 and the ensuing war on terrorism and our eventual involvement in Iraq. With our military personnel once again involved in the heat of battle on foreign soil, war and its consequences are once again at the forefront of people's minds.

Some believe restoring Memorial Day to its traditional day of observance to May 30 regardless of the day it falls on would cut back on the party atmosphere of the holiday and return it to its original intent of being a day of remembrance. A bill that was filed in the House and Senate in 1999 proposed just that. The bill was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary in the House in 2000, but there has been no further development on the bill since then.

Regardless of when the day is celebrated, we should remember the reason for Memorial Day and honor those who paid the ultimate sacrifice while serving their country. Then and now.

Beach and recycling permits to expire June 30

The expiration date of the beach and Recycling Transfer Facility permits is June 30. The "all facility sticker" for the next fiscal year will be on sale starting the week of June 18 during normal business hours at Town Hall and at the DPW garage on weekends starting June 23, from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., and Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Sticker prices will remain the same as last year – $50 for residents under the age of 60 and $15 for seniors. This sticker will allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility and Sandy Beach, as well as parking at all areas in town that require a sticker.

In addition, residents will be required to purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. These bags will be offered at the Department of Public Works building and various locations throughout the town. All commercial contractors and vehicles registered in a business name should pick up their stickers at the Department of Public Works. Residents are encouraged to purchase stickers through the mail by providing the appropriate fee, a copy of a current registration and a self-addressed return envelope.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Double standard for parking permits

TO THE EDITOR:

I truly laughed long and hard when I saw the brilliant Jim Hamilton cartoon in last week's Cohasset Mariner. To refresh your recollection, the cartoon highlights a double standard in Cohasset – it's been an exceptional year at Sandy Beach. Valid permits must be displayed year round – violation will be $50; except for contractors' trucks. Can someone besides me truly look into this blatant double standard?

I have been trying to pursue this apparent double standard for several weeks.

To refresh recollections, Pomeroy & Co. Inc. out of Charlestown (PCI), has been in charge of the two years plus razing and then building of a new home on Whitehead Island, at the end of Whitehead Road.

Pomeroy's Construction Protocol dated March 29, 2005, states on page 2 under the heading "Traffic Control" the following:

"To the extent feasible and in keeping with 'local ordinances' (my emphasis.), PCI will pursue off-site satellite parking areas for commuter traffic related to the work."

I have personally been trying to ascertain if Pomeroy's use of parking at Sandy Beach has been paid for by Pomeroy. Pomeroy is in a great month of May rush to finish the completion of the house by June 1. I counted some 28 vehicles parked at Sandy Beach last Thursday, May 17. I have sent emails to Terry Cox at Pomeroy to query their use of Sandy Beach for parking – and again, with no response.

If a car is parked at Sandy Beach without a sticker, the police are often there quite quickly to tag it with a parking ticket. The cost of a parking ticket, I believe, has risen from $25 to $50.

But day in and day our for more than two years, Pomeroy and their subs have parked at Sandy Beach with no stickers and no parking tickets.

I chose to inquire at the Cohasset Police Station several weeks ago. I was told by the sergeant in charge at that time, that the police do not normally tag vehicles at Sandy Beach in the winter. But the police knew nothing about a relationship with Pomeroy & Co. Inc. I was given the name of a gentleman on Beach Street – apparently the president of the Sandy Beach Association – to contact. I did email him and received no response. In addition, the police suggested that I contact Town Manager, Bill Griffin, with my inquiries. I left him a note but with no response.

After enjoying Jim Hamilton's cartoon, I chose to do some more Internet searching about Sandy Beach Association and confess that most of what I found was fairly dated – but one restriction jumped out – in essence, if you are not a Cohasset resident, you can apply for a non-resident sticker – the waiting list is probably three years.

I am frustrated that I have not been able to get more information. So my last resort is to remind all Cohasset residents that we all get a yearly mailing from Sandy Beach Association to contribute monies to pay for the major clean-up at the beach. So many of us just routinely open our checkbooks to contribute what we can afford.

May I suggest that before you so quickly open your checkbook, ask what Pomeroy has paid for their hundreds of vehicles parked at Sandy Beach over the past two years. At $50 per parking ticket for each of their 28 non-stickered vehicles just on May 17, Sandy Beach/town would have received some $1,400 in revenue.

In essence, we should not turn a blind eye to an apparent double standard, and we should advocate honesty for all.

COMMENTARY

GARY VANDERWEIL

Because I work in the private sector, I know how important it is to develop and agree on goals; and then to live by the goals and assess how we performed on them, and, finally, to incorporate the results of the performance assessment into next year's planning. Therefore, I was very happy to read in the Mariner that the Deer Hill and MS/HS have established goals for the 2007/2008 year.

One of the reasons that the Board of Selectmen unanimously supported the 2008 school budget was the excellent presentation by School Committee Member Alfred Slanetz of the School Committee's goals, made to the Selectmen in February. The School Committee had developed and unanimously agreed on what I consider to be an excellent long-range goal, as well as specific one-, three-, and five-year goals that support the long-range goal. I feel the goals are excellent because (1) they are challenging, and (2) they are measurable. These two factors are very important if we want accountability, because — speaking from experience — there is an innate tendency in management to do just the opposite, i.e. to have easily achievable goals, or else to have goals that are not measurable. In either case, accountability is lost.

As presented to the Selectmen, the overall long-range goal for the Cohasset schools is for the school system to be ranked in the top 10 in Massachusetts and the top 100 in the U.S. This is an exciting and very challenging goal.

Within the framework of this long-range goal, the School Committee has developed specific goals for the 2007/2008 school year. These encompass 14 areas, ranging from the percent of students in honors and the percent achieving certain test scores, to the percent admitted to Ivy League colleges. These goals are listed below.

The goals are unambiguous and ambitious. I am not sure that in the upcoming school year the School Committee will achieve all of the goals, or even the majority of them. But at least they have something to strive for, they have a direction, and they have the courage to go public with a yardstick by which their own actions and performance can be measured.

This was and is a great way to

Awesome look at train up close

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Gone, But Not Forgotten… Say goodbye to the Spring Street crossing at Ellms Meadow. Late last week CBB began to take the temporary asphalt roadway apart in order to close the crossing. So, there will be no more trips to the hillside by turning onto Spring Street at the Historical Society.

From now on, each side of the tracks will be dead-ended near the skating pond. Pleasant Street and Spring Street near St. Anthony's will be the only two ways to get to and from the hillside from the center of Town.

The BIG Day – Last Saturday it really happened. About 50 stouthearted people stood at Pleasant Street in the mist and watched the train glide by. We do admit that watching a train up close was an awesome thing.

Several residents asked us if we were on the "First Train." No such luck. But, we did get a chance to stand in the rain with everyone else. A friend of ours, Arthur Munchbach, of the MBTA Safety Department, was spied in the last car with an ear-to-ear grin as he waived to the onlookers. Arthur has been the key MBTA person responsible for the Operation Lifesaver safety educational presentations that have been given to our school children.

Forest Avenue Update – The tree removal and trimming is complete in preparation for the sidewalk/street project. The next phase is rock removal which will start about June 4th. After rock removal, this summer the streets will be ground to remove the bulk of the old asphalt. We'll keep you updated as the Town moves through this project.

Traffic Islands – Each railroad crossing, with the exception of the two private crossings and the Pleasant Street crossing, has traffic islands as a part of its safety features. The Board of Selectmen, based on public comments, requested that the islands be left open for planting. So far we have had residents volunteer to plant and maintain most of the crossing island gardens. Only the islands at Pond / Spring and King streets have not been spoken for. If anyone is interested in helping to beautify these crossings, please call the Selectmen's office at 781-383-4105.

Spring Street crossing at Ellms Meadow is being closed.

A handful of residents stand by as the train comes through town.

The first train leaves the village center.

Harbor Wall — Lastly, an Early Warning On Tuesday, May 29th Phase II of the harbor wall project will begin. The sea walls from Lawrence Wharf (the wharf near the Old Salt House) to the Veteran's Memorial as well as the sea wall at the Sailing Club will be rebuilt. These walls are in much better shape than the walls closer to the Border Street Bridge. There will be some disruption, but the work should be pretty much finished by the third week in June. Right now, it looks like we will be able to maintain 2-way traffic from Lawrence Wharf to the Veteran's Memorial. So we won't have to put up with the one lane traffic flow that we have on Border Street near the bridge.

There are upsides to facing 40

TALES FROM THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

"I'm turning 40 this year," I say out loud to my reflection in the bathroom mirror. Fortunately, the woman in the mirror shrugs her shoulders and laughs because for some reason it's just not a big deal. Sure there are a few things that do give me pause about entering into the Fortysomething zone. Like the fact that I'm older than Daniel Craig, the newest James Bond. While I fully comprehend that he is portraying a "younger" James Bond, there is just something so totally wrong with 007 being born in 1968, a full six years after Sean Connery first introduced himself on-screen as "Bond, James Bond."

Nevertheless, thanks to the Boomers who have crossed this threshold before me, at least we now have all sorts of products, surgical procedures, diets and exercise regimes to maintain (or regain) youthful appearances. But, I like to think Mother Nature already had her own remedy to reduce the appearance of aging. Why else would we all need reading glasses? It's her way of preventing us from seeing the wrinkles and imperfections when we get up close to each other. (She is a woman, after all!)

But there are the other telltale signs of aging that can't be helped by Botox or bad vision.

More than anything, having a good sense of humor makes the whole aging process a lot easier. (They're called "laugh lines" for a reason.)

Each year I discover a new food that doesn't agree with me, and my knees don't seem to work quite the same way they used to. Then there's the fact that my friends and I can't carry on a conversation without discussing mortgage rates and the housing market or referring to news anchors and presidential candidates as "hotties." On top of that, I had a shock the other day when I hopped into my car only to find that all the radio station buttons had been set to talk radio. When did I do that?

There are, however, some things that I am truly thankful for as I turn 40, like not having a husband who will throw me a surprise birthday party. I'm sure having a husband would actually be quite nice, but I'm definitely not a fan of the surprise 40th birthday party. I don't know about the rest of you, but if I'm going to celebrate, I want to look spectacular, not surprised. And, unfortunately, "spectacular" takes a lot more work than it used to.

One benefit of aging I truly enjoy is that my ability to embarrass myself continues to lessen each year as one gets either too tired, or too busy, to care what other people think. But at the same time, my ability to embarrass my son is on the upswing, and it's proving to be a rather useful behavioral management tool. I hear that in a few years, I'll be able to embarrass him simply by existing.

More than anything, having a good sense of humor makes the whole aging process a lot easier. (They're called "laugh lines" for a reason.) Otherwise, I might not find funny the statement in a recent novel, "The Starter Wife," about how men at age 41 are still considered young in business, but their female peers are "middle aged." Ironic, isn't it, especially when you look at life expectancies Or, perhaps I wouldn't see the comedy in the fact that the very same men who I consider too old for me to date, likewise consider me too old for them to date. That's o.k., too, because in a few more years, thanks again to Mother Nature, we'll all be having too many "senior moments" to remember we ever met in the first place.

But perhaps the absolute best thing about turning 40 this year is to truly be able to understand the saying, "Success is getting what you want; but happiness is wanting what you get." Hmmmmm. Maybe that's the real secret to living "happily ever after." I'll let you know how it's going on my 50th.

HEALTH NOTES

Year-round Watershed Academy

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

For many years, the Board of Health, recognizing the need for reliable accurate assessment of the health of our waters of all types, has had a program of collection and laboratory analysis of water from any source if it is likely to represent a significant health threat to citizens. Naturally, because of cost, the Board was selective about the number and type of samples taken to be analyzed. And for the same reason, we were never able to take more than a snapshot of the general condition of the surface waters to which our population was exposed. Indeed, when water in certain areas appeared to have been implicated in pollution, costly studies were necessary to assess the extent of suspected pollution events and degradation of our water resources. It has become increasingly apparent that the existing method of using the small staff of Town employees or outside contractors was inadequate to reveal the true condition of the threat by contamination of our waters.

For seven years now, a student volunteer organization mentored by school system teachers has grown into the role of providing increasingly sophisticated assessment of our natural resources, not the least of which was water. At first, single teachers would work with small groups of interested students. Then in 2003, the Town provided a building on the waterfront for students to carry out various environmental assessment activities. With increased interest, and outside funding, equipment was procured, and the Board of Health began to depend on students for collection analysis and assessment of the Town's natural resources. The Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research CSCR was born. Since that time, students have assisted the Board of Health in taking beach water samples, creating a natural resource inventory for the Gulf River, assessing nonpoint source pollution in North Scituate and in James Brook, and numerous increasingly sophisticated and accurate water quality sampling chores.

Now, a milestone has been reached. Last year, the CSCR began writing a series of grant requests seeking funds for a new concept, a Watershed Academy, to train to students to be effective stewards of skills necessary for the challenges of future inhabitants of the planet. Several requests were successful; the most important being a grant to participate in Microsoft's U.S. Partners in Learning program, aimed at providing educators and schools with the tools and support they need to deliver on the promise of technology.

Microsoft's Massachusetts Education and Innovation Grants program will support four innovative education programs in Massachusetts in science, technology, engineering and math (STEM), with a special focus on after-school learning. Of 78 applicants for the grant, four were selected as finalists. The CSCR was one of the four — specifically chosen because of its model of engaging students as science partners in the community. The Microsoft funds together with grants from the DEP Office of Coastal Zone Management, and the Cohasset Education Foundation will enable the Watershed Academy after-school program to operate year around.

In addition, plans call for the grants to be leveraged by additional services not heretofore available from the Board of Health. As indicated earlier, the Board has more requirements for water quality assessment than it can handle, a continuing burden on taxpayers. With a cadre of student volunteers trained by the Watershed Academy taking and analyzing water quality data using standard practices approved by the State, the Board can fulfill both its needs and respond to requests from anyone requesting water quality assessment for any purpose. We plan to provide water quality sampling services for a moderate fee for those requesting them. Moreover, major drainage and stormwater improvements are now planned for much of Cohasset. These improvements will require periodic water quality assessment, some of which can be accomplished by the student researchers saving the Town funds, which would otherwise come from taxation. The board will provide more information on this program in future.

And the benefits of the program are not limited to Cohasset. Of the approximately 40 student volunteers expected to participate in the Watershed Academy this summer, many come from other of the 12 towns in the watershed whose students have signed up for the program. All towns in the watershed are invited to utilize Watershed Academy services for their analysis and assessment problems.

The big & small of civil rights

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

There is a bit in the movie "Silverado" where Stella, the 19th century dwarf barmaid, achieves equality of altitude with her clients by raising the section of the floorboards on which she stands behind the bar.

"When the world won't adjust to you," she tells a curious customer in effect, "you adjust to the world."

The Stellas of the 21st century won't have to face that problem and make that adjustment if State Rep. Byron Rushing has his way. Byron is one of those reps who is always on the lookout for a new civil right for someone to be in violation of.

The Boston Democrat is sponsoring a bill in the Massachusetts legislature that would add height and weight to race, gender, age, color, religion, disability and sexual persuasion to the state's anti-discrimination civil rights laws.

"This is one of the last physical aspects of people that you can acceptably laugh about," said Byron.

Not necessarily. Did you hear the one about the guy with big ears? Looked like a taxi cab with both doors open. Well, it was funny the first time I heard it. I guess you had to be there. But I digress.

I can understand the desire to give special protection to little people since, if you're born to be under four feet tall, there's not much you can do about it, although I know there are places where they'll try to stretch you a couple of inches on a rack to meet the height requirements of a police office or a fireman.

But raising obesity to the level of a civil right is a new one on me.

The Associated Press, reporting the filing of Byron's bill, sought out 300-pound Jeanne Toombs of Concord, a board member of the National Association to Advance Fat Acceptance, for comment.

"It's not fair," she said. "No matter what you think of fat people, they deserve to be treated like human beings."

Ever hear of losing weight, lady? A black man has to stay a black man, unless of course if he's Michael Jackson. A woman has to stay a woman. An 80-year-old man is an 80-year-old man, period. You might be surprised what few salads and some pushups can do for a 300-pound woman.

Byron's discovery of two new civil rights still has to pass muster with his legislative colleagues and there are indications that some of them might balk at voting for it.

"There's a limit on how far you can legislate your way to paradise," said Todd Momke, who is described as a Republican analyst. "We might as well add colorblind, left-handed and allergic-to-cashews and get it over with,"

Good idea! Did I, a confirmed left-hander, ever tell you how a clear case of discrimination by the Furnace Brook Golf Club in Quincy ruined my prospects for a lucrative career in golf?

My mentor, a chap named Roger Barry, and I showed up at the club for a sportswriters' tournament nearly 60 years ago, only to find that the club's only set of left-handed rental clubs was already out of the course.

It was decided that I should rent a set of right-handed clubs and drive with the righties while putting left-handed with a right-handed putter turned around. I shot a 36 and I distinctly remember Roger saying, "Good. Now let's try the second hole."

See what happens when they tamper with your civil rights?

Sustainable Cohasset focus of Our Town

Join Our Town starting Monday when co-hosts Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo sit down with JoAnn Mirise of Sustainable Cohasset to talk about the organization's efforts to increase awareness about greenhouse gases and what can be done to reduce them.

Discussion will cover how to reduce fuel consumption and other related topics.

Mirise authors a column on sustainable issues for the Cohasset Mariner. Her most recent column talked about pesticides and lawn care.

Tune in Monday, Tuesday and Thursday at 9p.m., all on Comcast channel 10.

Video surveillance part of school security

School Committee. Walsh explained the Association had yet to vote on the memorandum of understanding as it stood.

At the May 16 meeting the item was briefly discussed, but Walsh reported the understanding had yet to be agreed to by the union. She said she hoped an understanding could be reached and signed by the end of the school year. A copy of the tentative agreement was included in the public correspondence provided to the School Committee.

The tentative agreement outlines provisions with respect to the use of video surveillance cameras. The conditions include advance notification to the classroom teacher if covert cameras are used outside of instructional time, video surveillance will not be used to evaluate teacher's work performance or include any recording of sound. Video cameras currently installed may continue to be used by the school district. However, no cameras may be installed or used in locker rooms, restrooms or faculty rooms. Teacher offices may have cameras if the teacher is provided advanced notification.

The memorandum of understanding, if signed, will withdraw with prejudice the union's Jan. 12 grievance regarding the use of covert electronic monitoring devices.

The conditions include advance notification to the classroom teacher if covert cameras are used outside of instructional time, video surveillance will not be used to evaluate teacher's work performance or include any recording of sound.

At the May 16 meeting Walsh said following simulated lockdown situation drills performed in recent weeks at both the Deer Hill and Middle-High Schools the police recommended the installation of two additional stationary cameras in common areas.

"There were a couple of locations where the angle of the camera was not pointed where we thought would be best," said Chief James Hussey in a phone interview. He said there were two possibilities: change the angle of the camera or install an additional camera.

Chairman Rick Flynn proposed the installation of these two additional cameras should be installed before a formal agreement is met with the union.

"We're not bound by anything at this moment," Flynn said.

"Teachers should recognize the cameras are for safety purposes," they protect both the students and teachers, said School Committee member Alfred Slanetz agreeing with Flynn.

Currently, the video surveillance is recorded digitally and is available for review by the Superintendent, principals and the facilities manager. The police department does not have access to the surveillance video on a routine basis. If an incident occurs on school property that requires police involvement, the video is available to the police. In the next year, Chief Hussey and the police department will be looking to identify funding to bring the ability to monitor the schools cameras to the police dispatch center.

Cohasset is not alone in utilizing cameras as part of their security plan. Many schools installed cameras and additional security measures following the tragedy in Columbine in 1999 and other school violence incidents. Security systems involving video surveillance have been installed in other South Shore districts, including Duxbury, Norwell, Hull and Scituate.

School plan attacks mosquitoes

Seeks to prevent repeat of last year's restrictions

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Athletic Director Ron Ford's recommendations included having the fields sprayed in mid-August if it is apparent EEE is active in the area and spraying five days prior to heavy use.

Last fall a restriction was placed on all school-related outdoor activities after an EEE-infected mosquito was found in Cohasset. Although school and town officials worked quickly to get the information out to the public, Athletic Director Ron Ford wants to make sure a procedure is in place if another infected mosquito, with EEE or West Nile Virus, is found in town.

To that end, Ford presented a PowerPoint slideshow to the School Committee on May 16. It outlined what was done in the past, including last fall's actions and proposed procedures for the future.

Ford told the Committee to think of EEE, or Eastern Equine Encephalitis, virus as a living organism. Research into the virus has indicated occurrences of the EEE virus in Massachusetts appear every 14 years for a three-year period, and then the virus goes dormant.

Cases of EEE have been reported the last three consecutive years, since 2004. In previous years an EEE-infected mosquito has been found in the New England area by Sept. 1st so Ford is looking at that date as an indicator if the area is in for another year of EEE threat.

"We're hoping it will go dormant," said Ford, "[but] if it does happen again, we'll have an action plan in place and won't be scrambling."

During the fall sports season there was a ban on outdoor activities on school property between the hours of 6p.m. to 7:30a.m. The ban was in place from Sept. 1 to Oct. 30 and included scheduled night away in other non-restricted towns. Ford said the ban caused some issues for the South Shore League.

Ford's recommendations included having the fields sprayed in mid-August if it is apparent EEE is active in the area and spraying five days prior to heavy use. The Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project will spray the fields for free. School facility director Brian Adams is putting together an "outdoor pesticide plan" to be on record with the state. It is required to comply with the Children and Family Protection Act and will allow the county to spray the fields.

Ground spraying kills most of the adult mosquitoes it comes in direct contact with and should decrease the population in the area for several weeks. Cohasset was not included in aerial spraying the past, but may be included this year as the state may widen the area.

In addition to spraying, Ford said he will not going to schedule night practices or games until after Sept. 30 and then evaluate the EEE situation. Bug spray will be provided to all student athletes and coaches to further protect them from the mosquitoes.

Health Inspector Tara Tradd said Cohasset was still considered a low risk area. The EEE-positive mosquitoes found in northern Cohasset last September were of the species Culiseta Melanura, which typically do not bite humans, she said. The virus strand found in Cohasset usually infects birds, she said.

With EEE possibly not being a threat come this fall, School Committee member Alfred Slanetz asked what the town could do to prevent an outbreak of West Nile Virus. Tradd explained larvaecide (mosquito eggs) couldn't be tested for West Nile virus, unlike EEE. Birds (specifically, blue jays, crows, and robins) found within 24 hours of their death are sampled to see if they are positive for the virus.

The concensus of the School Committee was for Ford to move forward with implementing the plan as outlined. No vote was taken.

'Adopt a Street' program gaining momentum

hood associations, families, churches, school groups, businesses are encouraged to participate. The groups will adopt a street or a portion of a street for a minimum of two-years and would be expected to pick up litter in the adopted area at least once every two months. Safely rules will be dispersed to participants and safety gear would be worn, particularly if youths were involved, Griffin said.

Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer wanted to make sure the program also welcomed individuals.

"We want there to be some flexibility," in who can be involved, he said many individuals in town already do their part on their own in picking up litter and should be included as well, he said.

"[Participants] will own it for themselves and be able to feel good about the service they're doing in the community."
— Tara Tradd, health inspector

Griffin said there are still some question marks about the program that will need to be worked out. The draft guidelines of the program indicate that the town will provide safety vests, gloves and bags to the volunteer groups, as well as erect a sign in the adopted area recognizing the adopting group. Griffin said that the town's cost per participant could be about $30. Unfortunately, funds for this project were not included in the upcoming fiscal year's operating budget.

However, Griffin said the issue would be short term because future budgets would include the expenses and it was still unknown if there will be 10 or 100 participants.

"Part of the program could be to contribute" to the cause, suggested French.

The Town is ready to work with any group that comes forward.

New textbooks from Foundation Reserve funds

The new books, which cover math from sixth to eight grade, are consistent with new National Council of Teachers of Mathematics (NCTM) standards.

The schools have found further use for the Foundation Reserve funds received from the state last year. The School Committee voted unanimously last week to approve an allocation of $33,613.70 to purchase new textbooks to support a revised curriculum.

Each Deer Hill classroom will get leveled book libraries that will include appropriate books for the grade level and reading ability. The libraries will have a variety of genres and range of reading difficulty to meet student needs.

The Middle School will receive a new series of math textbooks to create curriculum continuity for all three grades, said Nancy Mrzyglod, Curriculum Coordinator for grades K-12. By purchasing the complete math series the school will receive additional teaching materials from the publisher at no extra cost. The new books, which cover math from sixth to eight grade, are consistent with new National Council of Teachers of Mathematics (NCTM) standards.

"These resources will last five to seven years," Mrzyglod said, affirming the textbooks and classroom libraries were a good investment. She pointed out that a teaching position due to budgetary restraints might only last one fiscal year while the books would keep on contributing in the classroom.

In September 2005 the state legislature appropriated $6.8 million to provide financial assistance to Massachusetts towns and cities. Municipalities were required to submit an application for the monies. Then each application was reviewed and appropriately awarded a grant. The Cohasset Schools received a $226,000 Foundation Fund grant from the state. This type of award, according to Business Manager Dave DeGennaro, is treated as grant money and is not incorporated into the fiscal budget.

The School Committee voted to appropriate $138,314 of Foundation Reserve funds back in December. Approximately $85,000 went toward the purchase of new textbooks for all three schools. The remainder of the money was used to purchase microscopes, classroom furniture, musical instrument, library books and other smaller items.

CO2 Cube on display at Earthfest

The event will be take place all day Saturday, May 26, with the concert portion beginning at 11a.m.

The CO2 Cube, created by a group of Cohasset high school freshman under the supervision of science teacher David Ames, will be on display at Earthfest this weekend. The 27-square foot cube represents one metric ton of carbon dioxide. Earthfest, sponsored by Boston radio station 92.9 WBOS, features an all day concert at the Hatchshell. Vendors will be set up at the event with free samples and information. The CO2 Cube Crew comprised of students and adults assembled "the cube" on the Esplanade on Wednesday afternoon. It is set up near the Hatch Shell, adjacent to the Whole Foods display — given its enormity; it's likely viewers won't miss it. The event will be take place all day Saturday, May 26, with the concert portion beginning at 11a.m.

As a part of their display, the creators of the Cube are sending a message challenging 19 other community organizations — schools, colleges, churches —to build their own cube. Their hope is to get 20 "cubes" built, each representing one ton of carbon dioxide. Together, the cubes would represent what an average American citizen, man, woman and child, emits in a single year.

"The numbers for carbon dioxide emissions are so unreal to the average citizen," says Kathryn Earle, a member of Sustainable Cohasset, "the cube makes it more real."

Their hope is to take the cubes down to the "Focus the Nation" event, a national educational initiative that will convenes on the Washington D.C. mall in January 2008.

For more information visit www.earthfest.com. To find out more about Focus the Nation event, visit www.focusthenation.org

Student artwork on display in Cohasset

All entries from the 10th Congressional District Art Competition available for public viewing and display at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset from May 24 through June 3.

Roughly 200 entries were submitted from students throughout the 10th Congressional District — which include paintings, drawings, prints, mixed media, photographs and computer graphics. The contest's top winner will be shipped to Washington, D.C. to be displayed for a full year in the US Capitol and will be offered a $20,000 scholarship to the Savannah School of Design in Savannah, Ga.

All submissions are now being reviewed by an independent panel of judges. Given the enthusiastic interest among students and high caliber of art, Delahunt wanted to make sure all entries would be on display.

While prizes will be awarded, Delahunt said, "the overall objective is to recognize and encourage the artistic potential of all our kids."

A reception will kick off the exhibition later this month in Cohasset to honor the South Shore and Cape & Islands high school participants. It will take place from 7 to 8 p.m. on Thursday, May 24 at the South Shore Art Center on 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset. Hours and directions for the center are available at www.ssac.org

More information about the competition is available from Delahunt's office, toll-free, at 800-794-9911 — or online at www.house.gov/delahunt/artcomp.shtml.

CHS science teacher will be missed

By Lauren Strazzulla
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Mr. Neundorf, today.

Vintage, Neundorf.

For the past 26 years Mr. Neundorf has charmed Cohasset High School with such favorite expressions as "in terms of," "on a usual basis," and of course, "you're the village idiot." And now, after 30 years of teaching, he will retire with the class of 2007, leaving many students to question whether they'll ever see another unnecessarily dangerous science experiment or will be able to trick a teacher into forgetting he assigned homework.

"I realized that every year had tremendous memories, and laughs."
— Joe Neundorf

Many will be surprised to learn that Mr. Neundorf never intended to go into the teaching profession. In fact, the foundation for his future profession was laid back in college where he worked teaching labs and doing research for professors to pay for his tuition. When three professors told him he would end up as a teacher, he promptly dismissed their claims, citing his desire to sometime be wealthy.

After college, Neundorf spent six months in the military before taking a position at a chemical firm, where he would work for eight years. He worked his way from technical service to research and finally ended up in charge of product development, before leaving the firm. Then he decided to put his masters in education, which he originally got only as a back up, to use. However, in 1977 teaching positions were difficult to get without previous experience, so Neundorf and his wife decided to go into the Peace Corps, if he wasn't successful at finding a job. But the day before school started in Hanover, he got called to interview for a job teaching chemistry, and "the rest is history."

Neundorf was originally drawn to teaching because it allowed him to "affect people, not things." Also, while working in industry, he was impacted by coworkers, who regretted not pursuing other careers they had been interested in. He promised himself he would never end his adult career feeling unfulfilled or stuck in one career.

Neundorf's first year teaching turned out to be quite a shock for him because he wasn't expecting the job to be so time consuming, and he had to get used to not having secretaries and assistants to assist with his workload. But friends remarked that they'd never seen him happier. Neundorf recalls that his first 10 years were most difficult because he had to get used to a lower budget than he had with his previous job.

"But it was always giving up one thing to gain another," he says. "I realized that every year had tremendous memories, and laughs. You don't remember what a teacher taught you, but you do remember the laughs, and in the midst, the acquisition of knowledge does happen."

When asked what memories he is reminded of most, Mr. Neundorf said with a smirk, "The funny episodes, the embarrassment."

And of course, anyone who had been in one of his classes knows that Mr. Neundorf is never shy when it comes to embarrassing himself or his students. He tries to teach kids not to take things too seriously. When he calls a student an "idiot," he believes it will help them to realize that people must constantly laugh at themselves, or the burdens of life will weigh them down.

"Never take someone seriously who wants to put you down." Mr. Neundorf also reflected on how he used to tell his class, "Don't get mad. Get even." Then one day, when he and his class were outside doing an experiment, two kids poured a bucket of water on his head — this of course incited a riot of laughter, but Mr. Neundorf won't forget that day or those kids.

Retirement has a number of things in store for Joe Neundorf. First and foremost, he hopes to pursue his favorite hobby: reading and studying military history. In addition, he fancies spending more time visiting and learning about battlefields. Next year, he also plans to spend a year in Germany learning the language.

"One of the good things about teaching is that it exposes you to students learning and it opens you; you see the joy in their eyes, and it's not unusual for teachers to pursue some of these interests," he says.

Mr. Neundorf brought a certain indefinable flavor to CHS that cannot be replicated. Students remember how "he always had funny stories to tell" (Shalea Daly). Chris Ackley commented that he "liked how Mr. Neundorf mixed humor with education." When asked to reflect on Mr. Neundorf's retirement, Mrs. Bierman said he "acts as a professional; whatever he stands for, he sticks with it, and I admire that quality."

In a closing remark, Neundorf said, "After 30 years, you realize that you've taught over 3,000 students, and you constantly run into people of varying ages, and they usually say nice things about you, and it makes it all worthwhile."

This was reprinted with permission from "The Spinnaker."

Please donate blood this summer

A decline in blood collections over the past several weeks has resulted in a shortage of approximately 1,600 units of blood across the Northeast.

With the long Memorial Day weekend approaching, blood donors of all types are urgently needed to meet the anticipated blood needs of our hospitals.

There is currently less than one day's supply of many blood types including O-negative, the universal blood type. The Red Cross is most comfortable with a three-day supply of blood.

Blood drives are occurring across New England and can be found by calling 1-800-GIVE LIFE.

Most people can give blood through the American Red Cross. Potential donors must be at least 17 years of age, weigh 110 pounds or more and be in general good health. Most medications and medical conditions are acceptable — call for specific information on your particular situtation.

Blood drives are held seven days a week in communities where you live and work. Call 1-800-GIVE LIFE to find a drive near you.

To make your appointment to donate blood or if you have questions about donating blood, call 1-800 GIVE LIFE (800-448-3543) or visit www.newenglandblood.org.

Skippers try to get back in swing

By John Collins
JCOLLINS@CNC.COM

Starting off the week slow with a 4-1 loss against Duxbury and a 5-0 loss against Hingham, the Cohasset High boys tennis team looks to prepare themselves for the upcoming Div. 2 state tournament.

With the tournament around the corner the Skippers have prepared themselves for their first round game by scheduling tough out of league opponents.

Cohasset looks as if they will round out the year with a 9-9 record, meaning they will have to face a higher seeded team in the first round that will be a challenge to their season coming to a close.

"It all depends on who we end up facing in the first round," said coach Paul Carroll. "We can throw an upset; it just depends on the draw we get."

What will help the Skippers in this cause is the return of Victor Hartmann, as he gets healthy and resumes control of the first singles job.

"Adding a great player like Victor just boost the team's level to compete with the better teams," said Carroll.

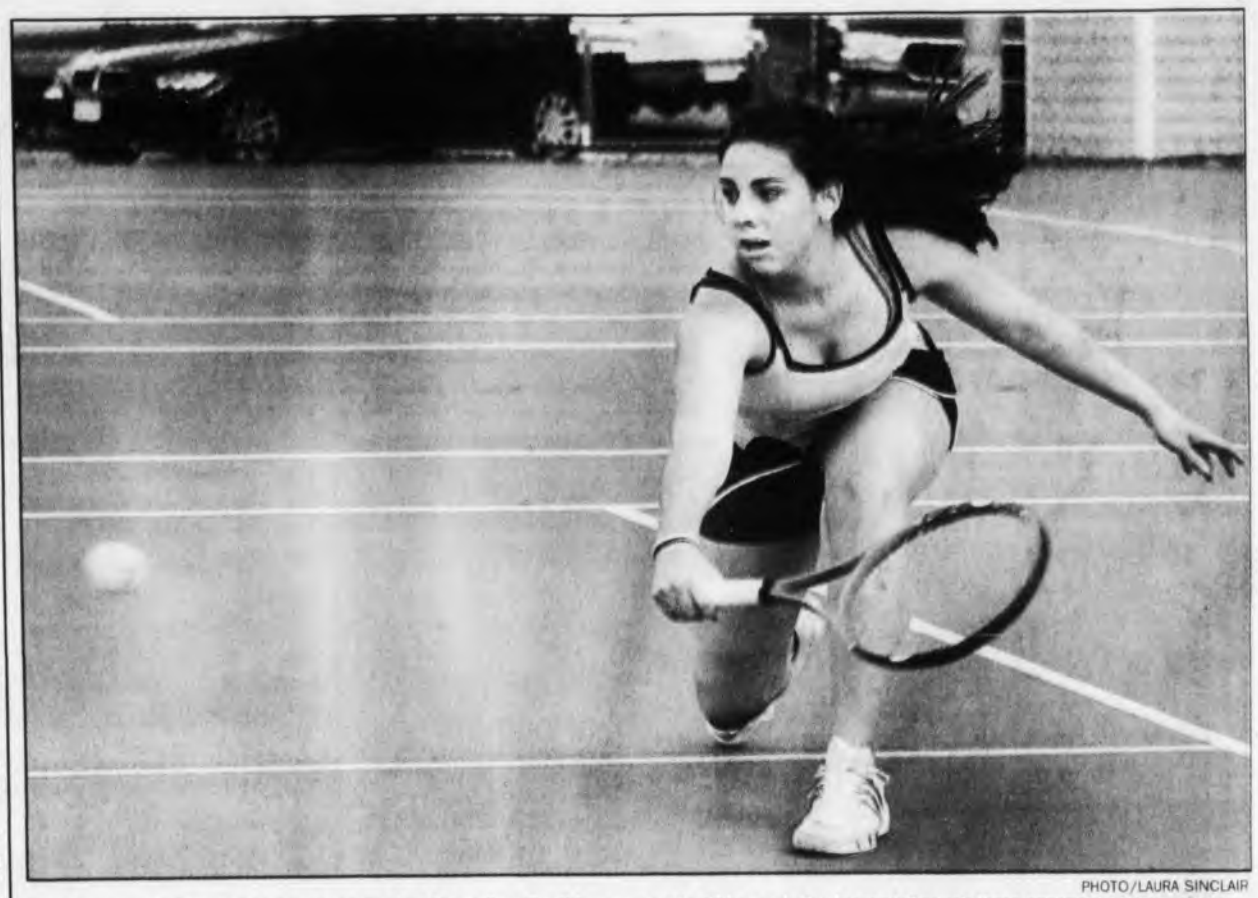
There has been noticed improvement over the past week, as the players have been working mainly on their positioning, especially in the doubles game.

After going through injuries, the rotation in the singles has returned to form for the tournament, as Hartmann will be at first singles, Blain Morin at second singles and Ryan Crough at third singles.

The doubles are also set, with the duo of Chris Donze and Ivan Sceery at first doubles, followed by a very strong second doubles team of Chris Akley and Mike Felby.

With two tough losses it is usually not a good sign for a team heading into the tournament, but Carroll has noticed some great things from the team.

"Their general attitude and work ethic has been impressive," he said. "This is not easy to do when you are getting beat this bad.



"But playing against better opponents brings out the best in your game."

The Skippers bring their A-game when the tournament comes around. Pairings will be announced on Wednesday and should be available that afternoon on the MIAA's postseason web site, miaa.ezstream.net.

CHS tops previously undefeated Hingham to improve to 16-1 going into tournament

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

It's pretty much guaranteed lately that any Cohasset/Hingham girls tennis match will result in a 3-2 score.

The two programs have had some wonderfully close matches in recent years, and Wednesday was no different. It could be expected, given the fact that Hingham was 18-0 and Cohasset 15-1 going into the contest.

Behind a sweep from singles players Meg Anderson, Sally Meehan and Maddie Altholtz, it was Cohasset that came out on top, 3-2 (of course).

The match of the day was a three-hour, three-set marathon at third singles. With the team scored at 2-2, it came down to Altholtz and her Hingham opponent to decide the match. The two split the first pair of sets, with Altholtz winning the first (6-4) and Hingham winning the second (5-7).

Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan, who was relieved that someone other than her daughter was playing in the decisive match for a change, said the third set came down to who would play the more aggressive (and successful) tennis.

"Someone had to take charge and start winning points, otherwise we'd be looking for a switch to turn the lights on," coach Meehan said.

Luckily, it didn't come to that, as Altholtz took control and won the set, 6-3. The Skippers freshman improved her singles record to 15-0 with the win.

Anderson (6-0, 6-1) and Sally Meehan (6-1, 6-2) earned Cohasset's other points. For Anderson, it was her third rather easy win in as many days against a good opponent. Aside from playing a certain star of the hard-court from Norwell, the Skippers junior first singles has been an

The great escape

After poor start, CHS softball qualifies for state tournament

Things were not looking good for the Cohasset High softball team after it lost its first four games of the year.

And even as recently as May 8, when the Skippers took a 4-8 record to Carver and found themselves down 8-4 through four innings of that game, Cohasset's state tournament hopes appeared dire.

But the girls in blue came back to win that game against the Crusaders, and they haven't stopped since, as Wednesday's win over Holbrook – their second over the Bulldogs in as many days – was their seventh in a row. At 11-8, Cohasset is in the Div. 3 tourney, with room to spare.

The Skippers clinched that berth with first Holbrook win on Tuesday. Christina Pinkus did a little of everything that day, knocking in three runs and getting the win on the mound with an eight-strikeout performance. Carly Salerno had three hits at the plate.

In last Thursday's 18-3 thrashing of Mashpee, Pinkus was again the star of the day, jacking a two-run homer (her fourth round-tripper in three games) and pitching well against the Falcons.

Two days prior, it was Virginia Spofford pitching the Skippers to a 17-2 win over Norwell. Spofford tossed a three-hitter and had two hits and two RBI at the plate. Christine Coner set the tone for the day with a three-run double in the first inning.

The Skippers tuned up for the postseason Thursday with a major test, as Patriot League power Hanover came to town for a game played after the Mariner went to press. Tuesday, the MIAA will put together the tournament brackets, which should be available that afternoon on the organization's postseason web site, miaa.ezstream.net.

Cohasset's Mark Flibotte scores against Hanover earlier this season.

The Cohasset High boys lacrosse team closed out its regular season with a convincing 18-10 victory over Div. 1 powerhouse Barnstable (now 14-5).

Mike Bunstein (five goals, four assists) and Mark Flibotte (five goals, one assist) treated the hearty Skipper fans who braved the cold and wind on Cape Cod to an offensive fireworks show. Bunstein scored four unanswered goals in the third period, including two in a row while the Skippers were a man down, to take the heart out of the Red Raiders.

Mike Grimm added three goals in limited action due to an elbow injury and Dan Trendowicz chipped in two goals and an assist. Sophomore middie Andrew DiPaolo scored his first two varsity goals.

Grimm opened the scoring for the Skippers with a nice shot after dodging from up top. Trendowicz stole a clearing pass and, after faking the Barnstable goalie high, buried the shot in the bottom corner.

automatic point for Cohasset this spring.

"Having that point definitely frees everybody else up to do their job without a lot of pressure," coach Meehan said. "Meg has really provided a nice foundation for the team. She's risen to the occasion of playing first singles. It's not easy to go from doubles (Anderson's position her first two years) to singles like that."

Against Hingham, the Skippers almost scored a fourth point via a strong performance from the first doubles duo of Elizabeth Landon and Maggie McGoldrick. Playing against a good, experienced Hingham team, Landon and McGoldrick won the first, 6-2. Hingham turned it up a notch and won the second set.

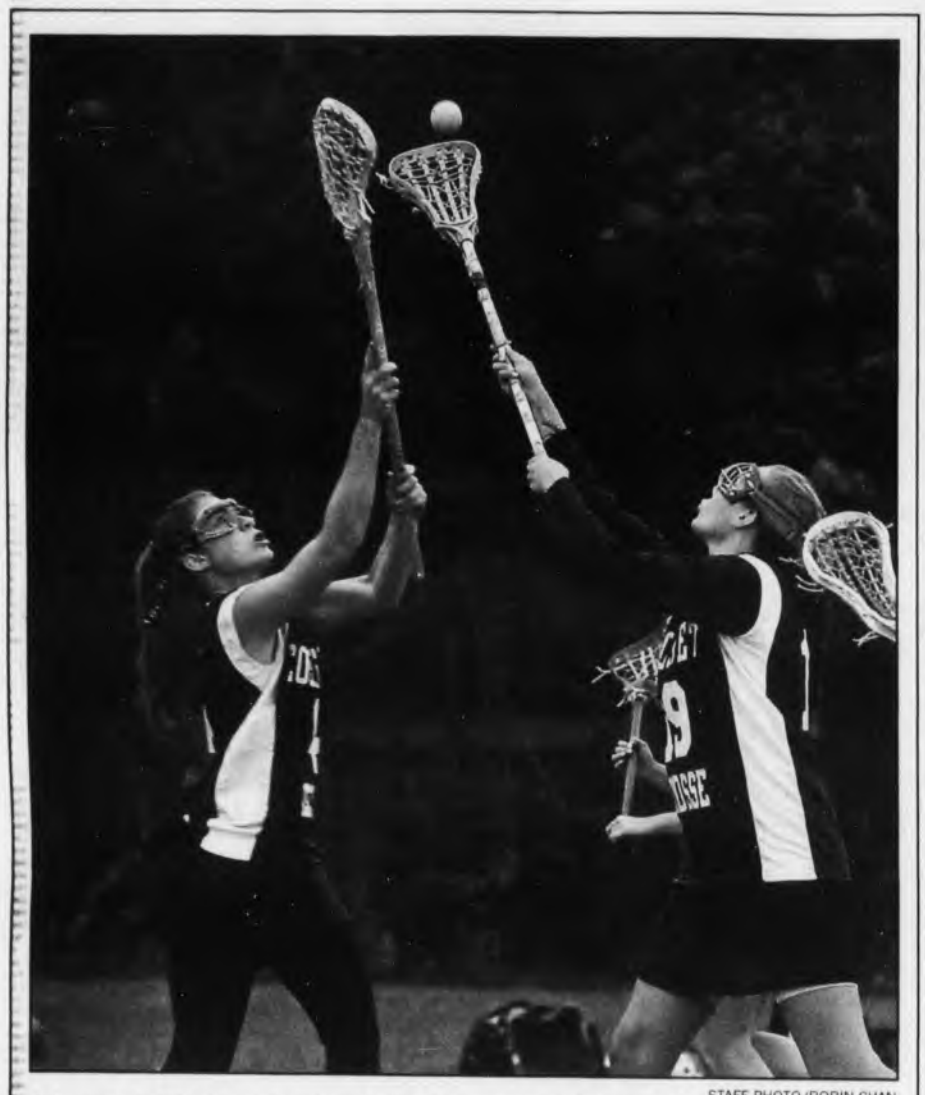
In the third, both teams attacked the net and went for winners with abandon. The Cohasset team appeared to have the upper hand whey they took a 5-3 lead, but Hingham's girls won the last four games to take the match.

The Skippers and Harborwomen faced off in a rematch Thursday after the Mariner went to press. After that, it's on to the state tournament. The MIAA will put together the brackets Wednesday morning and they should be available that afternoon on its postseason web site, miaa.ezstream.net.

Skippers 3, Westwood 2

Cohasset won its season opener against Westwood by a 4-1 score, but a lot of those matches were close, setting the stage for a competitive match on Tuesday.

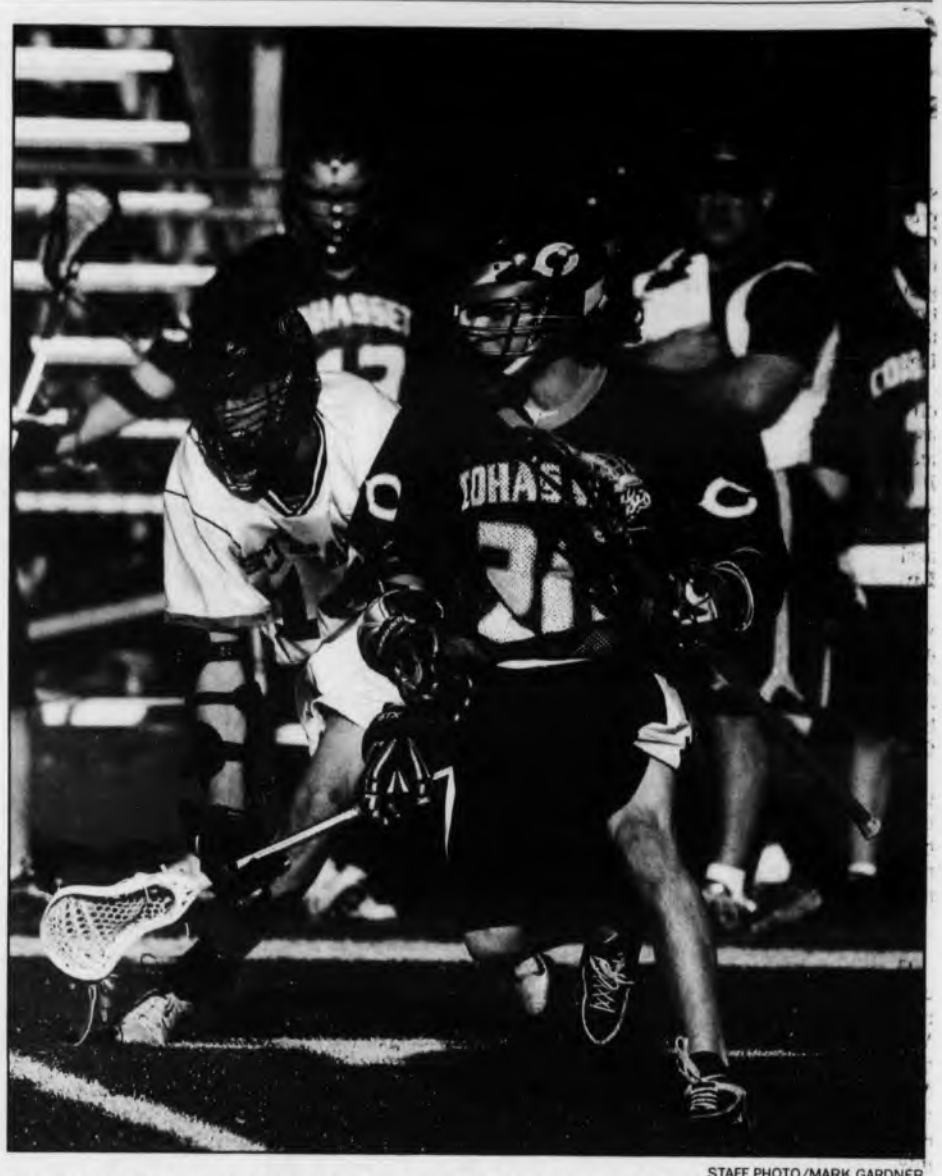
Again, it was the singles players that ruled the day for Cohasset. Anderson and Altholtz both won quickly, while Meehan had a longer two-set win, 7-5, 6-2. The Skippers junior was down 4-5 in the first set, but got it together and took control of the last half of the match.



Both doubles teams were competitive in their losses, with Landon and McGoldrick again going three sets, and second doubles Charlotte Landon and Jean Thomae playing tough in a 2-6, 4-6 loss.

Skippers 3, Duxbury 2

With Anderson and Altholtz winning easily, and Duxbury's doubles teams topping their Cohasset counterparts, it was Meehan's match at second singles that would decide it. Again.



After winning her first set and losing the second, Meehan decided it was time to simply out-hit her opponent, and she did so with a quick 6-1 win to clinch the match for Cohasset.

"It was a good match for her," said coach Meehan. "She's very confident in three-set matches because she knows her fitness level is such that she can go for three hours without getting winded."

After a Barnstable goal, Bunstein knocked down a clearing pass and found Grimm for a sidearm shot just inside the low far post. Defenseman Bobby Meilkeham stripped a Red Raider attackman and made a nice run upfield and pass to Bunstein. Bunstein assisted Flibotte who found the upper corner for a 4-1 Cohasset lead.

Grimm opened the second period with another blast to the lower corner. Goalie Nate Porter then made a beautiful stop at point blank range and quickly cleared the ball to senior co-captain Ryan Kucinski. Kucinski made a great run upfield with his long stick and found Flibotte on the crease with a pinpoint pass. Flibotte beat the goalie high to the near side. After two Barnstable scores, Bunstein assisted Flibotte from behind on the man-up and Flibotte found a streaking DiPaolo for his first varsity goal.

Barnstable inched closer with a quick goal to start the third period. After a Jeff Brown flip check and strip and a quick outlet pass to Trendowicz, Flibotte scored again. Porter kept Barnstable at bay with two highlight film stops at close range. Trendowicz then picked up a tough ground ball in traffic deep in the Cohasset defensive end and dodged the length of the field finishing with a highlight reel low to rising bullet to the upper corner.

Barnstable started a come back with two quick goals but Bunstein had a much different idea. He responded with a goal assisted by Brown and then quickly another goal unassisted dodging from behind. With Cohasset down a man, Bunstein picked up two successive field length "Hail Mary" clearing passes from Porter and streaked in alone on the Barnstable goalie for still two more Skipper scores and a 14-6 lead at the end of the third period.

Head coach Stew Curran praised his man down defense.

"Our guys have been outstanding after penalties throughout the year," he said. "Ryan Kucinski, Andrew Smith, Dan Trendowicz, Jeff Brown, Bobby Meilkeham, Conor Holway and Anthony DiPaolo (recently returning from injury) have been working very hard to be aggressive to the ball while still maintaining good position in the zone. They have pressured the other teams into making mistakes with the ball and often regained possession.

"A goal on man down is a rarity. Two in one game is amazing."

Cohasset continued the scoring onslaught in the final period. Both Bunstein and Andrew DiPaolo scored unassisted and then Bunstein found Flibotte again alone on the crease. Charlie Czerkawski ended the Skipper scoring with a 15-yard rocket to the upper corner.

Porter played one of his best games of the year in goal, finishing with 23 saves.

Cohasset's last regular season game against Concord, N.H. was cancelled on Saturday due to rain. The Skippers finished their regular season at 12-3.

Cohasset, ranked #5 in the state throughout all divisions, will likely return to action after Memorial Day as the number-1 seed with homefield advantage in the Div. 3 state tournament. The Skippers, of course, will be looking for their second state championship in a row.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse

Boys

U 15 Blue

The Blue squad took only its second loss of the season this past Sunday. Whether it was a rained out practice or the soaking the team endured during the game, the Blue Squad wasn't in typical form. On any other day, the boys would have bested the Hanover squad.

Down 3-1 going into half time on a goal by Derek Youngman, assisted by Morgan Grasz, the team made its usual adjustments. It picked it up in the second half scoring three goals, another by Youngman who added two assists, and two by Kyle Livingstone.

Jake Kissick, in a repeat of last week, produced another assist on a full field clear from his defensive position. After a bunch of near misses and some lucky bounces for the opponent, Cohasset lost 6–4.

The players showed good hustle and a willingness to help out in other positions as always. The boys will continue to practice their fundamentals and will finish the season strongly.

U15 White

The U-15 White took their explosive offensive show on the road to face a spirited Martha's Vineyard team. The boys from the mainland started out flat, with Mitch McNary (one goal) having several good looks at the goal early only to see the MV goalie thwart his efforts.

With the offense sputtering the defense stepped up to keep the Islanders at bay with several players stepping in to help (Johnny McGoldrick, Brennan Bukowski) Sam Leahy and Geoff Swain with the long poles. As usual, the defense was unflappable as Sam, Geoff et al continually stopped the MV advances. Thomas Flibotte was inspiring in goal, to the casual observer he looked like he had been between the pipes all season, giving up just two goals during the first half.

As the offense began to gain momentum the floodgates opened. Danny "CZ" Czerkawski (two goals, assist) scored on an assist from Flibotte (3-2), John Collins from Dean McNary (2-3), and Charlie Neaves from CZ.

The second half saw more of the same with everybody on the team getting involved as Pete McKenna took over between the pipes. The offense started where they left off with McGoldrick (2-1) and Sam Richardson (1-1) getting in on the action. Flibotte finished off the scoring on an assist from Bukowski.

All in all it was "great success" with an excellent team effort as there were only three unassisted goals out of the 13 scored by Cohasset.

U15 Black

The first quarter of play set the tone for the game as a defensive battle raged at both ends of the field. Middies and D's on both squads body checked and skillfully stick checked to continually knock the ball loose.

Bourne scored first on a fast break. A few minutes later, Brendan Horigan wrapped around from behind the net to drop in a goal over the goalie's outstretched arms to tie the game. Both teams were about even in picking up ground balls and taking face-offs.

In the second quarter, Cohasset dominated time of possession, ground balls, and even out-shot Bourne 7-4. Cohasset's defense, anchored by Matt Swanborg, Scott Wilson, Coleman Hernon and Patrick Dunn on the back line and sparked by great defensive play by Andew Whitney, Chris Lunde, and Alex Evans, thwarted Bourne's offense again and again. Bourne managed to get one in, though, and Cohasset was down 2-1 at halftime. Big E, Eric Wasel, was huge in the cage and saved eight shots in the first half.

Cohasset broke out of its scoring drought midway in the third quarter when Horigan, wrapping once again from behind the net, slammed in a goal to tie the game at two. Both defenses broke up multiple scoring opportunities throughout the third quarter until Bourne went ahead again with fifteen seconds left in the third.

Cohasset worked the ball well in the opening minutes of the fourth quarter. For the third time, Horigan took the ball from behind Bourne's net and fought his way around to the near post and shot in a tie-maker for a 3-3 score. Bourne took advantage of several Blue turnovers and went up 5-3 halfway through the fourth.

Cohasset could have let the momentum swing to Bourne, but elevated its own game instead. Following a battle of ground balls from the Cohasset end of the field down to the Bourne goal, Evans flicked a pretty feed to Mark Dick cutting into the crease. Mark pushed the ball between the goalie's feet and the score stood at 5-4.

Excitement was high on the sidelines as again and again the defenses denied scoring opportunity after scoring opportunity. With two minutes left, Dick took the ball on the goal line extended, worked the defender, and whipped a short pass to Horigan cutting down the middle. Brendan raised his stick high and put the shot in past the goalie's ear.

U13 Blue

Cohasset U13-Blue hosted Hanover in a wet contest this past Sunday at Milliken. The game was closely contested all afternoon long, as both teams battled under adverse weather conditions. The Cohasset boys had much to be proud of as they competed against an athletic and physical visiting team.

Cohasset netted the first two scores of the day, with White-squad guest player Nick Tangherlini scoring on a nice feed from Will Golden, followed by brother Dan Tangherlini scoring with an assist to Blair McGowan. Hanover answered with its first score of the day, but Cohasset answered back with Golden scoring unassisted. The score at the half was Cohasset 3, Hanover 1. Cohasset's first half goaltender, Tommy Powers, did a nice job controlling the crease area, assisted by some fine stick checks from defenseman Zach Strecker.

The second half saw tight defense and limited scoring chances. Mats Nelson stepped into the Cohasset cage for the second half and made a number of fine saves. Hanover did manage to net two in the third quarter, so the teams entered the fourth all even.

The fourth quarter saw the skies darken and a steady rain commence. Both teams had their scoring chances, with Cohasset hitting a couple of pipes. Hanover found its fourth goal halfway through the fourth quarter and held off a last minute offensive assault from the Cohasset squad to end up on top 4-3.

The team takes a Memorial Day respite this weekend and resumes league play on June 3 with an away game in Barnstable.

U13 White

The Boys U13 White team traveled to the Vineyard this past weekend dodging storms and challenging the high seas to make this bi-annual pilgrimage in the name of one America's only truly native sports. After enjoying great hospitality and an uneventful ferry ride, the U13 squad took the field against a very powerful looking island team that seemingly lost their appreciation for their guests quickly into the opening chapters of the game.

With Alex Kent demonstrating incredible prowess and effectiveness in the goal and a stingy defense led by Conor Green, Chandler Skolnick, Brendan Queenan and Jack O'Brien, the White team staffed off numerous strong pushes by the Vineyard to hold their opponents to four goals in the first half while the offensive units took control of the game and held a three-goal advantage at the midpoint.

Led by the middie corps of Mark Brown, Jimmy Maher, Zach Coggins, Evan Yeager, Derek Benson and Neil Durham, the kids were able to quickly transition the ball onto offense and set up many back of the netters in short order. Aided by the potent attack line-up of John Leahy, Andrew Fontaine, John Mills, and Axel Seppala and it looked as if the boys were becoming the guests that stayed too long.

However in the second half, the Vineyard team showed some great resolve and battled back into the contest behind a "man-child" that found his scoring stride and was able to slip several unanswered goals by us. With Brown stepping up big time in the cage to keep the game close and with excellent goaltending on the other side that thwarted repeated "sure goals" for Cohasset, the boys found themselves locked in an overtime struggle that came down to the very last seconds of play that ended on a broken play that found one of their players alone on the crease when he slipped a sniper shot into the back of the net to the roar of the island hometown crowd.

When you travel all that way, you always hope for a close contest and the team got everything it wished for in a great day of lacrosse, adventure, and fun.

U13 Black

An even game for the second, third and fourth quarters for the traveling Cohasset team at Bourne. Unfortunately, the home team got an early four-point lead in the first quarter that Cohasset was not able to overcome.

The attack unit showed great stick-handling and effective passing. Colin Whelan made three shots on cage and got two goals. Max Montgomery made five shots and contributed two assists. Charlie Steele made several feeds and mastered the "Charlie Play" for a goal as well as two shots.

The defense again flexed its muscle with strong checking and relentless pursuit of players and ground balls. Jack McElgunn and Jack Stanganelli broke up several plays, eliminated the passing game of Bourne and made several key clears. Teddy Patsos at point was the early man to break up fast break plays. Hamish Redfield has become a tenacious force with improved speed and determination. In the cage for the first half, Jim Lydon was tested by Bourne's unassisted shots.

The middies are the most improved part of the U13 Black team this season. Hunter Forrer won face-offs and ground balls. Drew Nahill made key shots after masterful dodges. Devin Kennedy ran through lines of opposition. Foster Eymer made a terrific goal. Anthony Nahill had an assist and a goal. Jack Leffel excelled on the defensive side with quick checking and grabbed a feed for a shot on cage.

Matt MacCormick raked in face offs and scooped ground balls to gain control of the ball for Cohasset. Will Lucas is rapidly becoming a force in the midfield with powerful checking and tireless speed. Jack Conte was a ball-control middie in the first half and made five saves as the goalie in the second half.

Penalties: one. As always Cohasset's young gentleman played a clear, sportsman-like game. Parents should be proud of this key statistic. Cohasset was a bit rusty from no practice this past week, it took the first quarter of play to find our game but from then we ran the field better than any game this season. Congrats to all for a great game.

U11 White

The U-11 White Boys team traveled to Martha's Vineyard for its annual island pilgrimage and came home with a victory as the reward for a long journey.

The team in purple proved to be a worthy opponent for Cohasset as the game was not decided until the final few minutes while both teams battled back and forth. Cohasset started the scoring with Connor Hayden who finished with a pair for day and one assist. Also finding the net were Adam Benson, Ryan McElhinney (two goals, one assist), Dan Axelson and Jack Donohue, who ripped one from the restraining line to help seal the "W".

With only two midfields, there were several tired players by the end of the day. Max Fitzgerald, Chris Lydon and Luke O'Brien spent a lot of time running down the ground balls and covering the length of the field. AJ Kucinski (assist), Sean Mavilia, Cole Morrison, Levante Haber and Owen Burchill controlled the ball on the offensive side and put real heat on the Vineyard defense when they were clearing the ball.

The Vineyard goalie was the best Cohasset had faced all season, but came out of the cage a few times too often as he was smothered by Cohasset's attack a few times and lost the ball. The heroes of this game were the defensive players, who as a unit played their best game of the year. Led by Mike Yerardi, who made half a dozen big-time plays to keep Vineyard's offense from scoring; the defense held their opponent to just four total scores.

Jake Burchill also made several plays taking the ball away

Summer Travel Baseball

The CYBSA Summer Baseball program runs from late June through early August; playing and traveling to other communities south of Boston. Tryouts for the CYBSA's summer travel baseball teams for league age 9, 10 and 11 year old players (born between May 1, 1995 and April 30, 1998) are scheduled for Thursday, May 31, at 3:15 p.m. at Barnes field.

With sufficient turnout, CYBSA hopes and expects to field teams in the District's A and B divisions at each of these age levels. Players who notify the league and register, but who are not at the tryout, will be eligible for any open spaces on the B division team.

In case of foul weather or for updated information, please check the web site, www.CYBSA.net. Questions can be directed to Joe Stanganelli or Liam O'Connell.

The CYBSA also fields an 8 and 12 yr old travel teams. Further information on those teams will be posted on the web site.

Swim and Dive team tryouts

Cohasset Swim Team tryouts will be held Monday, June 18 from 3-5 p.m. at the swim center pool. Swimmers must be 6 years of age by July 1, 2007 and no older than 17. There are limited openings this year.

Cohasset Dive Team tryouts will also be held on the 18th from 5-7 p.m. at the swim center pool. Rain date for tryouts for both swim and dive will be held Tuesday, June 19 with same times.

Summer basketball camps

Cohasset High School varsity basketball coach Dorian Bryant is pleased to offer two camps this summer for kids. The Big Man & Point Guard Perimeter Camp is an intensive four-day camp, July 10-13, for boys and girls in grades 7-12.

The Ultimate Development Camp is a two-day-a-week camp for five weeks, beginning July 2. Both camps are designed so that the camper receives quality instruction on basketball fundamentals. Don't miss out on this wonderful, new opportunity for basketball development.

Applications are at the Recreation Office at the Cohasset Town Hall or can be downloaded by going to www.cohassetbasketball.com. Go to Links/AAU Teams & Summer Camps/Cohasset Summer Basketball Camp.

Deadline for registration is June 20. Contact coach Bryant at dorianbry@aol.com.

Youth tennis lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department will be offering youth tennis lessons this summer for boys and girls ages 7 and older. This seven-week program starts Monday, June 25, or Tuesday, June 26, with one-hour lessons meeting twice per week on a Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule.

Various levels of instruction are available. The cost is $80 per participant. Registration will be held in Town Hall auditorium the week of June 11 as follows: June 11-14, 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m., or the evening of the 12th, 5 to 7 p.m.

You must register in person during the times listed above. If you know your swim and/or sailing schedule prior to registering for tennis, it will be helpful, as the Rec Department has more scheduling latitude than either swim or sailing lessons.

Scituate Tennis Tournament

The Fourth Annual Scituate Tennis Tournament will be held June 16 for doubles, June 23 for singles, both adults and juniors. The cost is $40 per doubles team, $30 per singles player, with benefits going to Scituate Tennis. There will be prizes for winners and finalists. Players of all levels are welcome.

Call 781-545-3396 for an application or information. Applications can be emailed or you may register by phone.

FROM LACROSSE, PAGE 19

from their attack and Cameron Steele, Nick Lydon and Cal Robbins delivered several cleared balls to Cohasset's offense. Last but by no means least, Ian Kennedy was in goal again for this game and made eight recorded saves on the day. Final score: Cohasset 7, M.V. 4.

U11 Blue (from May 13)

The Cohasset U11 boys went to Marshfield last weekend confident in their ability and determined to win. Everything came together minus a few tough breaks and missed shots as Cohasset suffered its second loss of the season, 5-2. As the score would suggest, this was a game played in the middle of the field, with great saves and turnarounds by the defense on both teams.

In the first quarter both teams started strong. Cohasset won the face-off and throughout won the majority of ground balls. Davis Cronin and Liam McHugh were tough in the midfield transition game and were able to advance the ball to Cohasset's attack for a goal by McHugh. On the next face-off Marshfield broke to the crease but Evan Canney and Harry Seraikas quickly cleared the ball to midfield. Throughout the game, Seraikas scooped, dodged and cleared the ball so well, if it were not for his efforts the game would have been one sided.

Seraikas was not alone in his skill and effort however. Jeff Powers and Ben Buckley continued to show great skill and patience and were strong throughout the first half. The Marshfield defense was hard to draw away from the crease during fast breaks and at the half the two teams were knotted at 1-1.

Marshfield beat Cohasset on two quick fast breaks for a 3-1 lead by the end of the third quarter. Curtis Golden was a powerhouse at the midfield line and the crease but was turned away after three great drives. Sam Arnold was also tough on ground balls. Arnold drove to the crease but was unable to find an open man and he too was denied access to a clean shot. Graham Schwandt made two great clears across the midfield. Hollis Honeywell and Conner Naughton were also strong contributors. Ross Erler made a number of great plays as well.

The forth quarter however was not good to Cohasset. With the desire to win Cohasset lost its patience. Unable to find open attackmen Cohasset was forced to drive deep into the crease. Each time the Marshfield defense stripped the ball and cleared the ball the clock simply didn't give Cohasset the time to make up the difference.

RECREATION NOTES

Boot Camp fitness training starts June 12

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a variety of sports programs during the summer of 2007, designed specifically and individually for boys and girls, ages 4 through 18. All programs have individual applications, should you wish to register for any of these programs, call the Recreation Dept. office at 781-383-4109, or stop by the office on the first floor of Town Hall. Programs are limited in size. To insure acceptance into a program, register as soon as possible. Family discounts are available for some programs. Sports programs are scheduled to meet regardless of weather conditions in most cases and should it be necessary to move into the High School, you will be notified at drop-off time for the status that day.

Boot Camp – Boot Camp fitness training classes will be instructed by Betsy Callanan. This unique physical training opportunity will meet from 6 to 7 a.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays, starting Tuesday, June 12, for 10 weeks through Thursday, Aug. 16, on Cohasset Common in front of Town Hall. The fee for the 20 class sessions is $100, and checks can be made payable to the Town of Cohasset. Ms. Callanan will run an interval callisthenic and running fitness program for both men and women for all levels of ability. While running and/or walking remains an essential aspect of this cardio-vascular training format, inclusive will be various integrated calisthenics such as jump roping, stairs or hills, squat thrusts, lunges, push-ups, skipping/running knees, sit ups, etc. Ms. Callanan has designed this program to improve cardio-vascular endurance and strength. Dress in layers as weather conditions dictate, bring a water bottle and jump rope to class and wear running shoes. Success in this class is based upon your individual personal best, not as competition with others.

Dance with Caroline – A dance workshop will be held for youth ages 7 and older from 3 to 4:30 p.m., Monday, June 18 through Thursday, June 21, in the Town Hall auditorium. The class, directed by Caroline Carr, will include basic jazz and hip hop dance techniques. Emphasis will be placed on developing a healthy, active lifestyle, building strength, flexibility, and endurance, as well as feeling good and having fun. Participants are encouraged to dress in comfortable clothing and take a bottle of water, a snack and an open mind to class. The fee is $80 per participant. Registration forms are available in the foyer of the Town Hall or by calling the Recreation Department.

Youth Tennis – Youth tennis will begin Monday, June 25, and continue for seven weeks, through Friday, Aug. 10. Registration will be held from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 3 p.m., Monday June 11 through Wednesday, June 13 and an evening registration will be held from 5 to 7 p.m., Tuesday, June 12. The program is offered for children ages 7 through 18 years. Participants can choose from two schedules, Mondays and Wednesdays or Tuesdays and Thursdays. The fee for the seven-week session is $80 per person. Lessons for beginners, intermediate, and advanced players are offered. Rain day policy: If it rains before 9 am, all tennis classes may have to be canceled for that day. Call the Recreation Office at 781-383-4109 for weather status reports. Fridays are rain make-up days.

South Shore Baseball Club – Held Monday, June 25 through Friday, June 29, at Milliken Field. Ages 7 to 12 will meet from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Fee: $185. Ages 5 to 7 will meet from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Fee: $125. Directed by Frank Niles of the South Shore Baseball Club.

South Shore & Cape Basketball Academy –Held Tuesday, July 10 through Friday, July 13, in the Cohasset High School gym. Boys and girls in grades 7 to12, meet from 9 a.m. to noon. Fee: $125. Directed by Dorian Bryant, CHS Varsity Basketball Coach.

South Shore Basketball School – For ages 8 to15, this program meets in the Cohasset High School gym from Monday, July 16 through Friday, July 20. Youths ages 8 to 11 will meet from 8:30 to11:30 a.m. and youth ages 12 to15 will meet from 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. Fee: $125. Directed by Ron Ford, Cohasset Athletic Director.

Boys and Girls Lacrosse Clinic – For youth in grades 3 to 6, this clinic will be held Monday, July 23 to Friday, July 27, from 8 to 10 a.m., at Milliken Field. Fee: $85. Directed by Jamie and Ronan Buick.

Soccer Squirts South Shore Soccer Camp – This camp for ages 4 to 6 will take place from 8 to 9:30 a.m., Monday, July 30 through Friday, Aug. 3, at Milliken Field. The fee of $95 includes ball and camp shirt. Directed by SSSC member, Jon Anderson, Babson College coach.

Excited to be taking over column

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTINE KENT

Greetings readers! Since I will be taking over the writing of this column for the balance of this school year and all of next year, I guess I should start with a brief introduction. I am a junior at Cohasset High School, I play field hockey, and when the opportunity presents itself, I love to go surfing. Personality-wise, I'm a bit of a goof with a quirky sense of humor that may show up in this column from time to time.

I'm extremely excited to be taking the role of writing "Life at CHS" for the Cohasset Mariner. Thanks to Mike Corry, Roxanne Tehranian, and especially to Ms. Berman and Mary Ford who put their faith in an unknown writer! To be honest, I am actually quite apprehensive at the thought of having my work read by so many people. With that said, I will be grateful for any comments or critiques that come my way as I learn the ropes. This is going to be an adventure (at least for me) so sit back, relax, and enjoy reading about what's going down at CHS.

Now, for some of the main events that happened this week:

- Unfortunately, on Tuesday, Grades 6, 7, 8, and 10 had to suffer through the math MCAS (sorry guys but just wait until SATs come knocking).
- The torture continued on Wednesday, with more MCAS for the middle school and grade 10.
- And as if the SATs and ACTs were not enough, grade 11 endured the pain of taking the history MCAS. Obviously, we cannot forget, THE SENIORS had their LAST DAY of school! (Let's hope they all managed to make it to the assembly without SKIPPING).
- Friday will be jam packed with everything from student council speeches to SENIOR PROM at the ever so lovely Venezia Waterfront Restaurant.
- JUST A HEADS UP! On June 9th, at 7 pm there will be a talent show held in the auditorium, which was organized by none other than fellow junior, Amanda Simpson. The proceeds will go to Relay For Life, so let's go out and show our support!

Well, that's it for this week's column. Good luck to all you seniors and your parents after 12-plus years of the public school system you are finally free! No worries underclassmen it will be our turn soon enough, in the mean time let's live it up. Have a great weekend everyone!

Parents of the Cohasset School District are invited to attend a presentation on The A.P.P.L.E. Project at 7:30 p.m., on June 5, at Osgood School Library, behind Deer Hill School.

Advancing Parent-Professional Leadership in Education – The Apple Project and strong and effective parent-professional collaboration improves results for children under IDEA. One of the most frequently expressed concerns by parents and professionals focuses on the difficulty of building these collaborative working relationships in special education planning.

Such a partnership arises out of:

- A shared goal for the child.
- Mutual trust.
- Cultural competence.
- Effective communication and problem-solving skills.
- A clear vision with high expectations for student achievement.

Once learned, these attitudes and skills must be continually improved through practice in the context of school environments, early intervention programs and post-secondary or employment settings.

The A.P.P.L.E. Project will provide collaborative school system teams with training that will allow parents of children receiving special education services to learn skills that will help them become full and effective partners with their schools. Sponsored by PSO/PAC, all workshops and presentations are free.

For those who can't attend the meeting that would like more information about the project, can email southshorepac@comcast.net.

Phil Berstein of Phil's Fitness First stretches with the runners before the race.

Rain didn't dampen fun run!

The First Cohasset Kid's Fun Run took place Saturday, May 19, on the Town Common in Cohasset. A total of 85 die-hard runners ranging from ages three to eight showed up in the rain to run the first running of the event. The kids had a blast and for many it was their first official road race. They were registered and given bib numbers and T-shirts to wear.

The South Shore Community Center Nursery School and Phil's Fitness First Plus off Route 3A in Cohasset hosted the event. The race co-directors were Kelly Grech, Vicky Grimes, Laura Ritz, Jackie Stephens, Becky Mattey and Betsy Toomey. They are a group of mothers who love to run and wanted to give the kids a day out that was about exercise and positive healthy competition where each runner got to compete and receive a medal upon completion of their event regardless of their time. The goal was simple - they told the runners to go out and run their course to the best of their ability - all 85 succeeded.

The kids didn't even notice the rain. They began the day by having a group stretch session with Phil Bernstein of Phil's Fitness First. At 2 p.m. sharp the races began. The three-and four-year-olds ran 150 yards, the five-and six-year-olds ran 200 yards and the seven-and eight-year-olds ran just under a half a mile. All 85 kids finished their race and received their medal and many came back to the start line to run the course a second time.

There was a touch-a-truck event in the town hall parking lot that coincided with the Fun Run. In addition, Dr. Julie Mitterando of Cohasset hosted a healthy habits tent, providing information about healthy eating and helmet safety, which is important now that bike season is upon us.

The following business served as corporate sponsors: Phil's Fitness First, Bowen Advisors, Graham Waste Services, Cohasset Collision, James Clark Electric Inc., Hingham Institute for Savings, Learning Express, Sovereign Bank, Goodwin Graphics, Cohasset Family Practice and Marathon Sports.

A taste of what Ireland has to offer

By Max Bowen
MBOWEN@CNC.COM

Ireland is a country of unmatched natural beauty, fascinating history, and home to the best pint of Guinness around.

For 10 days my family and I toured the area around the city of Cork, seeing sights that will stay with us forever and learning about the history behind this fascinating country.

Our first stop, after recovering from the jet lag of course, was the Cork City Gaol, a prison that housed criminals of all kinds, from cloth cap thieves to habitual drinkers. Mannequins of prisoners and guards were spread throughout the facility, and each looked frighteningly real through the lens of my camera.

Back when the gaol was built, crime was sometimes seen as a disease, with prayer the cure. Whippings were administered to the younger inmates, and some newborns were brought into the world within the stone walls of the prison.

Cork is a large city with a population of almost 120,000 people. There is a large and bustling business district that puts the best of Boston's shopping to shame. During the week we spent in Ireland, we were treated to an outdoor art festival while touring the city, which included a couple Irish rappers. My brother David, who is currently living in Cork, served as tour guide and driver.

One of the most astonishing sights was St. Finbarre's Cathedral, named after the city's patron saint. The cathedral stretches high into the sky, and reliefs of apostles adorn the front of the building. Inside, it's hard not to be struck breathless by the gorgeous construction and mosaics that adorn the walls. In 1865 the steeple was demolished by a 24-pound cannonball, which is on display in the cathedral.

Cork was just the start of our journey. We visited the small town of Reinn in the county of Waterford, home of my grandfather's cousin, Deuglan and his wife Siobhan, who own a small bed and breakfast which doubles as their home. The town overlooks the Atlantic, providing a majestic view during the day. Deaglan told us such home-based hotels are common in Ireland, although some are being forced to close due to the encroachment of corporate-owned establishments.

A bird's eye view of the area surrounding Blarney Castle. A scenic nature trail surrounds the legendary structure, along with several natural rock formations, such as the Druid Circle and Witch's Hat.

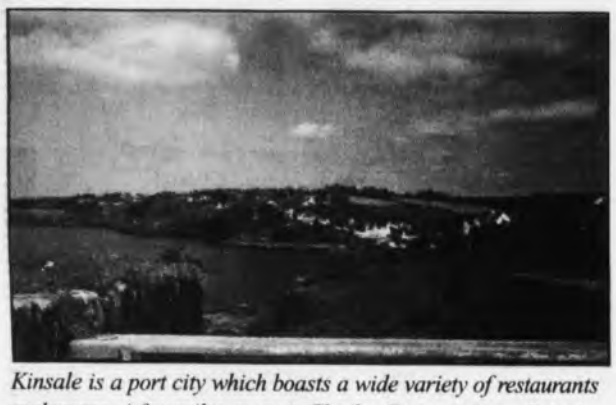
During our trip we also paid a visit to Blarney Castle. I went with every intention of kissing the fabled stone, purported to give the gift of eloquence to any brave enough to pucker up. The one small detail which no one thought important to mention was that the stone was at the very top of the castle, almost 200 feet off the ground. The view from the top was breathtaking, and a little unnerving.

The castle originally dates from before 1200 A.D. It was destroyed in 1446, but subsequently rebuilt by Dermot McCarthy, King of Munster. As we walked a narrow, winding staircase, we passed by rooms used as a kitchen, bedrooms, and dining hall. Looking through thin windows no doubt used as arrow slits, we saw the vast fields and countryside of the town of Blarney.

After my little make-out session with the stone, we walked through the extensive gardens and paths around the castle. There are several natural rock formations which have been given such fanciful names as the Druids Circle and Fairy Glade. At the Wishing Steps, the legend goes that if you walk backward up the steps with your eyes closed, your wish will come true. My only wish was that I didn't fall and give my noggin a knocking.

Rolling hills and fields of green not found on the South Shore account for much of the landscapes we saw. Apparently when the Celts first came to this country, they clear-cut much of the forests with no foresight to the consequences. As a result of the lack of lumber, many of the houses are built out of stone, and erosion has become a serious problem.

The government has started a preservation program which pays people to plant and maintain new trees. It's quite a sight seeing the large expanse of fields interposed with small patches of trees, quite in contrast to home.



On the Ring of Kerry tour, we got a chance to see much of this beauty, as well as several herds of cattle and sheep. In some of the smaller towns, homes are surrounded by vast fields of green, with the nearest city a long drive away.

Ireland is home to the Waterford Crystal company. We took a tour of the facility, and got a chance to see the glassblowers and carvers in action. Our guide said that some pieces can take over a day to make. The business was founded in 1783 by William and George Penrose.

Among the company's products are the crystal for the New Year's Eve Ball that is dropped at Times Square. Waterford also crafts the trophies for many sporting events, such as the tennis Masters Series tournaments. The guide mentioned that while the trophies are made well in advance of the event, names of the winners aren't added until a few minutes before the award ceremonies. It's said the crafters often pray that the winner has a short name or one that's easy to spell.

Leaving Ireland was hard to do, and not just because of the time change. It's a unique country, and sadly, we were only able to see a small fraction of what it has to offer.

Still, that gives me all the more reason to visit it again.

Kinsale is a port city which boasts a wide variety of restaurants and stores. A few miles away is Charles Fort, used as a British Army barracks until the end of British rule in Southern Ireland.

Charles Fort, built in the 1670's, was well-situated for repelling invaders coming by sea. Due to the rolling hills surrounding it, however, land-based attackers had the edge. The fort, named after Charles II, fell out of use after being burned by the retreating anti-Treaty forces during the Irish Civil War in 1922.

CEF Spring Benefit a huge success

Saturday, May 19, the Cohasset Golf Club was full to capacity as more than 300 people came out in support of the Cohasset Education Foundation's Spring Benefit to celebrate the Cohasset Schools. Those who attended enjoyed an evening featuring performances by the Cohasset High School Jazz ensemble and live and silent auctions led by auctioneer Jim Wells. Chris Oddleifson, President of the CEF, remarked "the response from the community has been overwhelming...together we are really making a positive difference in the quality of education here in Cohasset."

The highlight of the evening came with the announcement that the CEF, in conjunction with the PSO, are completing the funding of a $75,000 Middle School Engineering Lab. This is the largest gift that the CEF or the PSO has ever made and will enable Middle School students to advance their science, engineering and technology skills.

Since November of 2006, generous support from the community has enabled the CEF Endowment Fund to reach $125,000 and the Project Fund to make five grant awards possible to the Cohasset Public Schools. Proceeds from the Benefit will be distributed between the Endowment Fund and the Project Fund. Both these long-term and short-term giving options benefit our kids, our town and our future. For more information about the CEF, or to learn about volunteer opportunities, please visit www.cohassteducation.org.

Charles Miller, a senior at Cohasset High and jazz ensemble member, entertains the crowd at the CEF benefit.

Paul and Susan McHugh enjoy the evening at the Cohasset Golf Club.

Lisa and Kevin Dooley bid during the live auction. Money raised from the event benefits Cohasset schools.

Maggie and Jeff Moy share a laugh during the popular CEF event.

Kate Krumseik, Suellen Durkin, Jenn Durkin and Leisa Legge visit during the CEF Spring Benefit.

Jim McKeon, Kevin O'Brien, Nancy Froio and Kevin Dooley enjoy the evening.

Mark Kissick, Katie Dunn, Elizabeth Kissick and Nora Speer are all smiles at the event.

CEF benefit co-chairs Catherine O'Callaghan and Pam Wilson.

National Recreational Water Illness Prevention Week

These outbreaks underscore the continuing need to educate people about recreational water illness prevention to ensure a healthy swimming experience.

The week of May 21 to 27, which precedes Memorial Day, has been designated as National Recreational Water Illness Prevention Week. The goal of this year's recognition is to highlight the importance of healthy swimming behaviors for preventing recreational water illnesses. Outbreaks of recreational water illnesses continue to occur in the U.S. each year.

Sixty-two percent of these outbreaks are related to the chlorine-resistant pathogen, cryptosporidium, also referred to as crypto, which is introduced into the pool by swimmers who are ill with diarrhea and spread to other swimmers when they swallow the contaminated water. These outbreaks underscore the continuing need to educate people about recreational water illness prevention to ensure a healthy swimming experience.

Awareness of recreational water illnesses (RWIs) and healthy swimming behaviors play an important role in stopping transmission of RWIs. Germs on and in swimmers' bodies end up in the water and can make other people sick. Even healthy swimmers can get sick from RWIs, but the young, elderly, pregnant women and immuno-suppressed persons are especially at risk.

The following specific actions should be taken to promote healthy swimming: Do not swim when you have diarrhea; do not swallow pool water or get pool water in your mouth; shower before swimming – yes, children too; wash your hands after using the toilet or changing diapers; take children on bathroom breaks or change diapers often and change children's diapers in a bathroom, not at poolside.

Recreational water venues are important sites for exercise and leisure. To make this summer a healthy swimming experience, the Cohasset Board of Health and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention urge swimmers to continue to enjoy swimming, but only after adopting healthy swimming behaviors to reduce the risk of recreational water illnesses.

For information about Recreational Water Illness Prevention Week and Healthy Swimming, contact the Board of Health office; Tara Tradd at 781-383-4116 or visit www.cdc.gov/healthyswimming.

OBITUARIES

Madeline E. Wheelwright

Founded and operated the Red Ranch

Madeline E. (Lapham) Wheelwright, 94, of Cohasset, died Friday, May 18, 2007, at home of congestive heart failure.

Born and raised in Brockton, she graduated from Brockton schools and found work in a shoe factory. Mrs. Wheelwright loved horses so much that she started and operated a riding stable, the "Red Ranch" throughout the 1950's at her home on Mill Lane. She was also able to enjoy her other animals, which included her cats, dogs, and birds. She lived in Cohasset since 1946 and was an inspiration to all with her independence, her insights, her utter lack of complaining and her tenaciousness to live life to the fullest right up to the end.

She is survived by her son, Dustin E. Wheelwright and his children, Jake and Hayley Wheelwright; her daughter Lanie Sullivan; three grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Madeline E. Wheelwright

Funeral Services will be private. Arrangements were handled by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, in Cohasset.

Jennie M. Larivee

Enjoyed writing children's stories

Jennie M. Larivee, 86, of Northwood, N.H., died May 18, 2007, at Epsom Healthcare Center in Epsom, N.H.

Born in Calais, Maine, she was the daughter of the late Ellison G. and Sarah (Waddingham) Green.

Mrs. Larivee worked as a waitress in her father's restaurant on the South Shore in her younger years, and also was employed in an electronics company where she assembled small parts, and at a dry cleaners. When she retired she worked briefly at the library, in a nursing home and at White Pines College.

She enjoyed crocheting for many years. Mrs. Larivee also enjoyed writing children's stories.

She leaves her husband, Paul Larivee; her son, James E. Dunn of Martha's Vineyard; her daughters, Susan Achille of Hingham and Lisa Alsopp of Brockton; her brothers, John Green of Scituate and Daniel Green of Cohasset; her sisters, Ida Benjamin of Bryantville and Barbara Carvalho of Charlotte, N.C.; five grandchildren; six great-grandchildren; and one stepdaughter, Maria L. Larivee.

A memorial service was held at Purdy Memorial Chapel, Lee, N.H., with the Rev. John Loughnane of St. Joseph Church in Northwood officiating.

WORSHIP GUIDE

Beechwood Congregational Church, 51 Church St. 781-383-0808. Pastor: Douglas Fish; director of children's ministry: Barbara Fish. Sunday Service and Sunday School at 10 a.m. followed by a fellowship. Bible study every Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. Choir rehearsal: 9 a.m. Sunday.

First Parish Unitarian Universalist on Cohasset Common, 23 North Main St. (Parish House). 781-383-1100. www.firstparishcohasset.org Minister: the Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull. Director of Religious Education: Nan Moore. Interim Choir Director: Jeanne Scammell. Interim Organist: Carolyn Bates; Alternate Interim Organist/Accompanist: Maureen Hague. Parish Administrator: Sandy Bailey. Parish Committee Chair: Mary Parker.

We welcome all to our inclusive spiritual community. We affirm our Unitarian Universalist Principles and put them into action by worshiping together, caring for one another, and working for a safe, just, and sustainable world.

Sunday, May 27: – 10 a.m. - Worship in the Meeting House "A Service of Remembering: With This Flower/Through This Story"

For this Memorial Day Sunday, bring a few flower stems from your yard and garden. Bring a story or two of someone you have lost who holds sacred space in your heart. Bring a story of someone who has fought in a war, someone who has resisted war, or someone who has simply lived and loved. Bring a story for sharing.

Led by our minister, we will enter a service of remembering, bringing our flowers to the altar, each becoming a stem of a garland that will take shape as our stories take shape. Through story, flower, song, prayer, and silence, we will honor the memories of those who have passed on and who live on in our hearts and how our own lives unfold.

Religious education classes for our toddlers and childcare for our youngest begin at 10 AM in the Parish House. Please encourage your children and teens to create letters and gather gifts for Bill Baird, Jr., who is serving in Iraq. Place the items in Nan Moore's office with a note to Bill. On this Memorial Day Sunday, we'll put together a package to send to him.

Refreshments and fellowship in Trueblood Hall will follow the morning service and RE classes.

Monday, May 28 – Memorial Day – Church offices will be closed.

All are welcome as we worship and learn and live our faith together! To learn more about First Parish Unitarian Universalist, please come by the Parish House and pick up the current monthly newsletter, The Common, or visit our website at www.firstparishcohasset.org or contact Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull, Minister, at 781-383-1100.

Rising through the ranks

Country star kicks off summer season at Music Circus

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Trace Adkins

A decade into his career, Trace Adkins can lay claim to some very significant success — including hit records and top-selling albums. Two of the honors that have come the country singer's way, however, have left him just a bit overwhelmed.

"I was both humbled and honored when I was named a member of the Grand Ole Opry. It had always seemed like unattainable recognition to me. When I heard about it, I was very surprised. I wasn't sure I had really done anything to deserve it," said Adkins last week by telephone from Savannah, Ga.

The Louisiana native felt similarly this spring when he received the 2007 USO Merit Award for his dedication to helping the soldiers. Adkins — who opens the 56th season at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset on June 14, paid homage to America's armed forces in his song "Arlington" on his 2005 album "Songs About Me," and he traveled overseas to give concerts for the troops, but still says he never expected to receive special recognition for his efforts.

"What I have done is so miniscule and trivial compared to what our troops and the people who serve this country do every day that I felt genuinely hesitant and anxious when I heard about this honor. Everybody likes a pat on the back, of course, but this was given to me at a big bash in Washington, D.C., in front of Laura Bush and the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. It was really quite an overwhelming event."

That Adkins, 45, is still down-to-earth may be a testament to his days as a pipe fitter on an offshore oil drilling rig.

"I'm truly a fortunate person. My hobby became my career," says Adkins, who moved to Nashville in 1992 and worked construction while playing honky tonk bars at night waiting and hoping for his big break, which came in the mid-1990s when he was signed by Capitol Records.

In the years since, Adkins has released eight albums on the label, the latest of which, "Dangerous Man," debuted at number one and included his third number one country single, "Ladies Love Country Boys." It became the latest in a string of hits — including "Every Light in the House Is On," "Hot Mama," "Rough and Ready" and "Honky Tonk Badonkadonk" — that have established Adkins as a country music star who plans to get to the top with his working-class sensibility intact.

"I haven't cracked the upper echelon of country music, but I still have that goal in my sights. I wouldn't mind being the one taking home all the awards, but I also know that my career in this business is a finite thing. It is one of the things being a member of the Opry has shown me. I get to pick the brains of the elder statesmen about what it was like for them when they reached the point that they could no longer perform at the highest level. Some of them accept where they are today and others are very bitter that they no longer get radio play. Personally, I come at this whole thing from an old jock perspective. There is going to come a point where you just won't be performing at the highest level. You won't always be able to compete. When that time comes, I'll be fine with it," explains the father of five children, ages 2 to 22. "I've lived in Nashville for 15 years now, but my lifestyle really hasn't changed that much. The only real difference is that I don't have to worry about how I'm going to pay my bills."

If record sales are any indication, Adkins has many good years ahead of him. His latest album scored him the biggest first-week sales in his career. The third single, "I Wanna Feel Something," from the already gold-certified album was released just three weeks ago and has already become a Top 40 hit.

Adkins was one of the producers on the ballad, which looks at the need to overcome complacency.

"I wanted to call it 'The Apathy Song.' What it takes to shock us these days would have killed our grandparents. We've become so numb to everything going on around us that we can eat dinner during the evening news. With what's making news these days, we shouldn't be able to do that. We're bombarded with so much tragic news and information that it requires something truly catastrophic to really get our attention. I think that's very unfortunate."

What is fortunate for Adkins's growing legion of listeners is that he is not only on tour this summer, but he is also well underway with work on his next recording.

"We've got about six songs done for the next album. We recorded them this winter when we weren't out on the road. On every album I make, there is a little bit of everything and the next one won't be any different. I've always taken a Ronnie Milsap approach to making records. On his albums he always includes several different styles of music so people don't know what to expect. I try to do the same thing, so they can't put me in a box. I like it that way."

Adkins also likes his career in the music business, and doesn't plan a return to his earlier pursuits.

"I've gotten to the point where I am going to have to continue with this, because I couldn't pass the physical to do anything else."

(Trace Adkins opens the 2007 season at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier S., Cohasset, on Thursday, June 14. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-383-9850 or go online at www.themusiccircus.org.)

The return of the annual Spring Planting Moon Native American Pow-wow and Celebration to the Marshfield Fairgrounds will give area residents the opportunity to learn about Native American cultures directly from members of several different tribes. Visitors will learn about the spiritual and agricultural aspects of the lives of Native Americans during the three-day festival Memorial Day weekend. Featured groups include the Wolf Cry Singers, the Wampanoag Nation Singers and Dancers from Mashpee on Cape Cod, Native artist Marlene Blake of the Mashpee Wampanoag Tribe will demonstrate "finger weaving." Native American drumming and singing will be performed by the Iron River Singers of southeastern Massachusetts and the Eastern Suns from Mashpee; Lorii Moondream and Peter White Fox of Shutesbury will offer craft making of Lakota Bone Chokers; and there will be Iroquois Songs and Social Dances by Little Tree of Rhode Island. Arts and crafts will be for sale, including MicMac baskets. Other Native items include flutes, herbs, sterling silver and turquoise jewelry, mandellas, dreamcatchers, beaded jewelry, stone carvings, wall paintings, vases, fans, rattles and blankets. Native foods will give visitors a taste of the culinary aspects of life along with hot dogs and hamburgers. The festival runs Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, May 27-29, from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily. Admission is $5 for adults, $4 for seniors and MCNAA members, $2 for children ages 6 to 12 years, and free to children 5 years and under. Parking is free.

Craft making and storytelling will take place in front of the tipi.

Movie review

Still onboard with 'Pirates'

Pirates of the Caribbean: At World's End (B+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Jack Sparrow (Johnny Depp) and Will Turner (Orlando Bloom) lead a gnarly crew of pirates into battle.

Arrgh, this is one, long, pirate movie, me laddies.

At 2 hours and 35 minutes, plus another 10 if you stay for the credits, and you should, me matey, because there is a coda, "Pirates of the Caribbean: At World's End" is a long keelhaul for ordinary mortals and children with overactive bladders. If some of the zing has gone out of pirating, I'd still rather hoist the colors with Jack Sparrow (Johnny Depp), Will Turner (Orlando Bloom), Elizabeth Swann (Keira Knightley), Hector Barbossa (Geoffrey Rush) and Davy Jones (Bill Nighy) than with the denizens of Spidey's New York City or Shrek's Far Far Away.

Why? Because when you get down to it, it's not the special effects, the explosions-per-minute or the hype that matters.

It's the actors, and when you get past the tattoos, scars, skin rashes, blooming noses, crustaceous eruptions and rotted flesh, this scurvy-looking crew is pound-for-pound the best in any modern franchise. Even Keith Richards takes to acting like an old salt (and I mean old). On this outing, pirates and their friends are dancing the hempen jig, thanks to the hissable Lord Cutler Beckett (Tom Hollander), Captain of the Endeavor.

Will and Elizabeth are in Asia securing a crew and a ship from Singapore pirate Sao Feng (Chow Yun-Fat with shaved head, fu manchu facial hair and crosshatching scars) in order to seek Jack Sparrow. Jack was swallowed by the Kraken at the end of the previous installment and has been trapped in Davy Jones' Locker, a place suggesting a piratical version of "Being John Malkovich." Will and Elizabeth need Jack and the Black Pearl to thwart Becket and his otherwordly ally, the "tentaclely" Davy Jones, Captain of the ghost ship, The Flying Dutchman.

Jones' marvelous, metamorphosing crew is back, too, including Will's ensorcelled father "Bootstrap" Bill Turner (Stellan Skarsgard), Hammerhead and a guy whose head has a tail.

Among the film several pleasures is Jack's vocabulary, the most colorful and evocative in mainstream moviedom. I dare you not to be tickled when he refers to a crew of Sparrow doppelgangers as "feculent maggots" or to his enemies as "traitorous codpieces." As this adventure's "distressing damsel," Knightley has a face that launched a thousand sighs and an absolute knockout wardrobe of Asian pirate outfits.

I prefer the second "Pirates" to this one slightly, in part because Davy Jones and his crew were a genuine inspiration and the action more inspired and comedic, although a new scene in which Jack asks his dad about his mum is amusingly ghastly.

Why almost 3 hours? "At World's End" has plot, plot and more plot, much of it about people plotting. At times, it's more like "At Wit's End." But as far as CGI spectacles go, no one does a better maelstrom than series' director Gore Verbinski.

In the supporting cast, Lee Arenberg and Mackenzie Cook continue to provide first-rate comic relief; Naomie Harris has a great "Attack of the 50 Ft. Voodoo Priestess" moment, and don't forget the animals, especially, the monkey.

"Is it planned or does he make it up as he goes along?" someone asks of Jack Sparrow. The same might be said about these pirate movies. But shiver me timbers, I like 'em.

(Rated PG-13. "Pirates of the Caribbean: At World's End" contains strong violence and gory imagery)

Shrek and Fiona aren't too thrilled about an early morning visit from Donkey and Puss in "Shrek the Third.

New Releases

"SHREK THE THIRD" (C+)

That mighty green giant is looking a little jaundiced this time around. An uninspired "Shrek the Third" with our old friends: Shrek (Mike Myers), the ogre with a heart of gold, Princess Fiona (Cameron Diaz), the babe who embraced her inner ogre, braying sidekick Donkey (Eddie Murphy) and a swashbucklingly seductive Puss In Boots (Antonio Banderas). Also along for the ride this time are dumbed-down versions of characters from Arthurian legend, an absent-minded professor-like Merlin (Eric Idle) and a certain high-school loser by the name of . . . Artie (Justin Timberlake). [Rated PG]

"BROOKLYN RULES" (B+)

This small film is the real thing. It's the mid-1980s, and Michael Turner (Freddie Prinze Jr.) is the college-bound neighborhood kid who scams his way into a pre-law program at Columbia, where he competes with rich kids and dreams of making it in a world where he can put his skills as a con man to legitimate use. Carmine Mancuso (Scott Caan) is a violent, wannabe mobster who is befriended by real-life wise guy Caesar Manganaro (Alec Baldwin). Bobby Canzoneri (Jerry Ferrara, "Entourage") is the personification of the gifted, slightly effeminate neighborhood kid in love with all things Sinatra and showbiz. Mena Suvari is the sexy Connecticut preppie who finds Michael and his world both appealing and repellent. (Rated R).

"DAY NIGHT DAY NIGHT" (B+)

With a stomach-churning intensity, "Day Night Day Night," Julia Loktev's study of a terrorist's suicide mission, rates as a nervy, memorable feature debut. With an inexorable progression, the camera follows what may be the last two days of a woman on a terrible mission. Loktev follows her anti-heroine as she is taken to meet three masked strangers in a Queens motel. Outfitted with a bomb-laden backpack, she is instructed on its use and then sent to journey's end, a tourist-packed Times Square. "Day Night Day Night" is a model of modest, intelligent independent filmmaking. (Not Rated) — Stephen Schaefer

"JINDABYNE" (A-)

A small town in New South Wales is shaken by a murder. Stewart (Gabriel Byrne) and his fishing buddies discover the body of a murdered aboriginal girl in a river and decide to continue fishing. When they later report the discovery, they are raked over the coals by the national press, castigated by police and stigmatized by their townsfolk. The film's ending, involving a ceremony to placate the dead and an attempted reconciliation, does not soothe jangled nerves. If you're looking for a challenging and haunting alternative to the summer season sequels, here it is. (Rated R)

'Breathtaking' Memorial Day

Flags, parade, speeches highlight observance

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The morning drizzle falling on Cohasset didn't deter hundreds of residents from coming out to salute their veterans in the least. As if to nod to the town's veterans as well, the sun broke through the clouds as scores of veterans arrived at the harbor leaving Veterans Memorial Park bathed in sunshine. A brisk breeze never failed and the flags of our nation's 50 states and the 383 Field of Honor flags were outstretched and waving in the wind.

American Legion Post Commander Stephen Wigmore welcomed the crowd and contested that the turnout may be one of the largest in his 49 years of attending Cohasset's Memorial Day observances, "it's a tribute to the people of Cohasset, I applaud you."

The backdrop to the ceremony, Cohasset's inner harbor, was enhanced by this year's addition of the Healing Field of flags set up on the corner of Border and Summer streets, across from Veterans Park. Each of the flags was purchased by a resident and dedicated in honor of a family member or friend. Due to the popularity of the Field of

'Adventurous' class to graduate

CHS Commencement 1:30p.m., Saturday

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On Saturday afternoon, 110 Cohasset High School students will be ushered from the safe harbors of Cohasset where they have been taught and nurtured, and sent on their way to the open ocean and the great beyond. Each senior will walk across the stage at the South Shore Music Circus to receive the high school diploma they have worked hard for 13 years to achieve.

"This class is a motivated group of students that are eager to do well and they have. It's a very bright class," High School Principal Joel Antolini says.

Commencement exercises will begin at 1:30p.m., Saturday, under the green and yellow big top. Members of the administration, as well as the valedictorians, Caren Garber and Ryan Ingram, and class president, Mike Corry, will address the Class of 2007 with a few inspiring words.

"We've always been an adventurous class," says Ingram, "I think we've challenged our teachers — in a good way. We really bonded with the faculty."

Succeeding individually is part of succeeding as a group and Ingram says each student was self-motivated to do just that.

Antolini agrees, "they all have very particular interests whether it be in art, science or writing. They are very unique in that they have all gone their

Winds of change are possible

MET tower to collect data for future turbine

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Capturing the power of the wind is no longer a feat to be accomplished just by sailors; alternative energy proponents see wind turbines as a way to harness a plentiful and renewable natural resource. The energy devised from wind turbines could provide a source of clean energy and energy cost-savings. With much to gain, Cohasset could soon have one in its backyard.

Standing at a soaring 165 feet, or 50 meters, the aluminum pole will record wind speed and direction data for a period of one-year.

The neighboring town of Hull has led the charge on the South Shore by installing two windmills within the town's borders. Now, the Alternative Energy Committee (AEC) is taking visible steps to research the feasibility of wind turbines in Cohasset.

"We know from Hull that wind [power] on the South Shore is possible," says AEC Chairman Andrew Willard.

This morning, a meteorological experimental test, or MET, tower, was scheduled to be mounted at the top of Turkey Hill, just south of two cell towers. Standing at a soaring 165 feet, or 50 meters, the aluminum pole will record wind speed and direction data for a period of one-year. The data collected will help the town determine the feasibility of a wind turbine in Cohasset.

The location of the MET tower proved to be a difficult task, says Willard. While wind turbines typically stand on their on, the temporary MET tower will be anchored in place by several guide wires, requiring a large open area clear of buildings and trees, says Willard.

When Turkey Hill was determined as the most suitable location, the AEC worked with the Conservation Commission and the Trustees of Reservations, the managers of the Turkey Hill conservation land, to get permission

Sandy Beach trucks given okay by Town

No more after Memorial Day

...a proper process was followed and safety concerns were primary in the decision to allow the trucks to park in the lot.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Sandy Beach is one of the town's hidden jewels — its white sand, rolling waves and friendly neighbors make it one of residents' favorite summer spots. The beach is also one of the most protected pieces of Cohasset, with residents getting priority stickers and a waiting list of approximately three years for non-resident stickers.

With warmer weather becoming the norm and beach days just off in the horizon, some residents have grown concerned that a construction crew working on building a house on Whitehead Road is misusing the town-owned parking lot. Town Manager Bill Griffin says that is not the case — a proper process was followed and safety concerns were primary in the decision to allow the trucks to park in the lot.

The town owns and is responsible for the maintenance of the parking lot, while Sandy Beach Association owns the beach itself. The town's all-facility sticker gives residents access to the Sandy Beach parking lot, the Recycling Transfer Facility, as well as, all parking areas in town that require a sticker. Non-residents must be placed on the Sandy Beach Association waiting list and limited number of stickers is distributed each year. If cars are parked without a sticker, police can issue a $50 ticket.

"On many occasions, individuals or organizations approach [the Town Manager's office] seeking permission to use the parking lot. Often, it is to park cars for a wedding at a nearby home, or an event like the upcoming triathlon," said Griffin.

The contractor for the house, which is now in its final stages of completion, approached the town last year to see if various tradesmen could park their vehicles in the parking lot over the winter and early spring months. They cited a lack of space out at the site and the possible negative impact on other properties on the road.

"As with many other events, [Police] Chief Hussey supported the plan to keep as many trucks off our narrow, winding roads as possible, especially in that area with the many people who walk or bicycle the road," said Griffin. The town and contractor reached an agreement that the vehicles could park there, but would lose their parking privileges as of Memorial Day weekend.

"As with others who seek special permission to use the parking, no fee was charged," explained Griffin. However, Griffin said the contractor is making a contribution to the Beechwood Ballpark fund in recognition of the cooperation he received from the town.

Bridge jumpers get an early start

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The sight of teens lining up to jump off the Border Street bridge has Chief James Hussey wishing for a weather change. This week's police log was peppered with entries about bridge jumpers.

"It makes me hope for a cold spell," Hussey said about the perennial problem of bridge jumping in town.

While the activity has been going on "forever" and is almost a rite of passage for many teens, the police don't like it because of the potential that someone might get hurt.

Hussey said once the seasonal summer officers start July1 – police would be able to keep even more of an eye on the Border Street bridge which attracts the most jumpers.

He said if the jumpers are underage, police either call the youths' parents or take the kids home and talk to the parents about the potential hazards of the activity. "We are really looking for help from parents of these children. We want the parents to encourage their kids not to jump off."

Hussey said he has seen youths standing on the railing and jumping off. "This is very concerning," he said. "This has the potential to be very dangerous – it is a recipe for a problem."

Older jumpers are usually sent on their way with a warning. However, Hussey said police have not ruled out some form of punishment "within the realm of the law."

"We hate to rain on someone's parade," he said. "But safety has to come first."

Anyone caught with alcohol and it can be confirmed it belongs to someone in the group, there will be arrests, he said.

This week in one incident some jumpers from Scituate were sent on their way; beer was found in the vicinity but the jumpers denied it was theirs, police said.

Passed out

A police officer conducting a security check at the Deer Hill/Osgood schools off Sohier Street at about 1:15 a.m. on Saturday (May 26) came across a young man lying on the sidewalk near the driveway to Osgood. As it turned out the youth was intoxicated and had apparently passed out there. The officer got the young man on his feet, took him under protective custody and brought him to the station where police contacted his parents. "He was released to the custody of his father," Chief Hussey said.

MVA, 3A & Pond

A 2002 Chevy Prism apparently ran the red light at Pond Street and 3A causing a three-car accident last Wednesday (May 23) at about 7:50 p.m.

Police said a 2004 Volvo was traveling southbound on Route 3A through the green light at Pond Street. A 2005 GMC traveling northbound was also going through the green light when, police said, the Prism (coming from the direction of the high school) failed to stop at the red light before attempting to turn left toward Scituate.

The Prism hit the GMC and then the Volvo, police said. All three cars were towed and four people were transported to the hospital with non-life threatening injuries.

Chief Hussey said the operator of the Prism said she did not see the light and was having problems with the gas pedal. She was cited for failure to stop at a red light.

Truck vs. pole

At about 9:30 a.m. last Thursday (May 24), a 2005 freight trailer truck was heading eastbound on Forest Avenue when it turned right onto Forest Notch and caught a low-hanging wire. The driver was unaware of this and continued traveling forward, pulling a utility pole all the way to the ground. There were no injuries and no citation was issued. National Grid responded to repair the pole.

King St. crash

At 10:21 a.m., last Friday (May 25), a 1988 Volvo was exiting Dunkin' Donuts at 156 King St. to make a left onto Route 3A. A 2004 Chevrolet was heading north when the collision occurred. Both vehicles were towed; no one was transported. The operator of the Volvo was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic.

Bike stolen

Anyone with information about a stolen Schwinn Beach Cruiser bicycle with white wall tires should contact the police. A walk-in to the police station reported the bike, valued at $800, had been stolen from his driveway. The bike had been parked in the driveway of the Summer Street residence after it was last used; the next morning (Saturday, May 26), it was gone.

Retrieved license

Cohasset police assisted their counterparts in Quincy on Saturday by retrieving a driver's license that had apparently been used by an underage Cohasset resident in an attempt to purchase alcohol in Quincy.

Cohasset sent a unit to the house and as it turned out, the license the youth had used belonged to his older brother. The under-aged male will be summonsed by Quincy police to court to face charges.

Hit & run

A Scituate woman is being summonsed to court on several charges after leaving the scene of an accident on Saturday night. Witnesses described a green VW convertible that had apparently hit a parked car, damaging the rear bumper, and drove away. They were able to provide a partial plate number. There was also a VW hood emblem at the scene that was taken as evidence.

Dispatch ran a computer check on the information provided by witnesses and found a car that fit the description as being registered for a N. Main Street residence. Police responded to that location and based on further investigation were able to identify the driver as a Scituate woman.

The woman is facing charges of leaving the scene of an accident after causing property damage; operating outside marked lanes; and driving to endanger.

Cook Estate public hearing doesn't heat up

Density, road width top discussion

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The developers used the total acreage, combining the large 19-acre plot and a smaller parcel across Sohier Street next to the Fairoaks Lane neighborhood to determine the possibility of 27-single family homes.

The second night of public hearing testimony for the Cook Estate development had its plate full. The developers and board tackled myriad issues from house sites, road width to affordable units. Abbott Real Estate and Development, the now owners of the former Cook Estate, is proposing a 27-home community off Sohier Street.

The developers from Abbott are applying for a special permit under the town's residential cluster development bylaw. The bylaw allows home to be built closer together with open space on the edges. Despite the "cluster" of homes, there will be no more units than would be allowed under normal subdivision.

The determination of just how many homes could be built under normal subdivision was discussed as Planning Board member Bob Sturdy disagreed with the method Abbott developers used to determine the amount of subdivision homes. The developers used the total acreage, combining the large 19-acre plot and a smaller parcel across Sohier Street next to the Fairoaks Lane neighborhood to determine the possibility of 27-single family homes.

Richard Henderson, the counsel representing Abbott said the lot is not merely a separate lot by virtue of separation by a street. He backed up his statement with naming several state cases.

The Planning Board's engineering consultant, John Modzelewski brought the argument to a close, "when I look at this plan I can't see losing any more than one or two more lots, if any."

The developers plan to keep the small parcel across the street as an open lot and place a conservation restriction on it.

The narrow width of the roadway still concerned Modzelewski, Planning Board members and fire department officials. The subject was also hashed over at the first hearing. Currently, the entrance roadway is designed as 22-feet wide, while the one-way street 20-feet wide. The developers would like to keep the roadways narrow to keep a "village feel" in the development, hinder speeding and have less impervious surfacing. The crux of the problem seems to be in the parking situation in the event of a house party or during winter weather. The developers agreed to come up with alternatives for parking that would ensure emergency vehicles safe access in even extraordinary circumstances.

Chairman Al Moore brought up the possibility of affordable housing. Affordable housing units will not be included in this development as the affordable housing, inclusionary bylaw does not include single-family homes.

"It's nothing to burden this application with," said Moore, however, it raises concern that the bylaw language may need to go before Town Meeting to include affordable units for large single-family developments, like the one proposed.

The Planning Board requested the developers to provide an inventory of all mature trees and which of those are to be kept, relocated or destroyed. The developers will also return with a topographical map showing where they intend to dig and fill on the site.

The third and likely last public hearing for the Cook Estate will be held on June 6 at 7p.m. Once the public hearing portion of the permit application closes, no new concerns from the public may come before the board. The public may only comment on concerns already raised in the public hearing process.

"I think we've challenged our teachers — in a good way. We really bonded with the faculty."

— Ryan Ingram, valedictorian

own way," Antolini says. Those pursuits have individually and cooperatively brought the school to state championships, the state drama festival and scholarly accolades.

The Class of 2007 has devoted countless hours to community service, whether it was on the Appalachia Service Project, the Relay for Life or volunteering locally at Father Bill's Place, nursing homes or the Senior Center. Antolini says that many students participated in the peer-tutoring program to help younger students who need a little extra help in a subject.

But, Ingram says many of the most memorable moments of her high school career occurred right in the "mundane" environment of the classroom during daily school life. She, like many of her classmates, has had the distinct opportunity to attend Cohasset schools for her entire school career.

"[It] created a certain closeness," says Ingram, rather than a restriction, "my own classmates challenged me more than anything else."

The graduating seniors have both borne the disruption of construction and reaped the benefits of new buildings. They were the first class to attend kindergarten through second grade at the new Osgood School. They endured construction at Deer Hill and during their Middle-High School years.

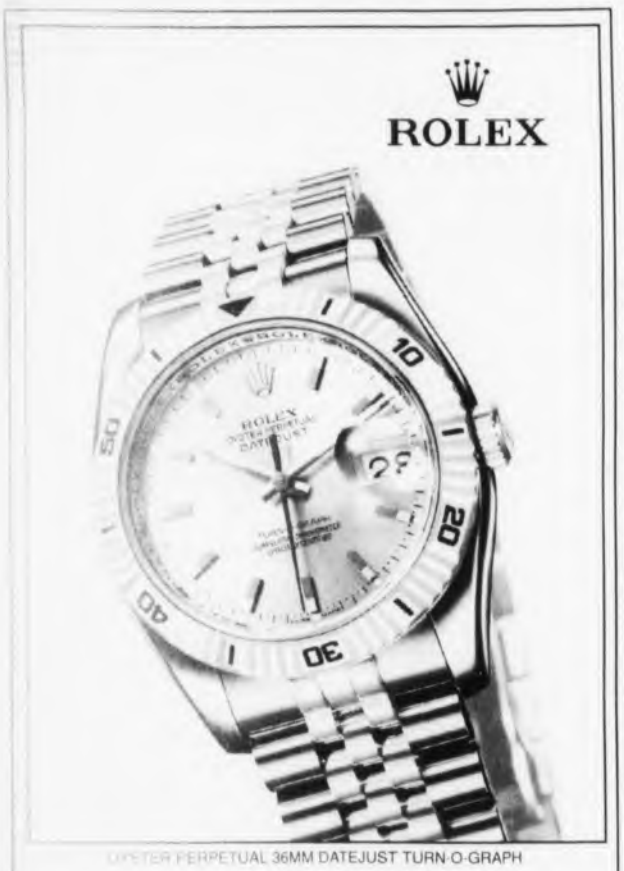
"They followed each project through," Antolini says. However, Ingram says it hardly hindered the classroom environment.

"School comes down to teachers and students and the chemistry between them," she says and armed with a "willingness to learn" together they overcame whatever obstacles construction created.

"[Our class's] diversity is so great that all together we could do something amazing," says Ingram.

Cohasset will just have to wait and see.

The Class of 2007 commencement ceremonies will be held at the South Shore Music Circus on Sohier St. on Saturday, June 7 at 1:30p.m.



Ride for Habitat is June 16 at Wompatuck

Avalon issued draft permit from DEP

Will allow on-site sewer, still pursuing town sewer tie-in

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The proposed 200-unit Avalon apartment complex on Route 3A has cleared another hurdle. In early May, the Department of Environmental Protection issued a draft permit that will allow the project to have an onsite wastewater treatment system.

A draft permit is subject to a mandatory public comment period, starting from the date of first publication of public notice. Scott Dale, vice president of development for Avalon Bay, has sent a letter to the DEP accepting the conditions outlined in the draft permit. At the end of the public period, comments will be reviewed by the DEP and taken into consideration before a final permit is issued.

"The draft permits makes us one step closer to moving the project along," said Dale, "it's definitely a positive step."

If a final permit is issued, Avalon will be able to discharge treated sanitary sewage from the on-site wastewater treatment facility to the ground. However, Dale says they still are pursuing a connection to the town sewer system. That matter is currently before the state Housing Appeals Committee, which handles 40-B issues. They expect to have a decision in hand by the end of the year, Dale said.

Dale said that Avalon considers it wise to pursue both options because either or both could face further appeal down the line. Dale has said previously that the project will break ground as soon as the sewer issue is resolved.

Back in January, the Water Commission was defeated in its appeal of the comprehensive permit. The Appeals Court affirmed the decision of the Land Court that the Commission did not have standing to challenge the comprehensive permit as collectively they were not a person aggrieved by the Zoning Board of Appeals decision. The decision meant that the Water Commission could not initiate a lawsuit against the project.

The Water Commission said that the project would contribute to groundwater pollutants and adversely impact water quality in Lily Pond, that town's water supply and would likely increase the cost of supplying water to Cohasset residents.

Water Commissioner John McNabb said their engineers at Norfolk Ram Group would review the draft permit and submit their comments to the DEP.

"We want to ensure the strictest possible standards for drinking water are imposed," McNabb said. The Water Commission is also working with the DEP to determine if there needs to be additional hazardous waste clean up on the site. McNabb said they have recently agreed to their request and will do an audit of the site, however, no time frame has been set. The proposed Avalon location was formerly Webb-Norfolk Conveyor, a manufacturing company, and is classified as a state 21-E Superfund site. A "superfund" is a DEP classification for a hazardous waste site where some chemicals from the manufacturing process contaminated the soil in amounts that well exceed state limits.

The Avalon project was issued a comprehensive permit from the ZBA more than three years ago; the plans then included an on-site wastewater treatment system. It was approved as a 40-B project. Under Chapter 40B, a state law, a town's zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards are vulnerable to 40-B projects.

Cohasset currently has 76 units (or 2.8 percent) of affordable housing. The state encourages rental housing, and because all 200 Avalon units would be rentals, all units — affordable and market rate — would be counted toward the town's affordable housing inventory.

Cohasset trio in starting lineup for BCH Eagles

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

ON THE MEND

Hello Cohasset. How is everyone doing this week? I am sorry to all who were upset about their news not being in last week's column. Due to some medical issues, I have been out of commission for the last few weeks in and out of the hospital and am trying to bring things back together as quickly as I can.

One thing this has reminded me of while being in the hospital is for us all to watch and enjoy the "small things" in life. Life changes so fast and those small things tend to slip away before we really take the time to enjoy them.

NEW ARRIVAL

I would like to announce the arrival of Magnus Ignatius St. John who was born April 3 to Brendan and Stephanie St. John. He has four older siblings, Anastasia 5, Tess 2, Whilhelmina 2 and Maxim 1 who are taking good care of him.

Joan and Paul St. John of Cohasset and Jeanne Walsh of Scituate are the grandparents. Congratulations to all of you on this wonderful addition to your family.

Andrew Fontaine collected the Thunder Sports Player of the Month award.

WELLSPRING

Wellspring's 4th Annual Fashion Plate is June 3 at the Hull Yacht Club from 3-6 p.m. Cost is $25 per person. Many generous public figures will walk the runway to benefit Wellspring Multi-Service Center. Enjoy glam-glitte and stylin' ensembles for men, women and kids...all fashions selected from Wellspring's Thrift Shop. Desserts from Maggie's Corner of Cohasset, Weinberg's, To Dine For, and Michael Aprea. Wines from Portside Wines and coffee from Mary Lou's. For tickets call781-925-3211 or visit wellspringhull.org Derby Spirit Awards were recently announced.

DERBY AWARD

Congratulations to Robin Spofford, the recipient of this year's Headmaster's Pennant and Pinney at Derby Academy. One of the school's highest awards, the Headmaster's Pennant is given in recognition of achievement in sportsmanship and character building to the 6th grade girl who best typifies the Derby Spirit in athletics by her attitude toward teammates, coaches, opponents, and officials.

Robin will be the 45th person to have her name embroidered on the traditional "pinney" which is returned to the school each year. Robin also received the Outstanding Offense Award for Softball as well as recognition of her pitching for both the junior varsity and varsity teams, and Outstanding Defense Award for field hockey. Super news, Robin.

SWIM/DIVE TRYOUTS

Cohasset Swim Team tryouts will be held on Monday June 18 from 3-5 p.m. at the swim center pool. Swimmers must be 6yrs of age by July 1, 2007 and no older than 17years. There are limited openings this year. Cohasset Dive Team tryouts will be held on Monday June 18 from 5-7 p.m. at the swim center pool. Rain date for tryouts for both swim and dive will be held Tuesday June 19 with same times as Monday.

BC HIGH BASEBALL

One third of the starting line up for the BC High Varsity Baseball Team are former CYBSA players: senior, Tim Smith (starting 1st base) and juniors, Cody Morgan (starting outfielder) and Tommy Chase (starting 3rd base). The Eagles take on Barnstable in the first round of the MIAA Div. 1 High School Tournament this coming Friday. They are defending South Sectional Champs and have been ranked as high as #2 Boston Globe 2007.

Tim heads off to Bentley College in the fall to play football for the Falcons after a successful 2006 two-way starter. Cody went both ways (playing wide out and safety) this past football season for the BC High Eagles. What a great piece to add to the column about many of our Cohasset students.

SOCCER STAR

Mass Premier Soccer would like to congratulate Andrew Fontaine of Cohasset for collecting the Thunder Sports Player of the Month award for April. Andrew was selected for his hard work and exceptional performance for coaches Paul Baber and Colin Hamill respectively. Andrew, a member of the U13 Cape Cod Crusaders, has performed a consistently exceptional level despite playing a year above his age. "Andrew is a U12 player playing at the U13 level and is thriving at the opportunity," said Head Coach Baber. "He has been a major asset to our team and his four goals in a recent 5-2 win really prove that. Keep up the great work Andrew.

TOP MUSICIANS

This musical news is so nice to add this week as well. Mark Seraikas and Austin Meyers have been awarded partial tuition scholarships to attend the Berklee College of Music Summer Performance Program. The award was made in recognition of their musical achievements and the committee's selection of students who would benefit most from the program. The five-week intensive program includes private instruction, instrumental labs, mixed ensembles, musicianship, performance theory and perspectives, and electives such as composition and songwriting. Congratulations Mark and Austin!

Robin Spofford is the recipient of this year's Headmaster's Pennant and Pinney at Derby Academy.

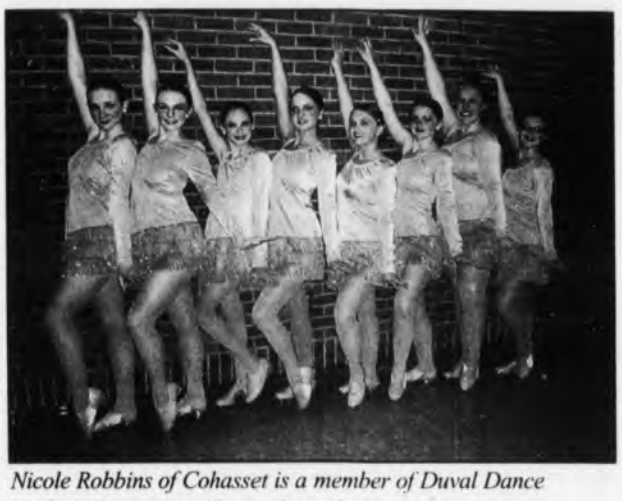
DEAN'S LIST

Vanessa Gratta, daughter of Paul and Lorraine, has achieved dean's list honors for the Spring 2007 semester at Northeastern University in Boston. Vanessa is a sophomore majoring in communication studies and minoring in clementary education. Congratulations!

LAW DEGREE

Brian R. Riley, son of Bob and Carol Riley and a 1996 graduate of Cohasset High School, received his Juris Doctor degree May 20 from Suffolk University Law School at their centennial commencement exercises in Boston.

BC HIGH GRADS



Congratulations to the following Cohasset students who recently graduated from BC High: John T. Day, Patrick Buckley Flynn, Alexander Geoffrey Hunt, Jared Thomas Kinch and Timothy F. Smith. Congratulations, all!

LAUNCH PARTY

.Save The Date for the Annual Cohasset Sailing Club Summer Launch Party on Saturday, July 7th from 6-11 pm. All parents and adult members of the CSC are invited. Information about ticket sales and party details will be available soon.

Tim Smith, Cody Morgan, and Tommy Chase are in the starting lineup for the BCH Eagles.

TOP DANCERS

Duval Dance Studio and recently competed over the last few weeks and did exceptionally well. Nicole Robbins, who also celebrated her birthday last weekend, (HAPPY BIRTHDAY NICOLE) is a Cohasset student who participated in these events. Nicole is a member of Duval Dance Studio's Competition Team that just competed the past two weekends in Norwood and Natick. The dancers preformed in jazz & tap routines, earning them 3 Golds, 1 Highest Silver & Judges Favorite Overall. This was an amazing achievement considering this was their first year competing! Duval Dance Studio is located in Scituate and their recital is on June 23rd (2 shows, 1 & 4 p.m.) at Hingham High School if anyone would like to check them out. For more information contact Miss Stephanie at 545-3100. Needless to say these girls are very dedicated and should be congratulated!

That is all for this week. Send me in all of your news and events no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Musical theater comes alive at CHS

Class puts on benefit concert

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When you take a group of high school students, and add a little talent, a bit of creativity, a helping of caring and a lot of enthusiasm, you end up with Stage 161, BAMA RA PLASE. Ten high school students participating in American Musical Theatre, an elective course, have been working since February to put on a musical production that will benefit two charities.

The fruit of their labor, Stage 161, BAMA RA PLASE will be presented on Friday, June 8 at 7:30p.m. in the Cohasset High School auditorium. The meaning behind the unique title is being kept a mystery but will be revealed during the course of the show.

The students, with help of music teacher Bryan Marks, have worked on every piece of production. They have written the script, chosen songs, staged choreography, assembled costumes and scenery and enlisted other students to help backstage on the big night.

"Normally there is a workshop approach to this class," says Marks, but when the students came up with the idea to do a benefit concert, he couldn't discourage it, "it was all their idea."

Tackling all the pieces that go into making a musical has been learning experience for all the students. They researched and studied how a musical comes together for an opening night. They watched films and explored different genres and types of musicals, from opera to comedy. They attended other local productions to get a feel for staging. They honed their own performances, working on their vocals and acting.

"I think it brought some of us out of our shell," says junior Paige Strecker, "there are some with theater background and some of us with none." She says personally one of the side benefits has been she's not afraid to talk on stage anymore.

Cohasset High School junior Andrew Devitre strikes a pose during his musical number. The debut of the student-written production, Stage 161, is Friday June 8.

"Each of them has taken on a different role," says Marks, who doubles as the director on and off the stage.

Meagan Coakley and Ellie Baumgarten hammered out the script that includes a cast of stereotypical theater personalities. They describe the play as making fun and paying tribute to the theater world.

"We want to prove the fact that musical theater isn't dying, especially in youth," says senior Anne Chapman. The class came across research that indicated that musical theater would be defunct in 20 years time however; their passion for the art makes it apparent that it's likely not going to happen around Cohasset.

Interwoven into the play are about a dozen well-known songs, some solos and some duets. Sophomore Lesen Haracz carefully choreographed each musical number. Other students worked on public relations, the charitable aspect, a raffle and costuming.

STAFF PHOTOS/ELSA ALLEN

The cast of Stage 161, also known as Cohasset High's American Musical Theater class, has been working on the production since February. The benefit performance will donate all proceeds to two charities chosen by the class.

With the support of the audience, the class hopes to make generous donations to two charities.

The class is so invested in this production; the graduating seniors — Anne Chapman and Ryan Barrow — have been voluntarily coming back to school to finish up the preparation for the musical. The small class has grown close over the last few months with daily class sessions and evening rehearsals resulting in a much sweeter experience.

With the support of the audience, the class hopes to make generous donations to two charities. Kimmie Cares, Partners for a Cure Foundation, a charity that raises money for breast cancer research. Kimmie Cares also manufactures dolls and books to create a mechanism for mothers to talk to their children about the disease and chemotherapy.

The second beneficiary, Let the Children Come, is an orphanage in Mexico. Paige went on a service trip to the orphanage with the North River Community Church last summer.

"Most of the kids families can't afford to feed or clothe them," says Paige who is putting together a slideshow of pictures from the orphanage to show during intermission, "we're hoping when the audience sees all the different things they're doing, they may donate a little bit more than suggested."

The students are requesting a suggested donation of $5 but welcome any other contributions. They will hold a raffle for donated items as well.

"What we all love to do is perform and if we can do it for a good cause, it's an awesome thing," says junior Andrew DeVitre.

Members of the cast include seniors Ryan Barrow and Anne Chapman, juniors Andrew DeVitre, Amanda Hurd, Andrew Chang, Sondra Hart, Meagan Coakley, Paige Strecker, and sophomores Lesen Haracz and Ellie Baumgarten. Diane Kennedy, Linda DeRosa-Coakley and Barbara Baumgarten have helped the class with the musical pieces, from piano accompaniment to voice training.

The curtain will go up on Stage 161, BAMA RA PLASE at the Cohasset High School auditorium by on Friday, June 8 at 7:30p.m. Suggested donation is $5. For more information, please e-mail Bryan Marks at bmarks@cohassetk12.org

LIBRARY CORNER

Library has museum passes available

The following events will take place at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Museum Passes – Planning a visit to a museum soon? Call the library to see if there is a free pass. Museum passes are available to Cohasset residents with a valid library card. They are free from the library, however, some museums charge a reduced entrance fee with the pass. Those heading to Boston can check out the Museum of Fine Arts pass, Museum of Science or the Children's Museum for a fun day out. All passes are listed on the Web site at cohassetlibrary.org. Patrons who have Internet access at home can reserve passes online at the Web site. Otherwise, call the circulation desk at the library and we can reserve the pass.

Movie Matinee at the Library – Join others for a free movie at the library. This month "Arsenic and Old Lace" with Cary Grant and Josephine Hull will be shown at 11 a.m., on Friday, June 1, in the Meeting Room. Light refreshments will be provided by the Friends of the Library. The movie site license is sponsored by the Friends of the Library and Cohasset Democratic Town Committee. Admission is free.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film "The Bothersome Man" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, June 21, in the Meeting Room. Free admission and refreshments provided courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

FOR CHILDREN

'Catch the Beat' at the library — Registration begins Monday, June 25, at Paul Pratt Memorial Library for the 2007 Massachusetts statewide summer reading program, "Catch the Beat @ Your Library."

Exciting news for small businesses that don't offer health insurance.

If you haven't been able to offer health insurance to your employees, it's time to get them into a plan. In fact, new laws require Massachusetts residents to have health insurance and for businesses with more than 10 employees to offer it. Thankfully, there's a new family of plans that aren't just lower cost. They're Blue Cross.

Which means Blue Cross Blue Shield may now be within reach for your company. For more information, including help setting up your company's Section 125 plan, call 1-866-597-BCBS, visit GetBlueMA.com, or call your broker.

Garden Club announces Flower Show awards

Equally impressive were the small flower arrangement entries that captured beautifully the essence of "A Day at the Shore."

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset's standard Flower Show, "Our Town" took place at the Paul Pratt Library, May 9 and 10. With a committee of 24, the show was ready for judging shortly after 9 a.m., Wednesday with five special exhibits, six design classes and 21 classes of horticulture entries. The event was a huge success and won praise from both judges and attendees alike.

Garden club members from several towns on the South Shore entered designs which showcased the history and beauty of Cohasset through flowers and once again, the Paul Pratt Library proved to be the perfect setting for the event.

Rows of extraordinary artistic floral designs graced the tops of the bookcases. Each one was a unique interpretation of one of this year's themes: Northeaster, A Night at the Music Circus, A Visit to the Maritime Museum, and A Walk on the Common.

Equally impressive were the small flower arrangement entries that captured beautifully the essence of "A Day at the Shore."

The table settings for "Tea on the Veranda" consisted of a setting for two on a small round table each beautifully coordinated with a floral centerpiece, linens and china.

In addition, there were five special exhibits and 37 blue ribbon winners in horticulture. The following is a list of the blue ribbon winners in each category: Class 1 – "A Day at the Shore," submitted by Marsha Hoar of the Scituate Garden Club was awarded the Tricolor Award, a design score of 95 or above, and the blue ribbon; Class 2 – "Northeaster," submitted by Davie McNamara of the Easton Garden Club; Class 3 – "A Night at the Music Circus" submitted by Cindy McEachern of the Scituate Garden Club won the Designer's Choice Award score of 95 or above and the blue ribbon for the class; Class 4 – "A Visit to the Maritime Museum," submitted by Kathy Hawes of the Sharon Garden Club; Class 5 – "Walk on the Common," submitted by Olivia Baldwin of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset and Class 6 – "Tea on the Veranda," submitted by Pat Michaud of the Cohasset Garden Club and Scituate Garden Club.

In addition, Barbara Dillon of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset won the blue ribbon and Educational Award for her exhibit of the Geology of Cohasset; Annette Sechan of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset won the Arboreal Award, the Horticultural Excellence Award and the Award of Merit in horticulture and Heidi Bobo won the Award of Merit in horticulture.

The Garden Club would like to congratulate all the winners and thank all those who participated in the event. A special note of gratitude is also extended to all the library staff for their helpfulness and hospitality.

Local author and illustrator at Buttonwood

Buttonwood Books & Toys will welcome Hingham residents Molly Manley and Janet Marshall on at 10 a.m., on Saturday, June 16, at Buttonwood, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset. They will be reading from and speaking about their latest collaboration "On a Vineyard Veranda," a picture book filled with limericks and pictures about Martha's Vineyard. The rhymes highlight favorite locations and special events that are unmistakably Martha's Vineyard – Oak Bluffs, Squibnocket, Moshup, Chilmark road race, the Derby and Lumination Night. They were inspired to work together again after the success of their first limerick book "Nantucket Nanny" in 2005.

Manley taught English for many years in Connecticut before moving to Massachusetts. This is her fourth children's book. Marshall, a New Haven, Conn., native who graduated from the Hartford Art School, has created six of her own books. Both Manley and Marshall live in Hingham.

The event is free. Anyone unable to attend who would like to order a personalized and/or signed copy can call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

From the Archives of the Cohasset Historical Society

From the Archives is a weekly feature provided by Cohasset Historical Society.

Congratulations to the Cohasset High School Class of 2007. We have reprinted below the Graduation Program for the Class of 1907, which lists the names of the 18 seniors who graduated that year at the Town Hall on an evening in June. As this year's seniors embark on the next leg of their journey, the motto of the Class of 1907 holds true: "Carpe Diem" (Seize the Day).

Please make a point to stop by the Historical Society and see the many graduation programs in our archives. Also, please think of donating to the Society any Cohasset graduation memorabilia you may have in your attic. We are particularly interested in prom dresses, graduation programs, yearbooks and other related memorabilia.

Honor, the Legion plans to double its size for next year's Memorial Day and place the American flags in other locations in town.

"Seeing the flags as we came around the corner was breathtaking," commented Deidre Wigmore, American Legion Auxiliary President.

Sons Of The American Legion Commander, Tom Wigmore, seconded the sentiment, "it is quite a tribute to the veterans and men and women in service."

As the crowd, a cross section of town from young families to senior citizens, awaited the arrival of the parade many children ran through the Healing Field with joy on their faces to remind all present of the freedom soldiers, sailors and airmen have fought for and still fight for today. Many residents arrived early to the harbor to stroll through the memorial and read the names of the many Cohasset men and women who have served during wartime.

Donald McCormack who served in Vietnam, checks the flags during dedication of the Healing Field on Saturday.

The parade arrived at the Veterans Memorial Park shortly before noon, the color guard and veterans, decked out in their service uniforms, led the way cheered along by applause from onlookers. Members from the Daughters of the American Revolution, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, the flower girls, the Cohasset High School Band and the Rusty Skippers followed close behind.

After welcoming addresses from Legion representatives and a prayer from Rev. John Mulvehill of St. Anthony's Parish, the Cohasset High band played "Glory, Glory, Hallelujah" and veteran Joseph Hamilton recited the poem, "In Flanders Field" written by John McCrae during WWI.

Featured speaker, Captain Donald Staszko, a veteran of the US Air Force who fought in Vietnam, spoke on the Cohasset community need to continue their support of veterans and veteran services.

"Cohasset has always graciously answered the call to defend our nation and the principles of democracy that this great country represents. We all should be proud of this fact," he said.

"For such a small community, Cohasset has contributed beyond its dimension. The men and women of this community have willingly and courageously stepped forward when this nation has called," Staszko listed by name some of the Cohasset veterans from as far back as the Civil War up to the present War on Terror.

Bella Sestito, 5, runs through the rows of flags installed on the Healing Field by Veterans Memorial Park.

"Take a moment — today or at some point — to read the names on these granite walls, and contemplate the sacrifices that these men and women have made for us," he said, "that is why we can never forget them."

"Not all wars are popular. I served in an unpopular war: Vietnam. Yet, today we honor our faithful servants not out of politics or the popularity of a single war, but because of their devotion to duty," Staszko said each person has a responsibility to look after those who have served — not just for a few years but for a lifetime. He encouraged the community and the nation to support veterans' benefits and to care for those who served.

"We need to stand with these veterans forever. They deserve our awe and our admiration."

To close the ceremony, a wreath was placed at the front of the memorial to commemorate those Cohasset residents who have lost their lives fighting for the country. The flower girls cast their bouquets into the harbor for those sailors lost to the sea, and with taps playing in the background fired shots in the air. The Cohasset High School accompanied by the Rusty Skippers played the National Anthem and the American flag was raised to full staff. The wind picked up and the red, white and blue waved in the breeze.

Tom Wigmore, commander of the Sons of the American Legion, raises the flag at Veterans Memorial Park on Monday.

Kathryn Sweet, 3-1/2, waves her flag as veterans march past at Woodside Cemetery.

Student artwork on display at art center

All entries from the 10th Congressional District Art Competition available for public viewing and display at the South Shore Art Center through June 3.

Roughly 200 entries were submitted from students throughout the 10th Congressional District — which include paintings, drawings, prints, mixed media, photographs and computer graphics. The contest's top winner will be shipped to Washington, D.C. to be displayed for a full year in the US Capitol and will be offered a $20,000 scholarship to the Savannah School of Design in Savannah, Ga.

All submissions are now being reviewed by an independent panel of judges. Given the enthusiastic interest among students and high caliber of art, Delahunt wanted to make sure all entries would be on display.

While prizes will be awarded, Delahunt said, "the overall objective is to recognize and encourage the artistic potential of all our kids."

A reception will kick off the exhibition later this month in Cohasset to honor the South Shore and Cape & Islands high school participants. It will take place from 7 to 8 p.m. on Thursday, May 24 at the South Shore Art Center on 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset. Hours and directions for the center are available at www.ssac.org

More information about the competition is available from Delahunt's office, toll-free, at 800-794-9911 — or online at www.house.gov/delahunt/artcomp.shtml.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Shaping the future

The legendary H.G. Wells once spoke of the future as "The shape of things to come."

As the Class of 2007 marches in to the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance," each young man and woman carries with them a dream of what will be.

These individual dreams, great and small, are the stuff that tomorrow is made of.

What will be world be like in 2025?

Ask the Class of 2007.

Today's graduates are the parents of tomorrow.

Not only will they be the mothers and fathers of the next generation, they will be the parents of what our country and our world will grow to be.

Many are the challenges they face.

They are the researchers and scientists who will strive for a cure for cancer and other devastating diseases. They will be on the forefront in the battle to defeat a Superbug hovering on the horizon. They will pioneer methods and devices to restore functioning to bodies with lost limbs or severed spinal cords.

They are the doctors, the police, the firefighters, the nurses, the teachers, the farmers, the chefs, the businessmen... the everything of tomorrow.

They will pen the songs, paint the pictures, write the books, and produce the movies that show us life as it is and life as it could be.

They will fight gallantly on the battlefield to keep our country safe and just as gallantly in arenas of diplomacy throughout the world to weave hatred, ambition, and revenge into a tapestry of lasting peace.

They are the loving hearts who will teach their children to face this world of random violence and wondrous promise with courage, faith, and hope.

The Class of 2007 has a big job ahead.

Our graduating seniors are serious about what comes after the senior prom and after that diploma is placed in their hands.

What is life without a sense of humor to put things in perspective and lift the spirit?

Congratulations, Class of 2007.

Kudos for your achievements over your high school career and for the achievements yet to come.

Get out there and shape your world.

Beach and recycling permits to expire June 30

The expiration date of the beach and Recycling Transfer Facility permits is June 30. The "all facility sticker" for the next fiscal year will be on sale starting the week of June 18 during normal business hours at Town Hall and at the DPW garage on weekends starting June 23, from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., and Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Sticker prices will remain the same as last year – $50 for residents under the age of 60 and $15 for seniors. This sticker will allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility and Sandy Beach, as well as parking at all areas in town that require a sticker.

In addition, residents will be required to purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. These bags will be offered at the Department of Public Works building and various locations throughout the town. All commercial contractors and vehicles registered in a business name should pick up their stickers at the Department of Public Works. Residents are encouraged to purchase stickers through the mail by providing the appropriate fee, a copy of a current registration and a self-addressed return envelope.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

CEF appreciates community support

TO THE EDITOR:

Dear Cohasset Community:

On Saturday, May 19th the Cohasset Education Foundation hosted our first annual Benefit, "our kids, our town, our future" to celebrate Cohasset schools. We were overwhelmed by the participation, enthusiasm and involvement by the Cohasset Community. The Benefit raised over $90,000, the net profit of $70,000 will be distributed between the CEF school project fund and their endowment fund This evening could not have come together without the support of those committed to our community schools and children. We would like to thank all of our volunteers for their long hours of work and dedication; our auction contributors, underwriters and advertisers for their generosity; the students, school administrators and teachers for their support and guidance; and our fellow board members for their collaboration and commitment. We were inspired by everyone's willingness to help enhance and enrich our Cohasset schools by their participation, donations, contributions and assistance with this event.

We couldn't have done it without all of you. We look forward to the continued success of the CEF and the growing support of our community. Thank you for coming out to celebrate our wonderful kids, town and future.

Buddy Poppies celebrate, help veterans

TO THE EDITOR:

For more than 75 years, the Veterans of Foreign Wars' "Buddy Poppy" Program has raised millions of dollars in support of veterans' welfare and the well being of their dependants.

From its inception, the "Buddy Poppy" Program has helped the VFW live up to its motto, "to honor the dead by helping the living."

The "Buddy Poppy" – a small red flower symbolic of the bloodshed in World War I by millions of Allied soldiers in defense of freedom — was originally sold to provide relief for the people of war-devastated France. Later, its sale directly benefited thousands of disabled and down-and-out American veterans.

Disabled, needy and aging veterans in VA Hospitals and domiciliaries across the country assemble VFW Buddy Poppies. The name just "grew" out of the disabled poppy makers' remembrances of their "buddies who never came back" from war. The little red flower became known as the "Buddy Poppy."

The Cohasset VFW post 9146 would like to thank everyone who assisted our local efforts with their generous donations and their support of Veterans by displaying a "Buddy Poppy".

These Cohasset businesses were especially helpful and supportive: Shaw's, Stop & Shop, Goodwin Graphics, Carousel Antiques, Curtis Liquors, Cohasset Pizza, and Dragonfly Embroidery.

We would also like to thank and recognize the following volunteers who gave so generously of their time: Bud Ahearn, Louie Longo, Gordon Flint, Ralph Hill, Marie & Ralph Perroncello, Brad Goodwin, Cliff Jones, Peg & Ira Stoughton, Jean Quigley, James Lagotteria, Grace Tuckerman, Emilio Conte, Paul St John, Joe Godzik, Bill Higgins, Kevin McArdle, Tony Muzzi, Kevyn Ashton, and especially George Haley for filling in on numerous extra shifts.

ASP grateful for generosity

TO THE EDITOR:

Dear friends of Cohasset Appalachia Service Project,

All 200 of us who will be going to West Virginia on our annual Home Repair Mission thank you very much.

Recently we held what we called an Appalachia County Fair event which included a barbecue dinner, auction and dancing to the fabulous GR8fuls. The event was a huge success. About 160 people attended at St. Anthony's Parish Center. And a grateful thanks go to them too.

Our trip relies on our teens raising money and other fundraisers to pay for transportation, food and lodging. Our teens raise about three-fourths of the money and the rest comes from fundraising events. Our costs are well over $100,000.

If you know a teen or adult advisor who has or will be going on an ASP trip, please pat them on the back and thank them for reaching out to a population of people who are far less fortunate than we are. And they will, we hope, thank you for your support and generosity.

Sandy Beach and Cohasset: A collaborative relationship

COMMENTARY

ROBIN LAWRENCE

There appears to be confusion and misunderstanding concerning responsibilities of the privately owned Sandy Beach and the Town owned beach parking lot.

Sandy Beach is a private developed barrier beach, owned and managed by the Sandy Beach Association (SBA) as set forth in a trust established in 1917 for the recreational use by Cohasset residents. Under the sound management of the SBA Board, overseen by the Cohasset Conservation Commission, families have enjoyed the splendor of the wonderful white sand at Sandy Beach for decades. The Association manages the beach operations including a large scale annual clean-up, full-time staffing of lifeguards, daily cleaning and maintenance as well as legal, administrative and insurance expenses.

The Town of Cohasset owns the beach parking lot and works collaboratively with the SBA to meet the parking needs of beachgoers. Town parking stickers may be purchased at Town Hall and are required to be affixed to the automobile windshield for entry to the parking area.

SBA beach operations are not supported by Cohasset resources — revenue from the parking sticker and parking fines is wholly retained by the town. SBA relies solely on annual fundraising contributions to cover all operational expenses.

Sandy Beach will officially open for the 2007 summer season on June 16th. Lifeguards will be on duty 9 a.m. – 7 p.m. daily through Labor Day (Sept. 3rd) and bathhouse facilities are available for use during the same hours. Beach clean-up activities will begin the week of June 4th.

The Association thanks all residents in advance for supporting Sandy Beach.

Robin Lawrence is president of the Sandy Beach Association.

Downtown station not likely

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Old and new traffic control posts at N. Main Street and Forest Avenue.

Train workers clustered at the N. Main/Forest Ave./King St. intersection.

An Oft Repeated Rumor – From time to time we have residents ask us whether or not there will be a train station in the center of the Village. The realistic answer is probably not. Way back in the beginning of the Greenbush design, the MBTA had originally designed the system with a train station in the center of Town near the Town Parking Lot. But, the route the train would have taken would be a lot different from what you see today. Technically, the curve in the center of Town is too sharp for a station platform. So, to put the station here, the tracks would be moved almost to where James Lane and the new small parking lot are located. This is much closer to the residential area. Needless to say, the residents in this area were not too keen to have the train adjacent to their neighborhood and lobbied vigorously to have the station moved. Those in favor of a village station were much quieter. Based principally of what they heard, the Selectmen voted to put the station on route 3A.

Fast forward to several years later, the topic of downtown train station was brought forward again by a number of residents. Since the village area has precious few parking resources, the idea was floated for the MBTA to build a station in the downtown area without parking, or a what is sometimes called a "kiss and ride" station. The only possible location for such a station with enough space for an 800-foot long platform was behind the new library. 800 feet is the maximum length of a train, and handicap access rules mandate the platform be the same length so every occupant can enter or exit from any car.

The Town took this new station concept to the MBTA that said it was feasible. Further, the MBTA said they would "not do anything to preclude the Town from constructing it." So there you have it. All we need is a spare $3 million, or so, and we can have station in the village.

Around the Greenbush – Most of the Greenbush crossings now look pretty complete. The exceptions to this are King Street and the new North Main Street entrance / exit at the Cohasset Station, and of course the station itself.

For the next several weeks you will likely see a lot of workmen clustered about the N. Main St. / Forest Ave. / King Street area. We are told that this is a high priority area. It's easy to see why. There is quite a bit of finishing and some corrective action that needs to be done here.

You may have noticed new black posts that were recently installed at North Main Street and Forest Avenue. Before long, these posts will be holding brand new traffic lights. (Yep, that's correct! Traffic Lights! And, they are not on 3A, but on little old Main St.) The reason that traffic lights are needed here is that the railroad crossing is very close to the busy North Main St. / Forest Ave. intersection. It is possible that, when a train is coming, cars can back up from the gates into the intersection. The traffic lights will be used with sophisticated sensor system to control the traffic based on the current train activity.

There will also be traffic islands that must yet be installed at the King Street crossing. But, the design of these islands has been modified to accommodate the wide turns that large semi-trailers makes when bringing loads from the recycling facility to our regional collection point. In addition, in preparation for the sidewalk that the Town will be constructing to the station, the Town has agreed to pay the MBTA to construct a small section of sidewalk from N. Main Street to Laugelle Lane. This sidewalk section will include the necessary gates, control and safety equipment for a pedestrian crossing at the tracks.

To the casual observer, there is still a lot of work to be accomplished at the Cohasset station site. However, most of this activity cannot be easily viewed from either Route 3A or N. Main St. But, look for the large dirt piles to begin disappearing over the next month or two.

Rock Breaking in Town – As the rock fracturing and removal at the edge of the Town Parking Lot winds down, another crew will be arriving in Cohasset on Forest Avenue. We have spoken several times about the Forest Ave. sidewalk and paving project that is now under way. The first phase of tree removal in preparation for the sidewalks has been completed. The next phase will be the removal of ledge that will be interfering with the construction of this long awaited sidewalk. A number of years ago, a blasting expert came in and "popped" some of the ledge, but not all of it. (Pop is a highly technical term for fracturing the ledge into smaller pieces that can be easily removed.) So, a new crew of rock removers will take care of the last bit of ledge to get ready for the sidewalk starting Monday, June 4th. They will more than likely be hammering it into smaller pieces rather than blasting. We expect that it will take them about two weeks to get rid of the ledge. Following that, the same contractor will be doing excavation to set the base elevation for the sidewalk from N. Main Street to just south of Holly Circle. This same contractor will be responsible for all of the construction work starting with the curb and moving outward to the edge of the roadway work. Another contractor will be doing the construction work in the roadway, itself. As work progresses you will see one contractor do a few tasks, then the second contractor will do some work, followed by the first contractor again. This may appear crazy, but the work needs to be sequenced this way for contractors with the required expertise to do what each contractor does best; i.e. sidewalk experts do the sidewalks and road experts do the roads. We will continue to update you periodically as the work progresses.

Rehabilitating John Adams

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Our neighbors in Quincy are going whoopee over the rehabilitation of John Adams, the Braintree boy who became the second president of the United States, what with the issuance of a dollar coin bearing his likeness.

It is interesting to note that more than 175 years had to pass (he died in 1826) for the rehab process to get underway.

Old John may have been instrumental in naming Washington commander-in-chief of the Continental army. He may have told Tom Jefferson what to write in the Declaration of Independence. He may have written the Massachusetts Constitution all by himself.

But it appears that the people who knew him best, his contemporary founding fathers, didn't like him very much. After exhaustive research, I am unable to find anyone who ever invited him down to the local pub for small talk over a beer.

Furthermore, old John knew it.

"There are few people in this world with whom I can converse," he once said. "I can treat all with decency and civility and converse with them when it is necessary, on points of business, but I can never enjoy their company."

Take that, Ben Franklin!

Even his own father-in-law, the Rev. William Smith, the Weymouth minister who married him and Abigail, took an early dislike to him as the son of a farmer and shoemaker who would never amount to anything.

The Rev. Bill was so dismayed by the match that he took his homily from Matthew 11:18 — "For John came neither eating nor drinking, and they say 'He hath a devil.'" That, in 1764, they say, was an insult.

His own secretary of the treasury, James McHenry, described him thusly: "Whether he is spiteful, playful, witty, kind, cold, drunk, sober, angry, east, stiff, jealous, cautious, confident, close, open, it is always in the wrong place or at the wrong person."

Some historians have theorized that his problem was that he had a strong desire to be a great man but his Puritan instincts were constantly attacking that desire as mere vanity and the lack of resolution brought on his bursts of temper.

"In another era, John Adams would have needed Prozac," said the historian Carol Berkin on the History Channel.

There was a pomposity about him, too. When he was vice president under Washington, and thus the president of the Senate, he proposed that the boss be addressed as, "His Highness, the President of the United States, and Protector of their Liberty."

Senators not only laughed the proposal out of the chamber but some counterproposed that the Veep himself be addressed as "His Superfluous Excellency."

As president, Adams continued to draw criticism for his long summer vacations at his home in Quincy. Once he spent eight months there, trying to run the country from long range while a yellow fever epidemic raged in Philadelphia.

To his credit, all this ran off Adams' back like rain in a water-soaked gulley.

"Popularity was never my mistress, nor was I ever, nor shall I ever be a popular man," he once wrote.

"But one thing I know, a man must be sensible to the errors of the people and upon his guard against them and must run the risk of their displeasure sometimes or he will never do them any good in the long run."

Teens with a curious lack of drive

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

I'm not imagining this. Poll your own friends and family and you'll be shocked by what you find.

The best way to mark yourself as old and irrelevant is to complain about how spoiled or amoral the current crop of teenagers is. So I'm very careful not to criticize these candy-assed vandals, in public at least. But today I have to speak out about a worrying trend I've noticed recently.

I personally know of at least seven people across the country between the ages of 16 and 19 who not only don't have their driver's licenses, they don't feel any pressing need to get their driver's licenses. Now, don't jump to any conclusions. These are by all accounts normal teens raised by well-meaning, patriotic parents. And yet they are totally ambivalent about what was, for you and me, by far the most exciting thing to happen in our lives up to that time. I'm not imagining this. Poll your own friends and family and you'll be shocked by what you find. Voting-age boys with girlfriends two towns away, who apparently have no qualms about their parents driving them on dates. Young women heading off to college next fall, planning to become doctors, executives, and leaders of tomorrow, who have never cruised to Hyannis with the stereo cranked, and they don't care.

For two months I've been scratching my head over this attitude. Like any strange phenomenon there has to be a scientific explanation, but there are only so many possible theories to choose from.

Are their lives so exciting already that a driver's license is but one of many thrilling options available to them? I put this question straight to the first three teenagers I could find, and they told me very honestly that their lives were pathetic, that my questions were gay, and that I was the lamest doushbag they'd ever met. I stopped randomly polling teens after that because the results were so clear, and because they stole my pencil.

Do they not crave independence and rebellion the way every single solitary teenager before them has? This seems even less plausible than the over-stimulation theory. We're talking about the most smothered generation in history. From baby monitors to VeriChips, to the notarized invitation required to play at a friend's house, these kids have been on a leash for nearly twenty years. Seriously, if they aren't dying for a liberty call by now I fear for this nation's sovereignty.

Might they need educational instruction on the inherent make-out potential of a mobile chaise longue? Has America's 21st-century system of public transportation made driving unnecessary and, frankly, unsanitary by comparison? I'm not going to dignify either of those questions with a response.

Are today's cars too boring to stir the heart of a teenager? To address that question we must briefly revisit the early 80s. Throughout the prior decade Japanese automakers had ruthlessly attacked the entrenched American competition with cars that started and ran every morning and couldn't easily be coaxed into erupting in flames. But by the fall of 1980, as I waited in line for my learner's permit at age fifteen and a half and three minutes, something was being done about it. And that thing was the Chrysler K Car, which was exactly the same piece of crap they'd been slapping together for 10 years with the A through J models, except the K Car came with a cup holder and a $3 billion taxpayer-funded marketing campaign featuring Lee Iacocca himself goading you into buying one. The optimism of the age was embodied in a resurgent American auto industry, which in turn was represented by a car that looked like a pig with a gold star on its snout and lasted literally two years or 20,000 miles, whichever came first.

Today we can drive all manner of awesome cars from Miatas to Hummers, or at least gaze longingly at them out the window of our Volvo wagons, so I think we can put the Dull Car theory to rest.

Goodness knows we can always use fewer teens on the road, so I don't know what exactly I'm advocating here, except perhaps an official probe into a movement that is at best perplexing and at worst a threat to our very culture. If a government agency is looking for someone to lead this probe I'd like to apply. I'm outgoing, enjoy working with people, and willing to drive.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset. He's also alarmed by reports of teen boys who don't grasp the importance of a manual transmission, but plans to address that problem in a future book on poor child rearing.

HEALTH NOTES

Opening season for hurricanes

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

"Preparation through education is less costly than learning through tragedy."
— Bill Proenza, Director National Hurricane Center

Today is the beginning of hurricane season. "For the 2007 Atlantic hurricane season, NOAA scientists predict 13 to 17 named storms, with seven to 10 becoming hurricanes, of which three to five could become major hurricanes of Category 3 strength or higher," said retired Navy Vice Adm. Conrad C. Lautenbacher, NOAA administrator. An average Atlantic hurricane season brings 11 named storms, with six becoming hurricanes, including two major hurricanes. In keeping with our mantra of staying healthy by preparing, you should know what storm warnings broadcast by the media tell you. After all, "Preparation through education is less costly than learning through tragedy." says Bill Proenza, Director National Hurricane Center. Enter the June-November season prepared: The list of things you should have around if we're expecting a hurricane includes: window coverings, tools, batteries, nonperishable foods, prescription medications, water proof document case, flashlights, portable radios, a car full of gas and maybe a charged cell phone. Have several days' water supply.

Hurricane Watch: If you expect hurricane conditions to pose a possible threat to your area, think about moving inland when a 'watch' is issued. Otherwise you should review hurricane safety procedures and make preparations. Listen to NOAA Weather Radio and commercial radio and television for the latest information and instructions for your location. A hurricane causes sea level to rise above normal tidal heights, with giant wind-driven wave conditions. Know your property's elevation above mean sea level. Have a safe evacuation route planned. Learn the storm surge history for your area.

Hurricane Warning: means hurricane conditions are expected within 24 hours. Areas subject to storm surge or tides should be evacuated as well as areas which could be isolated by floodwaters. Follow the instructions of local officials. You will not be asked to leave your home unless your life is threatened.

Leave low-lying areas. Moor your boat securely or remove it from water. Protect your windows with boards, shutters or tape. Secure outdoor objects or bring them indoors. Fuel your car.

Remember: Latest storm-related information will be available on NOAA Weather Radio and commercial radio and television. Do not tie up telephone lines by calling local officials or the National Weather Service. Listen carefully to broadcasters serving your immediate area.

Tornadoes: Recently, reports of tornado conditions under small clouds have been reported. Such conditions may occur as precursors to the general activity around a hurricane. When a hurricane approaches, listen for tornado watches and warnings and be ready to take immediate shelter.

MET tower to collect data for future turbine

PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Tony Ellis, a chemical engineer from UMASS Amherst talks members of the Alternative Energy Committee through the process of raising the MET tower on Turkey Hill. The tower will collect wind data for one year and then be analyzed to determine if wind turbines are a feasible in Cohasset.

Members of the Alternative Energy Committee work together to raise the MET tower into position. The aluminum tower stands at a lofty 165 feet, or 50 meters. The temporary tower is anchored in place with several guide wires.

The 165-foot MET tower was assembled in the open space atop Turkey Hill a week before it was raised. It is rigged with wind speed cups and wind direction paddles that will feed wind data to a data logger. The Massachusetts Technology Collaborative is funding the project.

to install the MET tower. The AEC received all needed permissions last October and representatives from the UMASS Renewable Energy Lab marked out the location for the tower in November. However, the ground froze before the tower could be raised. With a thawed ground and spring air, volunteers assembled the tower on the ground last week and today, members from the UMASS lab planned to raise the tower into place.

"We're very positive, we haven't come across people opposed to this project," says Willard.

The AEC efforts with the MET tower have required little town taxpayer funds: the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative is covering the cost of the entire MET tower effort, from its installation to the data analysis to an end report showing the "quality of the wind" in Cohasset. If the town were to pay for the project, the cost would be between $25,000 and $35,000.

The data collection segment is a necessary step to the eventual installation of wind turbines, says Willard. Not only will it determine if Cohasset has "good wind," but also bonding companies require the data in order to consider funding a wind turbine project. And the AEC is already looking ahead to those potential projects.

"If the data proves Cohasset has 'good wind' our first goal is the placement of a turbine at the High School," says Willard. The Middle-High School is the largest town-owned consumer of energy. "Every kilowatt of power generated is a kilowatt we will not need to purchase, excess power would be sold back to the regional grid."

"It will be a nice cost-savings for the town," says Willard.

Another possible location for a wind turbine is the transfer station. The energy produced from that turbine will feed directly into the regional electric grid. The open area could hold a windmill similar in size to Hull's Wind 2, located near the Weir River.

If a wind turbine is determined as plausible, the Board of Selectmen and the AEC will discuss sizes and makers of turbines and if the town wants to take on the ownership of the windmill. There are programs where "Renewable Energy Credits" (REC's) can be sold based on the amount of energy produced as an additional source of revenue.

With the placement of the MET tower this week, the AEC plans to turn its attention to working with the Planning Board on zoning bylaws to address wind turbines, reviewing solar power options and other town conservation programs to reduce energy use.

"Although it has been a long time getting to this point, we feel the next year will be very busy for us," says Willard.

The Alternative Energy Committee (AEC) was formed officially at the 2005 Annual Town Meeting. Its focus is to investigate alternative energy sources that can be used by the municipality. Members include Mike Bliss, Rod Hobson, Robert Kinscherf, Luciano Lauretti, Jim Shipsky, Alfred Slanetz, Mimi White, and Andrew Willard.

Beacon Hill Roll Call
Volume 34-Report No. 21

By Bob Katzen

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local senators' votes on seven roll calls from the week of May 21-25. There were no roll calls in the House last week. All of the Senate roll calls are from debate on the estimated $26.7 billion fiscal 2008 budget.

$26.7 BILLION FISCAL 2008 STATE BUDGET (S 3)

Senate 38-0, approved a $26.7 billion fiscal 2008 state budget. Most of the 850 proposed amendments to the budget were approved or rejected without debate and without a roll call vote. At one point, dozens of amendments were split between a "yes" pile and a "no" pile. The Senate, again without debate or roll calls, quickly approved the "yes" pile and rejected the "no" pile. Supporters said that the budget is a fiscally responsible one that funds necessary programs, increases local aid and does not raise taxes. The House has already approved a different version of the budget and a conference committee will eventually craft a compromise version. (A "Yes" vote is for the budget).

ESTABLISH COMMISSION ON CIVIC ENGAGEMENT AND LEARNING (S 3)

Senate 7-31, rejected an amendment creating a 24-member special commission to study the status of civic education in schools and general civic involvement in Massachusetts. Amendment supporters said that citizen involvement in and knowledge of the democratic process are declining across the nation. They noted that in a recent survey of eighth graders, only 28 percent could explain the purpose of the Declaration of Independence. They said that a similar proposal was approved last year by the House and Senate but was vetoed by former Gov. Mitt Romney. Amendment opponents said that they support the intent of the measure. They noted that that a similar proposal has been filed as a separate bill and urged the Senate to wait until that measure is heard by a committee and brought to the Senate. (A "Yes" vote is for creating the special commission. A "No" vote is against it).

WEBSITE FOR CITIZENS TO FIND INFO ON GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS (S 3)

Senate 5-31, rejected an amendment requiring the state to set up a free, easily searchable state Web site that lists all businesses and nonprofit organizations that receive grants, contracts, loans or other state funds of $25,000 or more. Amendment supporters said that this proposal is modeled after a similar federal Web site that will soon be online and noted that this information is currently not readily available to the public on a single Web site. They argued that citizens have a right to know where their hard-earned tax dollars are going. Some noted that Gov. Deval Patrick's administration would have until November 30 to develop a plan for the Website and to address any privacy concerns. Amendment opponents said that the amendment is well intentioned but noted that the Patrick administration has expressed concerns about making some of this classified and highly sensitive information public. They argued that the idea has merit but needs further study to ensure that certain information is protected. (A "Yes" vote is for creation of the Web site. A "No" vote is against it).

ELIMINATE $3 MILLION FOR COMMONWEALTH CORPS (S 3)

Senate 5-33, rejected an amendment to eliminate the $3 million in funding for the Commonwealth Corps - a volunteer program proposed in January by Gov. Patrick. At that time, the governor said, "The Commonwealth Corps will include 250 individuals in its first year, with a goal of expanding to 1,000 members over the next five years. Members will dedicate at least one year of service to a nonprofit organization, civic initiative, or public entity, providing direct service to people or communities in need." Supporters of the $3 million said that this program is an innovative one that would renew the spirit of volunteerism and help thousands of people and projects across the state. Opponents of the $3 million said that Patrick's legislation creating the Commonwealth Corps has not yet been approved. They argued that the Senate should wait to see if the legislation is approved prior to funding it. (The roll call vote is on eliminating the $3 million. A "Yes" vote is for elimination and therefore against the $3 million. A "No" vote is against elimination and therefore for the $3 million).

ELIMINATE $10 MILLION FOR LOTTERY ADVERTISING BUDGET (S 3)

Senate 9-29, rejected an amendment to eliminate $10 million in funding for the advertising of Lottery games. Supporters of the $10 million said that it would increase sales and raise additional Lottery revenue that is distributed to cities and towns as local aid. They argued that the Legislature should not micromanage the Lottery and its advertising. Opponents of the $10 million said that the Lottery's ad campaigns are misleading and are aimed at enticing low-income workers and senior citizens to spend their scarce, hard-earned money on gambling. They argued that this unfair advertising promotes a very regressive mechanism of raising revenue. (The roll call vote is on eliminating the $10 million. A "Yes" vote is for elimination and therefore against the $10 million. A "No" vote is against elimination and therefore for the $10 million).

INCREASE EDUCATION LOCAL AID BY $23 MILLION (S 3)

Senate 5-33, rejected an amendment increasing Chapter 70 education aid by $23 million by increasing from $50 to $75 the per pupil aid for cities and towns. The amendment also cuts $22 million from the state budget including $2.7 million for kindergarten development grants, $1.2 million in grants for intensive literacy and math instruction to help students pass the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System (MCAS) test and $6.5 million in grants for communities to plan and implement longer school days or years. Amendment supporters said that the amendment would hike education aid for all cities and towns and noted that most communities are struggling and desperately need additional state funds. They noted that Gov. Patrick proposed an increase of $200 million in education aid, the Senate budget offers $220 million and this amendment provides $243 million. They argued that the amendment also makes a corresponding $22 million in budget cuts including elimination of an unnecessary $10 million Lottery advertising budget and elimination of increases for other education programs that are laudable but should not be funded until communities are given adequate basic education aid. Amendment opponents said that the amendment cuts funding for many important education programs. They noted that the $10 million cut in funds for Lottery advertising would result in the reduced sale of Lottery tickets and decreases in local aid that is funded by Lottery revenues. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment increasing education aid by $23 million and cutting $22 million from other budget items. A "No" vote is against the amendment).

ELIMINATE $4 MILLION IN POLICE GRANTS TO CITIES AND TOWNS (S 3)

Senate 5-33, rejected an amendment to cut $4 million in funding for police grants to cities and towns. The grants would be administered by the Patrick administration's Executive Office of Public Safety which would receive help in developing the formula to distribute the funds from representatives from municipal government and law enforcement, the House and Senate Ways and Means Committees and the Public Safety and Homeland Security Committee. Supporters of the $4 million said that the funds would be used to hire 50 new local police officers across the state. Some acknowledged that Boston would likely receive the most grant money because it needs more officers to combat the rising crime rate. Opponents of the $4 million said that they oppose the funding without a formula in place to fairly distribute the grants across the state. Some argued that the lion's share of these grants would unfairly go to Boston in order to help the governor honor a commitment that he made to Mayor Thomas Menino. (The roll call vote is on eliminating the $4 million. A "Yes" vote is for elimination and therefore against the $4 million. A "No" vote is against elimination and therefore for the $4 million).

Vietnam veteran and pilot, US Air Force CPT Donald Staszko, delivers the keynote address at Veterans Memorial Park on Monday. At left is Commander Steve Wigmore of the American Legion.

'We need to stand with these veterans forever'

The following remarks were made by US Air Force CPT Donald Staszko during Monday's Memorial Day observances at the Veterans Memorial Park.

Beyond all question, we have a responsibility to look after those who served us. And not just for the first 60 days or the first or second year upon their return home, but for a lifetime!

Good morning:

First of all I would like to thank Commander Wigmore from the American Legion, Commander Perroncello from the Veterans of Foreign Wars and Commander Thomas Wigmore from the Sons of the American Legion. These men and their organizations are the ones that make Memorial Day what it is in Cohasset.

A special thanks goes to Glenn Pratt and his band of brothers, who made possible the memorial for Korea, Vietnam, Gulf War and the War on Terror.

We are here today – this Memorial Day – as a community. Look around you. Look at the veterans. Their families. And those gathered here to honor them.

Cohasset has always graciously answered the call to defend our nation and the principles of democracy that this great country represents. We all should be proud of this fact.

We gather today around this memorial that honors the thousands of men and women from Cohasset who have served their country, some paying the ultimate price.

For such a small community, Cohasset has contributed beyond its dimension. The men and women of this community have willingly and courageously stepped forward when this nation has called.

To put a face on such service, you have to start with the Civil War: soldiers like Stephen Lincoln and Levi Gaylord who was a Congressional Medal of Honor recipient, our nation's highest honor for bravery.

And soldiers like Sheldon Ripley and Eugene McSweeney in the Mexican-American War.

Herman Daley and George Mealy in World War I.

Howard Gleason and Robert Jason in World War II.

David Strout Jr. in Korea.

Peter Cogill and Craig Simeone in Vietnam.

Soldiers like Frank Mahoney in the Gulf War.

Christopher Pratt in the War on Terror.

Then you have soldiers like John Morgan, who served in Vietnam, and continued his military service in the reserves during the Gulf War and the War on Terror.

Take a moment – today or at some point – to read the names on these granite walls and contemplate the sacrifices that these men and women have made for us.

That is why we can never forget them!

Not all wars are popular. I served in an unpopular war: Vietnam. Yet, today we honor our faithful servants, not out of politics or the popularity of a single war, but because of their devotion to duty.

Beyond all question, we have a responsibility to look after those who served us. And not just for the first 60 days or the first or second year upon their return home, but for a lifetime!

Simply put, it is just the right thing to do.

As a community and as a nation, we have a moral responsibility to support veterans' benefits, to care for those who served: soldiers who need our help today for personal or medial reasons.

We need to stand with these veterans forever. They deserve our awe and our admiration.

Look around you again. We gather today in this peaceful inner harbor in Cohasset. The calm that surrounds us came at a price of service. Let us never forget the price that was paid and those who served!

Thank you all for coming on this Memorial Day. God bless you, and our brave and courageous men and women in the military today!

Giving extra credit to Cohasset teachers

Looking for the perfect gift to thank that special teacher of your child or the helpful school secretary who anwers all your questions or the art teacher who stayed after school every week to encourage your child to knit hats for the homeless? The Cohasset Education Foundation offers the solution to your gift giving needs. With a tax-deductible donation to the CEF's Teacher Appreciation Program, you can send any Cohasset teacher, administrator or school staff member "Extra Credit."

Each recipient of an "Extra Credit" gift will receive a card acknowledging that a donation has been made in his or her honor with your personalized message. The amount of the gift is not disclosed. You are able to thank those people who work so hard for the children in our schools, as well as help fund CEF grant programs that foster innovation and excellence in teaching throughout the entire Cohasset public school system.

With each "Extra Credit" donation, the CEF will mail an acknowledgement card to the teacher or other special recipient in the Cohasset schools. Cards are available with a suggested minimum donation of $15 each ($50 for five cards), larger donations are always appreciated. All of the proceeds of the Teacher Appreciation Program, "Extra Credit go towards funding professional development in the Cohasset schools. The CEF accepts donations for the Teacher Appreciation Program, "Extra Credit" throughout the entire school year. Not only is this an ideal gift at the end of the school year, but a way to thank the teachers and staff in the schools all year long.

Take time at the end of the school year to honor our local educators by participating in the CEF Teacher Appreciation Program, "Extra Credit." Donations may also be made in honor of relatives, friends, coaches, grandparents, and any other special people or as a memorial remembrance. Checks should be made payable to: The Cohasset Education Foundation and mailed to: The Cohasset Education Foundation, P.O Box 309, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Bradley earns top legislator recognition

State Representative Garrett J. Bradley was named the 2007 Legislator of the year by the Massachusetts Academy of Trial Attorney's at their annual banquet held at the JFK Library.

Bradley received the legislator of the year award by MATA for his efforts to uphold the Academy's mission within the Legislature. The MATA organization is a collection of Attorneys who strive to preserve the American jury system; to protect the health and safety of Massachusetts families; to improve the quality of legal representation through education; to educate the public about consumer issues; to uphold the honor and dignity of the legal profession; and to uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"I am honored to have been recognized by this organization," Bradley said. "I look forward to continuing to work with them to make sure our courts are open and accessible to all."

Disappointing season ends on high note for local 9

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset High baseball team was able to end its rather disappointing season on a high note, winning their final two games. The final one came against Sacred Heart with a 9-5 victory.

The story of the game for Cohasset was the outstanding performance by senior pitcher John Harrington in his last start as a Skipper. Harrington pitched six-plus innings, giving up five earned runs on 10 hits and walking three. He also struck out seven Sacred Heart batters.

In his last start as a Skipper, Harrington was finally able to get his first win.

"Its good to see him finally get that; he's worked really hard," said head coach Al Gallotta.

As a team, the Skippers had a very good day at the plate, racking up 12 hits. Junior Sam DeGiacomo had a single, triple and drove in a run. Fellow junior Ian Cundall also had two hits and drove in a run. Also with a good day at the plate was another junior Kyle Pinkus who had a hit and three RBI.

Another good thing for the team was that all of the 14 athletes played, with the seniors going the distance in their final high school contest. Nick Zappolo played great defensively and also had an RBI to go with two hits and two steals. Fletcher Smalzel had a hit and a stolen base and Corbin Faber walked once, scored two runs, and had a stolen base.

The Skippers also were able to control the field as they only recorded one error. Most of the Skippers' offense came in the third inning, in which they got six runs on four hits.

The Cohasset Skippers ended their season on a two-game winning streak but finished with only a 5-13 record.

Skippers 8, Williams 5

Cohasset was able to snap an eight-game losing streak on the 21st as they beat Archbishop Williams, 8-5.

On the mound for Cohasset this game was junior Sam DeGiacomo. He recorded all but one out and had six strikeouts. He allowed only four earned runs on five hits. DeGiacomo also helped out at the plate where he had two hits.

Junior Dave Snowdale, who also had two hits, finished off the game for Cohasset, recording the final out of the game to seal the victory.

The big hitter of the day was junior Chris Rose, who went 4-for-4 with three RBI, putting him on top for the team's RBI totals with nine for the season. Also contributing were sophomore John Sturino and senior captain Nick Zappolo, who each had two hits. Harrington also had a good game with an RBI single.

In total, the Skippers racked up 13 hits and showed that they are capable of hitting, something they failed to show most of the season.

Mashpee 3, Skippers 2

The Cohasset baseball team has had a less than okay season. Struggling to even stay close in most of their games, the Skippers once again lost on the 17th, but this time, it was close. In an extra inning special the Skippers lost Mashpee 3-2 in nine innings.

JV Baseball Finishes Strong

The expression goes "It's not how you start, it's how you finish that counts," and in the case of the Cohasset High JV baseball team, that certainly is the case.

After an opening day win against Sacred Heart, the boys in blue hit a rocky road and found themselves on the short end of the score way too often. Long bus trips and terrible starts to games were their downfall. In many cases they would battle back in the late innings only to have dusk fall and the game ended, just a few runs short of victory.

New Coach Matt McMillan said, "In my first season of coaching baseball, not only did I learn a lot about coaching and the game itself, I learned a lot about what I like to call the 'intestinal fortitude' of the guys on this team. We weren't playing very good baseball and we lost to some teams that I felt we matched up pretty well against.

"We fell to 3-8 and I was looking for ways to keep the kids motivated. I then realized why I got into coaching and I remembered why I love the game of baseball – because it's fun. From that point on I stressed the importance of coming to practice every day and coming to the games and having fun: obviously there was work involved, but if you love the game of baseball even though you are working hard, it should be fun.

"The team really started coming together, I think I got a lot more comfortable with the kids and hopefully they got a lot more comfortable with me. At that point we ran off a nice little winning streak, which was sadly broken up by a very strong Archbishop Williams team. To the credit of the team they came back after that game, which I admit was a disappointment (the Skippers lost 4-3) at that time because we had set a goal to finish 9-8, and ended with a great game against Sacred Heart."

Tennis teams, softball and boys lax all earn invitation to the Big Dance

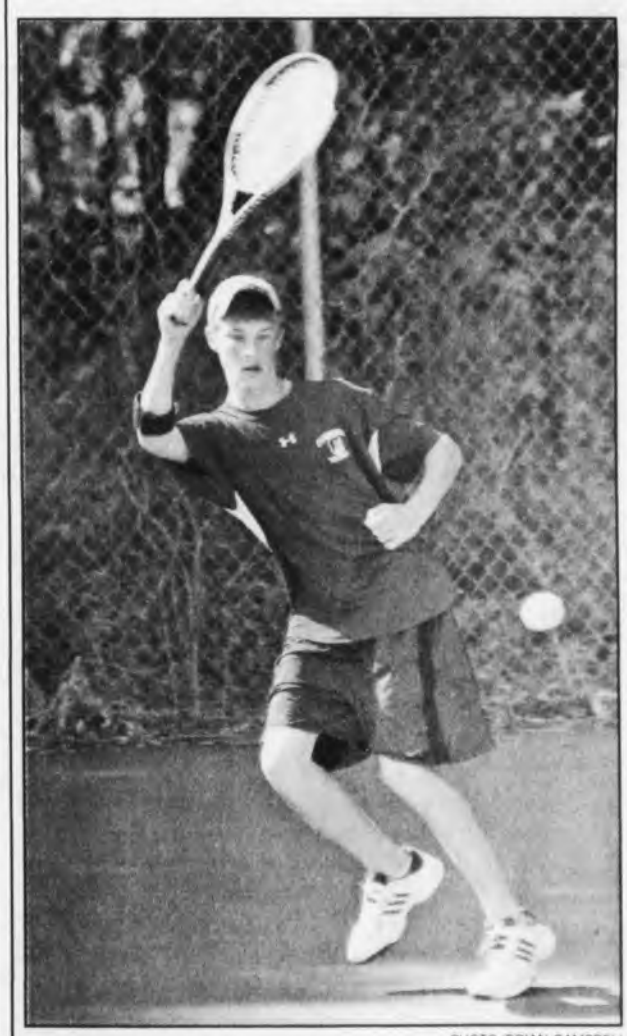
By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

As May turns to June and the weather heats up, another MIAA spring tournament season begins.

And, as has become habit in recent years, Cohasset High School has plenty of representation. Boys lacrosse, softball and both tennis teams are in their respective tournaments, and it's likely that a couple will see their share of success in the competition before it's all said and done.

Below is a synopsis of each team's prospects (teams listed in alphabetical order by sport):

Lacrosse



The Skippers are the defending Div. 3 state champion, and it has to be said that Stew Curran's boys appear to be favorites to at least get back to the title game, if not win it again.

Cohasset's 12-1 record and strength of schedule (its only loss came to three-time defending Div. 1 champion Duxbury) was good enough to earn top-seed status in this year's tournament. As a result, the Skippers have homefield advantage throughout.

The Skippers played 16-seed Weston (9-10) Thursday after the Mariner went to press (you can see a report on that game today on the Mariner's web site; log on to www.cohassetmariner.com and click on "Sports"). A win there would put Cohasset in Monday's quarterfinal against either Georgetown or Bishop Stang, the tournament's 8-9 matchup.

The next highest seed on Cohasset's half of the bracket is 4-seed Hanover. Should a Skippers-Indians semifinal take place, things would appear to bode well for Cohasset, as it defeated Hanover, 12-5, on April 10.

Summer Travel Baseball

The CYBSA Summer Baseball program runs from late June through early August; playing and traveling to other communities south of Boston. Tryouts for the CYBSA's summer travel baseball teams for league age 9, 10 and 11 year old players (born between May 1, 1995 and April 30, 1998) are scheduled for Thursday, May 31, at 3:15 p.m. at Barnes field.

With sufficient turnout, CYBSA hopes and expects to field teams in the District's A and B divisions at each of these age levels. Players who notify the league and register, but who are not at the tryout, will be eligible for any open spaces on the B division team.

In case of foul weather or for updated information, please check the web site, www.CYBSA.net. Questions can be directed to Joe Stanganelli or Liam O'Connell.

The CYBSA also fields an 8 and 12 yr old travel teams. Further information on those teams will be posted on the web site.

Swim and Dive team tryouts

Cohasset Swim Team tryouts will be held Monday, June 18 from 3-5 p.m. at the swim center pool. Swimmers must be 6 years of age by July 1, 2007 and no older than 17. There are limited openings this year.

Cohasset Dive Team tryouts will also be held on the 18th from 5-7 p.m. at the swim center pool. Rain date for tryouts for both swim and dive will be held Tuesday, June 19 with same times.

Summer basketball camps

Cohasset High School varsity basketball coach Dorian Bryant is pleased to offer two camps this summer for kids. The Big Man & Point Guard Perimeter Camp is an intensive four-day camp, July 10-13, for boys and girls in grades 7-12.

The Ultimate Development Camp is a two-day-a-week camp for five weeks, beginning July 2. Both camps are designed so that the camper receives quality instruction on basketball fundamentals. Don't miss out on this wonderful, new opportunity for basketball development.

Applications are at the Recreation Office at the Cohasset Town Hall or can be downloaded by going to www.cohassetbasketball.com. Go to Links/AAU Teams & Summer Camps/Cohasset Summer Basketball Camp.

Deadline for registration is June 20. Contact coach Bryant at dorianbry@aol.com.

Youth tennis lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department will be offering youth tennis lessons this summer for boys and girls ages 7 and older. This seven-week program starts Monday, June 25, or Tuesday, June 26, with one-hour lessons meeting twice per week on a Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule.

Various levels of instruction are available. The cost is $80 per participant. Registration will be held in Town Hall auditorium the week of June 11 as follows: June 11-14, 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m., or the evening of the 12th, 5 to 7 p.m.

You must register in person during the times listed above. If you know your swim and/or sailing schedule prior to registering for tennis, it will be helpful, as the Rec Department has more scheduling latitude than either swim or sailing lessons.

Scituate Tennis Tournament

The Fourth Annual Scituate Tennis Tournament will be held June 16 for doubles, June 23 for singles, both adults and juniors. The cost is $40 per doubles team, $30 per singles player, with benefits going to Scituate Tennis. There will be prizes for winners and finalists. Players of all levels are welcome.

Call 781-545-3396 for an application or information. Applications can be emailed or you may register by phone.

Send us your sports news

Sports teams and leagues are encouraged to send their results and news to the Mariner. Information can be faxed to 781-837-4543 or emailed to sports editor Mark Goodman at mgoodman@cnc.com or mailed to Community Newspapers/South, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, 02050. Mark can be reached at 781-837-4577.

Postseason in full swing

FROM POSTSEASON, PAGE 17

The matchup everyone wants to see, at least in these parts, is a Cohasset-Scituate state final. The teams played a brilliant classic in last year's tournament, with the Skippers scoring two late goals to pull out a 13-11 win on the Sailors' home turf. Scituate has a couple challenges to face before that, starting with a likely quarterfinal against Norwell, a team that handed the Sailors one of their three losses during the season. Dover-Sherborn – Cohasset's opponent in last year's final – looms as a possible semifinal matchup for the second-seeded Sailors, who have homefield advantage on their half of the bracket.

Regardless, if any team is to beat the Skippers, it will have to deal with one of the most well-balanced teams in the state at any level. Starting up front, All-American Mark Flibotte and Mike Grimm have more than ably atoned for the graduation of Aidan Buick. With playmaker extraordinaire Mike Bunstein feeding his teammates with pinpoint passes, Cohasset has no problem scoring goals.

In the midfield, Dan Trendowicz has emerged as one of the top two-way players in the region, while Chuck Czerkawski has dominated face-offs all year. Jeff Brown, the team's best defender, will occasionally step up as a long-stick middy and help the offense as well.

With Brown in defense are Ryan Kucinski and Bobby Meikleham, both of whom having stepped up their game this year. The same can be said for goalie Nate Porter, who came up with a critical save in the closing seconds of Cohasset's 11-10 win over Scituate May 3.

Softball

The 10th-seeded Skippers softballers have already played their first round game as you read this, having traveled down the Cape Thursday to take on Chatham. Chatham finished the regular season with a slightly better record than Cohasset (12-8 compared to 11-9), though Chatham played a significantly weaker schedule.

Thursday's winner advanced to the Div. 3 South quarterfinal against the second seed, Old Colony. Comparing Cohasset to OC, there are similarities between OC and Chatham: better record, weaker schedule.

With young players including Carly Salerno and Meredith Kelly behind the likes of senior leaders Christina Pinkus and Virginia Spofford, the Skippers appeared to stand a good chance of advancing to the semifinals. There comes the big challenge, likely against third-seeded West Bridgewater (15-5), a team that last week defeated powerhouse Cardinal Spellman, 3-2.

Tennis

Boys

Much like their softball counterparts, the boys tennis team has already kicked off its postseason. The Skippers traveled to Kingston Thursday to take on Sacred Heart after the Mariner went to press. The teams played twice during the regular season, with Cohasset winning 4-1 both times.

A win there would bring the Skippers (9-9) to another familiar opponent: third-seeded Cape Cod Academy. Cohasset and CCA squared off twice during the regular season, with the boys from the Cape winning both matches comfortably. Should the rematch take place, the Skippers will hope that late regular season matches against Div. 1 powers Hingham and Duxbury will have led to enough improvement to earn an upset over CCA.

Cohasset is led by three South Shore League All-Stars: second singles Blain Morin, and the first doubles team of Chris Donze and Ivan Sceery.

Girls

The Lady Skippers are the proverbial team peaking at the right time. After a May 15 loss to league rival Norwell, Cohasset has ripped off five wins in a row to enter the state tournament with an impressive 17-1 record. The last two of those victories came against previously undefeated Hingham.

Strong singles play has been the biggest key for the Skippers, as Meg Anderson, Sally Meehan and Maddy Altholtz all were named to the league All-Star team. None of those players have lost more than two matches all season. First doubles duo Elizabeth Landon and Maggie McGoldrick were also named all-stars.

In the first round, Cohasset will face the winner of Thursday's Rockland-Fairhaven match. A contest with Rockland would set up a rematch of last year's Div. 2 South first round match, won by the Skippers.

Cohasset will not have to face any of its local foes in the early rounds, as Scituate and Norwell are both on the other side of the bracket and in fact played each other on Thursday.

Cohasset's Ken Muir (17) greets teammate Nick Zappolo (11) with a high five after Zappolo scored against Sacred Heart in the Skippers' season opener.

Disappointing season ends on high note for local 9

FROM LOCAL 9, PAGE 17

Pitching for the Skippers was junior Brian Hill, who threw a complete game. In nine innings Hill tallied 11 strikeouts and gave up only seven hits. Mashpee scored its final run in the ninth. After an unfortunate two-base error, Mashpee found some luck. The ball was hit to second as the ball took a bad hop and rolled into the outfield allowing the winning run for Mashpee to score.

FROM JV, PAGE 17

The Skippers finished 8-9 on the season. In addition to the strong motivational tactics McMillan employed, he also tested and developed the versatility of his players. Kids started switching up positions, getting exposed to different elements of the game. Derek Schwantner, usually the team's stalwart centerfielder, also pitched and played shortstop. Schwantner delivered the top "web gem" of the season in Harwich, on a foggy afternoon, with a body sacrificing dive for a catch to end a potential Harwich rally.

Nick Simonds, usually in the catcher's gear, got an opportunity at third base and pitched. McMillan found the old Little League A's championship magic of the Brendan Doonan/Johnny Maher partnership. When Doonan pitched, Maher caught and when Maher pitched, Doonan caught. Each had three wins on the season as pitchers, with Maher moving into the starting rotation in the second half of the season. When not in either role, Maher went to third and Doonan went to short.

Sophomore Danny Martin pitched, played first and left field. Martin fanned 40 batters during the season. The team had an ERA of 5 with Maher leading the way with an ERA of 1.52. Freshmen Andy McKenna and Thomas Buckley also took a turn on the mound for the Skippers. McKenna also played short and second and Buckley played right field and first. The entire pitching staff combined for 87 walks, 123 strikeouts and 112 runs.

Offensively, Doonan led his team in all categories. The team batted .315 for the season and Doonan delivered an impressive .609 for the season.

Both Doonan and Simonds had home runs. The team scored 103 runs and stole 62 bases. Sophomore Adam Berger batted leadoff for the team, getting on base frequently. Berger worked a pitcher high into the count, allowing his teammates a chance to see what they were up against. When not at the plate, Berger was in left field.

Kevin O'Connell played first base for the Skippers. O'Connell's performance at the plate was strong, with an uncanny ability to hit into the gap and get on base. Sophomore Conor Ofsthun finished the season in spectacular fashion at second base, with web gems of his own against Archies, Sacred Heart and Mashpee.

Freshman Dan Sullivan had a four-game multi-hit streak going and could always be counted on to get on base. Like O'Connell, Sullivan could hit into the gap with a solid single. Defensively, Sullivan played in right field.

It would have been easy to throw the towel in when they were at the 3-8 mark, but McMillan wouldn't allow it. He not only found the right motivational tactics for the team, but he also reached out to players individually for encouragement. He changed up his game plan and tried new things, new combinations when things weren't going well, and when they were, he stuck with it. Things are looking promising for Cohasset baseball.

Cohasset lax girls get the best of Duxbury

The Duxbury youth lacrosse program is known as one of the best in the state, and it is also known for stacking its teams, playing players by grade levels rather than dividing teams equally. As a result, Cohasset's 15-and-under girls teams (grades 7/8) knew they were in for a treat on May 21, when they traveled to Duxbury to play the town's two 8th grade teams.

The Blue team entered the game unbeaten and left that way, although the contest with Duxbury 8 did put a surprising blemish on their record.

After two quick goals from Kelsey Erler and a solo score from Anna Michalowski, it looked like the Cohasset squad would roll to an easy win. Instead, Duxbury scored three goals to tie the game before the half, and then scored the first four goals of the second half to gain a 7-3 lead.

The Blue team has scarcely been challenged in most of its games this season, and the deficit seemed to shake it out of its slumber. Alison Whelan fed Michalowski to break the Duxbury run, and then added a solo score. After Duxbury answered with a goal to make it 8-5, Whitney Jaffe potted two goals and Whelan took a slick feed from Michelle Berube to bring the score all the way back.

Down the stretch, as Cohasset mounted its comeback, Emily Toomey led the Cohasset defense, scooping several loose balls and giving the offense enough opportunities so that it could get untracked. Long runs from Taylor Kennedy and Lauren Hayes also helpd Cohasset squelch Duxbury scoring chances.

While the Blue team escaped with an 8-8 tie – thanks in no small measure to 6 saves from goaltender Ellie Tedeschi – the girls came off the field with a 5-0-1 record and a sense of relief mixed with disappointment over the loss of a perfect season.

The 15-U White team arrived to play Duxbury 8a, purportedly the hometown's top squad of 15-U players and a team that had played close with Cohasset Blue in the season's opening weekend.

The White squad appeared to have the same attention-span issues as the Blue team, lumping to a 3-0 lead on the strength of two Kaçi Kucinski goals and the 80th score of Jaffe's youth career. Duxbury, which heretofore had been dominated, scored twice in short order to close the gap. And after Paige DeSisto buried a penalty shot and Lindsay MacNaught scored on a warp-around from behind the goal, the home team answered with two markers to make the count 5-4 at the half.

From there, the game was a back-and-forth affair for much of the second half, with Cohasset controlling play but failing to capitalize on its chances. After Duxbury tied the game at 5, MacNaught scored again, only to have Duxbury knot things up less than a minute later. DeSisto's second of the day and Kucinski's third gave Cohasset a cushion, only to see Duxbury rebound with another quick goal.

At this point, the Cohasset squad finally started converting its chances. Christina Healy made a slick cut-back to the inside to stick a lefthanded goal, Kucinski finished a Jaffe feed, and then Jaffe scored herself on a shot that the Duxbury goalie appeared to have stopped, but which somehow managed to trickle in. Whelan answered a Duxbury goal with one of her own to make the final score 12-8.

Dylanne Axelson, Charlotte O'Callaghan, Amanda Farren, Cally Altholtz and Alex Weissman led the defense in front of goalie Stephanie Brierly (5 saves), and controlled the battle for ground balls, which proved critical in turning the tide.

13-and-Under (grades 5/6)

On Wednesday, May 30, the Cohasset 13-U White team hosted Marshfield. After what has become the team's customary slow start, the White team pulled away in the second half for an 8-4 win. Marshfield jumped out 2-0 before Maddie Curley made a nice dodge going from her left hand to her right and firing one home to get Cohasset started.

The team then added three more scores before the half, with Hope Kissick scoring off a great feed from Eliza Murphy and Lexa Grasz adding a solo score. The first career goal for Caitlin Mavilia closed out the half; Mavilia attempted to thread the needle to the Cohasset attack, but the ball took a high hop over everyone – including Marshfield's goalie – and wound up in the back of the net.

Marshfield was short on substitutes and the afternoon temperatures were high so, in an act of good sportsmanship, Shannon McGowan and Curley volunteered to play for the visitors in the second half. They boosted the Marshfield squad, but not enough to stem the tide.

Kissick notched her second goal of the day and made a great assist to Katie McCabe who fired one home from the left side of the crease. Molly Fitzgerald played strong defense in the first half and scored her first goal of the season after moving to attack and blasting a shot to the top right corner on a penalty shot. Peyton McNaught scored the final Cohasset goal, with Murphy picking up her second assist of the day on the play.

Madeline Blackburn made her first appearance for the White squad and was all over the ground balls and played well on defense from her midfield position.

Victoria Bryan played her first-ever game in the net and was outstanding, with 11 saves and several excellent clearing passes. Supporting her on defense were Maria Buckley, Anna McCarthy and Sarah Karp. Both Karp and McCarthy scooped several ground balls and hustled all over the defensive end of the field.

The White team didn't have quite as much success on May 21 in its second game against a Duxbury squad composed entirely of sixth-graders. The game started at a fast pace with both teams creating multiple scoring opportunities, but Duxbury was able to cash in its chances and Cohasset missed its opportunities as the home team raced out to a 4-0 lead.

Mariel Teague got Cohasset on the board, taking a nice clearing feed from Buckley and flying up the right wing before firing one into the cage. Kristin Alexander scored the second Cohasset goal before Duxbury answered just before the half, making the score 5-2 at the break.

The second half started much like the first, with Cohasset missing its chances and Duxbury scoring five unanswered goals to stretch its lead to 10-2. For the next 10 minutes, Cohasset played some of its best lacrosse of the season, scoring four straight goals and just missing a few more. Grasz, Katie McKenna, Teague and Alexander scored during the rally. Duxbury finally answered with a goal and made the final score 11-6.

Murphy, McCabe, Buckley, Isabella Filbotte and Fitzgerald played well on defense and helped transition the ball to the midfield. Curley made 11 saves and faced constant pressure in front of the net.

The White 13-U team is now 4-3 on the season.

The Cohasset 13-U Blue team had a different ending to its May 21 game in Duxbury, when the threatening skies erupted into a heavy downpour, forcing the game to be called off at the half.

Early in the game, however, it was the Cohasset offense that erupted to a 5-2 lead. Building on strong clearing from Kristen Alexander, Curley and other defensive players throughout the game, a number of scores were set up via sharp downfield relay passes to players in shooting position. Smart movement in front of the goal by the middies and attack created openings to take a feed in front for shots on goal.

Teague took a feed from Kissick, who in turn had taken a clearing pass at midfield from Kristen, and drove to the goal with a hard bounce shot to put Cohasset in front. Kathryn Dunn, on a penalty shot due to a shooting zone violation by Duxbury, took a powerful and accurate blast to score again. McKenna took a draw and burst down the field through a number of Duxbury defenders and bounced a hard shot past the goalie.

On a feed from Buckley, who took the draw, Kelsey McCunney moved in front and hit the high left corner to score. And Kylie Koffman alertly picked up a ground ball on a broken clear by Duxbury and buried it in the net.

Other notable play included 6 superb saves by Olivia Blackburn, who also set up some excellent clears. Strong middie and attack play by Maggie Littlejohn, Christina Tedeschi, Isabelle Dunne and Kate Bodner was evident throughout. Cohasset Blue is looking for blue sky to continue this unfinished business with Duxbury 5, but certainly came away satisfied with the work it got done on the 21st.

11-and-Under (grades 3/4)

On Sunday, May 21, the Cohasset White team's game against Norwell was cancelled due to problematic field conditions in Norwell. So the White squad joined up with the Blue team to play on the road in Marshfield.

The game turned into a helter-skelter affair, with a lot of action at both ends. Both teams left the field thinking they had won by a score of 10-9, and the coaches left hoping they might be able to arrange a rematch. With Marshfield scheduled to play in Cohasset against the White team on Sunday June 3, that wish is likely to come true.

The Cohasset girls youth lacrosse teams return to Deer Hill School for six more games on Sunday, June 3, against teams from Norwell and Marshfield. For details, go to www.cohassetlacrosse.com.

The making of a mascot

River Eels searching for face of franchise

By Michael Raciti
CORRESPONDENT

PLYMOUTH - The River Eels, Plymouth's baseball team-to-be, is scouting the area for talent, but not for just pitching and hitting.

"We're looking for the most creative mascot idea [the kids] can come up with," Erik Christensen, Vice President of Marketing and Product Development at Bay Colony and Athletics, said.

The River Eels released rules for entry to their mascot contest, asking children 16-years-old and younger to submit their ideas for a character that best "represents the excitement of the new baseball team, the area or New England."

There are no strict guidelines for submissions, just that ideas are mailed by June 15 to either Bay Colony & Athletics at 81 Samoset Street, Plymouth, MA 02360; dropped in specially marked boxes at Tracy Chevrolet at 137 Samoset Street or at Rogers & Gray Insurance Agency at 341 Court Street in Plymouth; or submitted through email to mascot@plymouthrivereels.com.

The format can vary from just a name and description to a painting or essay, a drawing, a poem, a story, a song, an animation or any other creative or funny idea. Besides being forever etched in Plymouth and River Eel history, the winner will also receive team merchandise, and have the chance to meet the mascot they designed, with their friends, teammates or classmates.

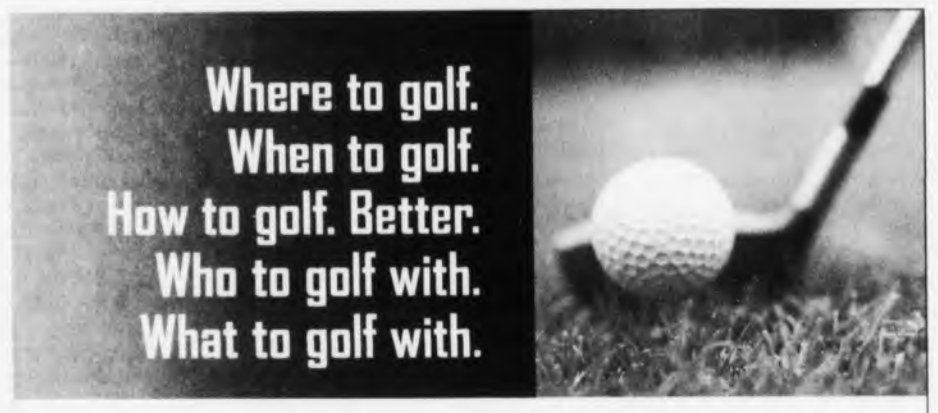
While the team is named the "River Eels," for its historical significance to Plymouth, Christensen says the idea for the mascot need not to be limited by the team's title.

"What is Wally?" he asked, referring to Wally the Green Monster, the Sesame Street-like animal mascot of the Boston Red Sox - a concept unrelated to their logo, a pair of red socks - but still relevant to the team and their habitat. The difficulty of tailoring a convenient River Eel outfit makes the challenge of creating a character based on that logo an upstream battle, thus, the decision to make a mascot relative to the team and the area, but not necessarily an eel. While it is unlikely that we will see a river eel mascot with legs, according to Christensen, the River Eels logo does have some legs.

"History shows that the River Eel has a lot of legs from a marketing standpoint," he said after revealing some of the team's ideas, which include the possibility of having an eel fish tank in the stadium.

Once the winning idea is selected, the River Eels will have a company design the mascot, which will make appearances at games, promotions, and other special events. For these reasons, Christensen said the mascot is even more important to the marketing success of the team than people realize.

The mascot contest is the latest of a series of promotions to keep the excitement level and community interest high for the baseball team. The organization has hosted a VIP event with Bronson Arroyo, ran a float in Plymouth's Fourth of July parade, and is in the process of organizing an even bigger VIP event along with Plimoth Plantation – featuring Red Sox nation and Japanese icon, Daisuke Matsuzaka.



The spectacle would be sure to catch plenty of attention with a pitcher that vaulted to superstar status before even throwing his first Major League pitch this season against the Kansas City Royals this season.

The River Eels are still hopeful for a May 2008 opening, but after jumping hurdle after hurdle in trying to meet an optimistic goal of a 2007 opening for the $30 million project, the only thing set in stone about the opening of the venue is the concrete pour in the stadium itself.

HOK Sport, the architecture firm responsible for the highly regarded Oriole Park at Camden Yards and six other Major League Baseball ballparks, has been contracted to design the Plymouth River Eels stadium.

To stay current with Plymouth River Eels news or to learn more about the mascot contest, visit www.plymouthrivereels.com.

SCHOOLS

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTINE KENT

Well, it's official; the seniors have left the building. Without the sounds of the vibrant seniors echoing down the hallways, high school feels somewhat deserted and quiet. There was always a friendly senior to great you during a long trip to the "bathroom" or visit to the "water-fountain", now the only face we may be seeing is that of a teacher telling us to get back to class. Although, now that the upper classmen are gone, some of us juniors are already starting to feel like the top dogs... too bad all the comfy couches seem to be "missing" from the senior lounge otherwise our transition would be complete!

On Friday, the seniors had their prom, and everyone was dressed to impress. Too bad the 90-degree weather led to some melting makeup and sweaty tuxes (don't forget to dry clean those babies)! As a girl, it's only natural that I take a moment to comment on the amazing dresses and tuxes that graced "the red carpets" on the town common. Jewel tones, form fitting gowns, and short dresses were definitely the fashion trends of the night with many girls sporting relaxed updo's. For those of us who read the In's and Out's of the Spinnaker's fashion, it is no surprise that these seniors know how to dress. (Who will I look to for style tips now that the seniors have gone?)

Now, for some of the main events that happened this week:

• Monday's fabulous celebration of Memorial Day seemed to bring everyone out of hibernation as downtown Cohasset overflowed with townsfolk.

• The polls opened up to the high school on Tuesday, as students finally elected a President, Vice President, Secretary, and Treasurer, for their grade. (At least I can vote somewhere)! In addition, to voting, the 11th grade once again was forced to endure the dreaded History MCAS, with a majority of us forgetting about the test altogether, woops!

• Wednesday, the seniors had to return to the seemingly inescapable high school for a graduation rehearsal and later for Class Night 2007. Congratulations to the following students who won:

For 10th Grade, Christine Coner is President, Vice President is Lucy Noble, and Treasurer is Dominique Rioux

For 11th Grade, The President is Maggie McGoldrick, Vice President is Anna Roberts, Secretary is Jenny Cahill, and Treasurer is Molly Gilbert

For 12th Grade, Kenny Muir is President, Vice President is Jackie Cahill, Secretary is May McCarthy, and Treasurer is Meagan Coakley!

Great job to everyone who ran!

• Thursday, sadly, the baseball team had their breakup dinner at the ever so swanky Cohasset Country Club. However, the boy's lacrosse team continues its season as they played in a tournament game at Alumni Field.

• On Saturday, Cohasset High School hosts another round of SAT's (thank goodness for that)! Unfortunately, these million hour tests are followed by GRADUATION at the music circus, so find your tissues and cameras the night before!

In addition to Prom and the lonely halls of CHS, it was Memorial Day on Monday and everyone seemed to come outside to join in the celebration. After all, who wants to pass up a free meal or a glimpse at the amazing array of flags in front of the Legion? Thankfully, this weekend was filled with lots of sunshine and happening events. Let's hope this coming weekend can be just as beautiful!

Parents of the Cohasset School District are invited to attend a presentation on The A.P.P.L.E. Project at 7:30 p.m., on June 5, at Osgood School Library, behind Deer Hill School.

Advancing Parent-Professional Leadership in Education – The Apple Project and strong and effective parent-professional collaboration improves results for children under IDEA. One of the most frequently expressed concerns by parents and professionals focuses on the difficulty of building these collaborative working relationships in special education planning.

Such a partnership arises out of:

- A shared goal for the child.
- Mutual trust.
- Cultural competence.
- Effective communication and problem-solving skills.
- A clear vision with high expectations for student achievement.

Once learned, these attitudes and skills must be continually improved through practice in the context of school environments, early intervention programs and post-secondary or employment settings.

The A.P.P.L.E. Project will provide collaborative school system teams with training that will allow parents of children receiving special education services to learn skills that will help them become full and effective partners with their schools. Sponsored by PSO/PAC, all workshops and presentations are free.

For those who can't attend the meeting that would like more information about the project, can email southshorepac@comcast.net.

Rec Notes

Sign up for Dance with Caroline

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a variety of sports programs during the summer of 2007, designed specifically and individually for boys and girls, ages 4 through 18. All programs have individual applications, should you wish to register for any of these programs, call the Recreation Dept. office at 781-383-4109, or stop by the office on the first floor of Town Hall. Programs are limited in size. To insure acceptance into a program, register as soon as possible. Family discounts are available for some programs. Sports programs are scheduled to meet regardless of weather conditions in most cases and should it be necessary to move into the High School, you will be notified at drop-off time for the status that day.

Dance with Caroline – A dance workshop will be held for youth ages 7 and older from 3 to 4:30 p.m., Monday, June 18 through Thursday, June 21, in the Town Hall auditorium. The class, directed by Caroline Carr, will include basic jazz and hip hop dance techniques. Emphasis will be placed on developing a healthy, active lifestyle, building strength, flexibility, and endurance, as well as feeling good and having fun. Participants are encouraged to dress in comfortable clothing and take a bottle of water, a snack and an open mind to class. The fee is $80 per participant. Registration forms are available in the foyer of the Town Hall or by calling the Recreation Department.

Youth Tennis – Youth tennis will begin Monday, June 25, and continue for seven weeks, through Friday, Aug. 10. Registration will be held from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 3 p.m., Monday June 11 through Wednesday, June 13 and an evening registration will be held from 5 to 7 p.m., Tuesday, June 12. The program is offered for children ages 7 through 18 years. Participants can choose from two schedules, Mondays and Wednesdays or Tuesdays and Thursdays. The fee for the seven-week session is $80 per person. Lessons for beginners, intermediate, and advanced players are offered. Rain day policy: If it rains before 9 am, all tennis classes may have to be canceled for that day. Call the Recreation Office at 781-383-4109 for weather status reports. Fridays are rain make-up days.

Boot Camp – Boot Camp fitness training classes will be instructed by Betsy Callanan. This unique physical training opportunity will meet from 6 to 7 a.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays, starting Tuesday, June 12, for 10 weeks through Thursday, Aug. 16, on Cohasset Common in front of Town Hall. The fee for the 20 class sessions is $100, and checks can be made payable to the Town of Cohasset. Ms. Callanan will run an interval callisthenic and running fitness program for both men and women for all levels of ability. While running and/or walking remains an essential aspect of this cardio-vascular training format, inclusive will be various integrated calisthenics such as jump roping, stairs or hills, squat thrusts, lunges, push-ups, skipping/running knees, sit ups, etc. Ms. Callanan has designed this program to improve cardio-vascular endurance and strength. Dress in layers as weather conditions dictate, bring a water bottle and jump rope to class and wear running shoes. Success in this class is based upon your individual personal best, not as competition with others.

South Shore Baseball Club – Held Monday, June 25 through Friday, June 29, at Milliken Field. Ages 7 to 12 will meet from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Fee: $185. Ages 5 to 7 will meet from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Fee: $125. Directed by Frank Niles of the South Shore Baseball Club.

Coffee with Authors to cook up some fun

Coffee with the Authors, which is sponsored by Buttonwood Books, will be held from 9:45 to 11:30 a.m., Tuesday, June 5, in the Atlantica Restaurant at 44 Border St. The authors to be featured include best-selling author and Scituate resident, Claire Cook; nature writer, David Gessner; and Channel 7 investigative reporter, Hank Phillippi Ryan.

Claire Cook's book, "Life's A Beach" is about a 40-something single woman who is living back at home in the family FROG (Finished Room Over the Garage). This novel is quintessential Claire Cook - warm and witty.

David Gessner's book "Soaring with Fidel" resurrects Gessner's passion with that majestic bird-of-prey, the Osprey. It is an absorbing story about the instinctual need for migration, both osprey and human.

Hank Phillippi Ryan, Channel 7's investigative reporter, transfers her problem solving skills from the world of reality to the world of fiction. "Prime Time" is her debut novel featuring a respected and successful TV reporter who fears she is being replaced by a younger model.

Tickets cost $15 per person and are available at Buttonwood Books or by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope with your check to Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, MA. 02025. If you are unable to attend and would like to order a signed or personalized book, call Buttonwood Books.

Goodbye to Georgie!

Please join us at the Carriage House School for a "Farewell to Georgie Open House." Stop in and wish Georgie Gladdys, director of the Carriage House School, well on her new adventure! The event is from 3:30-5:30 p.m., Friday June 8, in Trueblood Hall (First Parish House).

Light refreshments will be served!

Art Center hosts 'Visiting Artist Workshops'

South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, is a summer destination for artists, art students and cultural enthusiasts. "Visiting Artist Workshops 2007" includes five master classes in the visual arts. Instructors are offering an array of workshop topics including landscape painting in oil, journal painting in watercolor, pastel painting, cyanotype, and drawing and painting the figure.

Instructors include: Linda Bond, Antonia Ramis Miguel, Peter Schroth, Doug Dawson and Peter Madden. All participating instructors' work will be on exhibition in the Bancroft Gallery. "Viewpoints: Visiting Artists Exhibition" will open Friday, June 8 and continue through July 15.

For more information or to register for any of the visiting artist workshops, call 781-383-ARTS or visit ssac.org.

Garden Club of Hingham to host Plant Sale

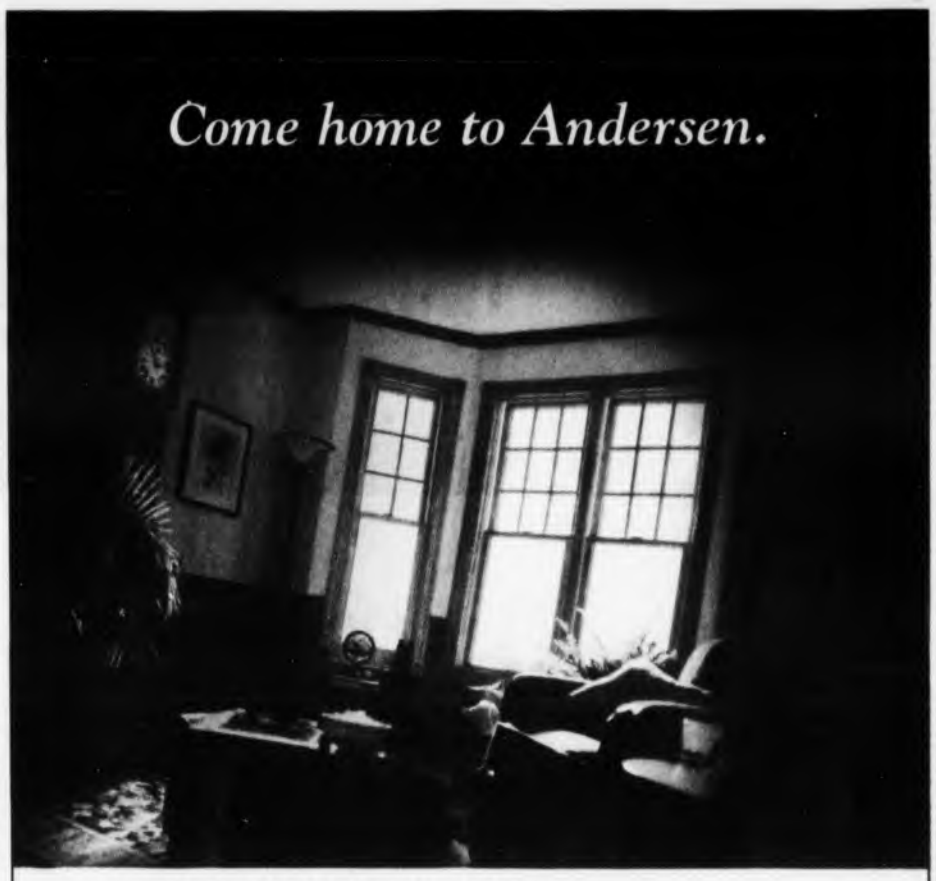
It's plant sale time again for The Garden Club of Hingham. This is always a popular event, and this year it will take place at a new location, 409 Main St. Parking will be available at Haley Field.

The sale will take place from 9 a.m. to noon, on Saturday, June 2. There will be knowledgeable people available to help shoppers sort through the many choices of perennials, herbs and shrubs. Also, a White Elephant Gardener's Table will be featured again this year.

Be sure not to miss this chance to pick up those treasures that make a garden special. The sale will take place rain or shine.

Cemetery walking tour

A spring walking tour of historic Hingham Cemetery will be held Sunday, June 3. Those interested should meet at the Hingham Bell Tower (next to the Old Ship Church) at 1p.m.



Cemetery Director Lucinda Day will lead the tour, which includes the history of the cemetery dating from 1672, important cemetery monuments and notable burials, as well as social commentary. The cemetery's 150-yr-old arboretum consists of several hundred specimen trees, both native and "exotic". The tour will last about 1 fi hours and is open to the public. A $5 donation is requested, with no charge to those under 12. The rain date is the following Saturday, June 9. For further information call 781-749-4868.

Kids to bike for cancer research

WCVB-TV reporter Kelley Tuthill will be the guest MC at the Kids Pan Mass Challenge Bike Ride in Hingham to benefit the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. Tuthill, a member of the Channel 5 TV investigative unit who grew up in Hingham, is fighting Stage III breast cancer. She's lending her support to the Kids PMC in Hingham on Sunday, June 24 at Hingham High School to help make it a special event for all the kids riding and raising funds for the Dana-Farber where she is being treated and just starting her second round of chemotherapy.

Joining in that crusade will be kids from all over the South Shore age 3-15 who are participating in the Kids Pan Mass Challenge Bike Ride in Hingham. Three routes will be set up from the Tykes ride (tricycles welcome), the 2.5-mile Crusader ride and the 7-mile Challenge course into Wompatuck State Park. Although adults are not part of the ride, volunteers for the day can sign up at kids.pmc.org/hingham.

Kids PMC in Hingham is encouraging kids to register now at kids.pmc.org/hingham before the June 17 deadline and start raising funds for their donation to this very important cause.

CFD Status Report

Fires, medical calls, downed power lines

During the month of April the Fire Department responded to 184 incidents, Chief Robert Silvia said.

"The summary of Fire Department responses during the month: four building fires, three hazardous materials responses, four motor vehicle crashes, one motor vehicle fire, three outside fires, 70 medical emergencies, 37 inspections, 25 investigations, five natural gas investigations, two lock outs/lock ins, 15 automatic fire alarm activations, two mutual aid fire responses to other communities, four downed power lines and nine miscellaneous responses," Chief Silvia said.

A total of 53 emergency incidents were reported by 911 telephone: 39 medical emergencies, two building fires, eight investigations, one motor vehicle accident, two downed power lines and one fire alarm activation.

"The Fire Department ambulance transported forty patients to South Shore Hospital and four patients to Quincy City Hospital. A total of 31 of the 44 were advanced life support transports. Mutual aid ambulances transported eight patients to South Shore Hospital and three patients to Quincy Medical Center. Nine of the 11 mutual aid ambulance transports were advanced life support. There was one motor vehicle accident that required victims to be transported to the hospital," Chief Silvia said.

"There were four responses classed as building fires for the month, three were for malfunctioning heating equipment and one was for an electrical fire on the outside of a residence."

— Fire Chief Robert Silvia

Automatic fire alarm activation responses totaled fifteen for the month. Accidental activation of the alarm system accounted for five responses and alarm malfunction was the cause of 10 responses.

"There were four responses classed as building fires for the month, three were for malfunctioning heating equipment and one was for an electrical fire on the outside of a residence," Silvia said.

There were three responses to hazardous materials incidents during the month. One response was for gasoline leaking from a motor vehicle, one response was for a motor vehicle leaking transmission fluid and one was for fluids leaking from a piece of construction equipment due a construction accident.

"Four members of the Department received Incident Command training (ICS 300) during the month. The class was provided by MEMA and was hosted by the town of Abington. The three-day class is required for all members with supervisory duties. A portion of the cost for the class is covered by a MEMA Grant," Silvia said.

Fire chiefs appeal for help in reducing fire fatalities

Cohasset Fire Chief Robert Silva provided the Mariner with the following news item:

Six people were killed in a Baltimore row house fire on May 22. Detroit is reporting its seventh fire fatality in the city in five days. Saginaw, Mich., is mourning the death of a man and five children killed in a house fire Thursday, May 24. Recently, a Kentucky mom and her two children perished in a blaze.

"Something has to be done. Someway, somehow, we have to get the word out to people to protect themselves. We now have more protection available for our homes than ever before and yet people are losing their lives because they are not taking this protection seriously," said International Association of Fire Chiefs president Chief Jim Harmes.

The U.S. Fire Administration cites the following statistics:

- Eighty-two percent of all fire deaths occur in the home.
- Having a working smoke alarm reduces one's chance of dying in a fire by nearly one-half.
- Nearly one-third of the residential fires and two-fifths of residential fire fatalities occur in homes with no smoke alarms.

"These deaths are not just numbers; they are personal tragedies that each of us as a fire chief feels every time a life is lost," said Harmes. Please, help us pass along these life-saving suggestions:

- Check smoke and carbon monoxide alarms to be sure they are working properly.
- Have an escape plan with a meeting place.
- Once you exit your home, do not return. Too many people lose their lives going back into a burning home.
- Stoves are not made for heating homes.
- Supplemental heating devices should be used and maintained in accordance with manufacturer recommendations. Keep combustibles clear. Do not leave supplemental heating devices unattended.
- If you are burning wood in your fireplace, make sure your chimneys are properly maintained. That goes for your furnace, as well.
- If candles are necessary, use them in a safe environment in a fireproof container and away from children. Do not leave them unattended.
- And for the long term, consider getting a residential fire sprinkler. According to statistics, the risk of death by fire is reduced by 82 percent when smoke detectors are accompanied with residential fire sprinklers.

John D. Mineck

Co-founded Boston Golf Club in Hingham

John D. Mineck, 54, of Cohasset, formerly of Wellesley, died May 25, 2007.

After earning his master's degree in Chemistry and his MBA from Boston College, Mr. Mineck began his working life as a chemist for Gillette in Boston. From 1982 to 1993, he was owner and president of Practice Management Systems in Needham. Mr. Mineck's next position was CEO for Mednet Associates in Wellesley, where he remained until 1995, when he became CEO of Camberly Associates in Needham. The development and building of Boston Golf Club began in 1997 and has been his primary focus for the last ten years.

John D. Mineck

Heavily involved in multiple charities and fundraising, Golf Fights Cancer and Driving 4 Life ALS Foundation were two of his favorite benefits. Mr. Mineck was a former executive officer in the Massachusetts Golf Association and Past President of The Society of Arts & Crafts. He was an avid fine wood worker, gourmet cook and was a car enthusiast. He will be greatly missed by the many lives he touched.

Among his many accomplishments, Mr. Mineck's lifelong passion for golf led him, along with his business partner Rob Ketterson, to create Boston Golf Club in Hingham. He was often referred to as a renaissance man because of his widely diverse talents and interests. Characterized by a generous spirit, every decision in his life and business was linked to his desire for helping others.

He leaves his wife, Nancy Skawinski of Cohasset; his father, Raymond S. Mineck of Greenwich, Conn.; his brothers, Raymond E. Garland's words brought to life on stage

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

More than 100 books have been published about Judy Garland, but the one the singer herself started just a few years before her tragic death from an accidental drug overdose in 1969 was never finished. The audiotapes Garland made for the proposed autobiography live on, however, as the basis for "And Now Ladies and Gentlemen, Miss Judy Garland," a new show by Tony McLean which begins performances next week at Boston's Lyric Stage.

"In the mid-1960s after CBS canceled her television show, Garland was very concerned about her family's financial future, and the legendary Hollywood agent and deal maker Irving 'Swifty' Lazar approached her to write her memoirs to make some quick money," explained McLean last week by telephone from his home in Boston. Garland's life was in turmoil by the time she started recording her thoughts in a London hotel suite. Instead of recalling what it was like to work with Mickey Rooney, she ended up recording her thoughts on how she felt life had treated her as a human being."

Garland made the reel-to-reel tapes over a period of two years between 1963 and 1964. According to McLean, the original recordings are now in the archives of Columbia University, but bootleg copies have long been in circulation including one which found its way into McLean's personal collection.

With this show, Kathy has the opportunity not only to sing as Judy, but also to act the part.
Tony McLean

"I had never seen a woman do Judy Garland, just people like Jim Bailey and other men in drag shows based on Judy. Then I heard that Kathy St. George was interested in doing a show on Garland. At that point, Kathy was working with a mutual friend, Deb Poppel of Overture Productions, who got me involved in the project. I had seen Kathy many times, of course, including in the musical "Ruthless!" at SpeakEasy four years ago in which she played a character based on Garland. I gave Kathy a copy of the Judy tapes, because I knew she was perfect to play Garland. In addition to being a great singer, Kathy is also an incredibly gifted actress and she's also just about exactly the same size and frame as Garland."

After completing the arduous process of transcribing the tapes, McLean — the onetime president of Broadway in Boston and former vice president of Disney Theatricals — set about writing a script.

"I took all the tapes and created one very long monologue. Then I trimmed Judy's monotonous venting against her third husband, Sid Luft, and her comments about her love for Mark Herron, the man who would become her fourth husband, because they slowed the pace of the story too much. From there, I fashioned a chronology of Garland's life with a clear dramatic spine."

The final product is a musical in two scenes: the first set in Garland's London hotel suite in 1964 as she records one of the tapes, the second depicting Garland in concert performing some of her greatest hits including "Over the Rainbow," "The Trolley Song," "The Man That Got Away," and "By Myself."

A fan of Garland since his childhood in Dorchester, McLean made sure to blend together just the right amounts of words and music.

"If I could dream a Judy Garland concert, then this would be it. We didn't just plop the songs of her career into the story of her life, however, because we didn't want to do just another cabaret act. Except for five lines, every word Kathy speaks is something Judy actually said. What Kathy also does beautifully is avoid the extremes of impersonation to present a much more natural Judy Garland. The format works very well, because everything is based on what really happened," says McLean, who acquired the rights to the tapes directly from the Garland estate.

Guardians of all things Garland can rest easy knowing that her story will be respectfully presented by McLean, whose mother now lives in Quincy, and who can still recall discovering "The Judy Garland Show" on television when he was just 6-years-old.

"I just knew that the woman on TV was Dorothy and I immediately felt a strong connection to her from 'The Wizard of Oz.' I was a child performer, too, at the Boston Archdiocesan Choir School and with Opera Boston, so I connected to her. To this day, I marvel at Garland's ability to go through what she went through in her life and still deliver so much meaningful music."

Born Frances Ethel Gumm on June 10, 1922, Judy Garland was the youngest child of two vaudevillians who put her on-stage as a toddler under the name "Baby Gumm." The Minnesota native would go on to become one of the biggest movie and singing stars in Hollywood's golden era of movie musicals, best known for her starring role as Kansas farm girl Dorothy Gale in 1939's "The Wizard of Oz," for which she received a special juvenile Academy Award. Over the next 30 years, Garland appeared in more than 30 motion pictures including "Easter Parade," "A Star is Born," and "Judgment at Nuremberg." It was early in her career, while under contract to MGM, that Garland is rumored to have developed the addiction to amphetamines and barbiturates that would eventually take her life at age 47.

She may have struggled with pills and a string of failed marriages, but Garland still managed to carve out success in films and on the concert stage that few performers, before or since, have equaled. It's that dichotomy that McLean believes his show and his star will capture perfectly.

"I see the Judy character in this piece as being up there with Tevye, Mame Dennis, and even Lady MacBeth as one of the great roles of the theater. With this show, Kathy has the opportunity not only to sing as Judy, but also to act the part. People probably know Kathy best from her long runs in 'Menopause: The Musical' and 'Respect: A Musical Journey,' but in addition to being wonderful in light musical comedies like those, Kathy now has the chance to sink her teeth into something dramatic. She has the ability to sound like Garland when she speaks and when she sings. Kathy is a great Judy."

"And Now Ladies and Gentleman, Miss Judy Garland," adapted, directed and produced by Tony McLean and starring Kathy St. George, will be at the Lyric Stage, 140 Clarendon St., Boston, beginning June 8. For tickets and information, call 617-585-5678 or go online at www.andnowjudygarland.com or www.lyricstage.com.

Forget about 'Rent' at 'Once'

Once (A)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

If you see only one indie film this summer, make it "Once," but see it twice. This is the real "Rent."

Glen Hansard of the Dublin band the Frames is the "Guy," a young busker performing on the street in front of an Underground stop in Dublin.

When a sneaky young man stops by to listen, Guy warns him to keep his hands off the coins and bills he's accumulated in his guitar case.

It's typical of this film's gentleness of spirit that after catching the idiot after he makes a grab, the busker gives him only a tongue-lashing and... some money.

Soon after, the hero meets "Girl" (Marketa Irglova), a young immigrant pianist who cleans houses and sells flowers on the street. They connect musically as well as romantically, although they each have personal, unfinished business.

He still pines for the ex-girlfriend now living in London, and she has a baby daughter and is in fact married, although the husband is an "older man" back in the Czech Republic.

Thus, "Once" is about the connections we never made, the ones who got away and the soul mates with whom we did not mate.

Songs full of longing and regret composed by Hansard and several others with such titles as "Leave," "Falling Slowly," "When Your Mind's Made Up" and "Say It to Me Now" are seamlessly incorporated into the action. Girl takes Guy to a music store, where she is allowed to play an expensive piano, and the two patch together a romantic duet.

Guy, who lives with his father, a vacuum cleaner repairman, resolves with the help of the Girl, a bassist and drummer, to take a shot and make a demo tape, but he needs money. How he gets a bank officer to provide it will make you smile.

In the age-old tradition of great Hollywood musicals, "Once" is on one level about putting on a show, and what a show it is. During the recording session, an older, jaded technician's eyes widen with appreciation as he listens. This, he seems to say to himself, is the real thing. And it is.

Written and directed by Irish filmmaker — and former bassist for the Frames — John Carney and originally intended as a vehicle for Cillian Murphy, "Once" is a complete surprise and a complete original.

Shooting without permits, Carney turns Dublin — its over-painted, over-postered, street-light-washed walls, cobble-stoned streets and glowing shop fronts — into a kind of Celtic-Grunge wonderland of musical-romantic possibility. In one scene, the Girl drags a broken Hoover behind her by its hose, both a symbol of a broken heart and a Cubist pet on a leash.

The leads — John Lennon-esque, ginger-haired Hansard and Irglova with her Modigliani face and sexy openness — are perfect. Inspired and inspiring, "Once" is utterly captivating and should have an enduring impact on indie films.

How long before audiences stand up and sing along?

(Rated R. Once contains profanity.)

Girl (Marketa Irglova) and Guy (Glen Hansard) look seaward for musical inspiration.

Jerry (Harry Connick Jr.) can't find a way to talk Agnes (Ashley Judd) out of her funk in "Bug."

New Releases

"BUG" (B)

Ashley Judd is magnificent in "Bug," a low-budget, jarring thriller that is every bit as creepy as its title implies. Judd tears through a bevy of emotions as Agnes, a worn-out barmaid seemingly at the end of her rope. She hooks up with Peter (Michael Shannon), an eerie, brawny guy whose disturbing stare could pierce one's skin down to the bone. Peter insists he was part of a government experiment and miniscule bugs were implanted in his skin. Before you know it, Agnes is along for the ride, and the duo are clawing at their bodies and going insane. All the Calamine lotion in the world couldn't save these lost souls. (Rated R) — Chelsea Bain

"HOLLYWOOD DREAMS" (C)

Eccentric independent filmmaker Henry Jaglom tackles the female psyche again in "Hollywood Dreams," a story about a ditz who yearns to make it big in Los Angeles. Margie Chizek (Tanna Frederick) is an emotionally brittle actress with a head of curly red hair. The first frame opens as she's auditioning for a part; she starts bawling before her monologue begins. Imagine Little Orphan Annie having a meltdown. This teary-eyed intro is exactly what you would expect from the guy who brought us "Eating," "Babyfever" and "Going Shopping." Jaglom, who pens his own screenplays and uses handheld cameras to capture the melodrama, wants to prove he's connected with feminine quirks. His style is getting tiresome. (Rated R) — Chelsea Bain

"PARIS, JE T'AIME" (A-)

Cheaper than a weekend in Paris and almost as romantic, "Paris Je T'Aime" (Paris, I love you) suggests that the miracle and magic of love may be just around the corner, especially if that corner is one of the 18 Parisian neighborhoods that provide the settings for this collection of short films by first-rate talent from around the world. Easily the most enchanting and memorable moment arrives last in Alexander Payne's look at Carol (Margo Martindale), a middle-aged, single, Denver letter carrier who realizes a lifelong dream to visit Paris. As Carol relates her touristy itinerary in American-accented French, we see how a faraway place can seize and live in someone's heart. (Rated R) — Stephen Schaefer

Class of '007 told to live life

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Members of the Class of 2007 sweated it out — throughout their high school careers and at Saturday's commencement ceremony. Amid high humidity 110 seniors crossed the stage underneath the Music Circus tent to receive their diplomas.

The heat turned many of the commencement programs into makeshift fans as the audience waited for the graduates to enter in the traditional blue and white caps and gowns. The Cohasset Concert Band worked to entertain the sweltering crowd, much of which had arrived early to obtain prime seating.

Cheers, camera flashes and the tune of "Pomp and Circumstance," accompanied the graduating seniors as they made their way into the theater in the round.

The ceremony was marked by encouraging and congratulatory words from school administration, the two valedictorians and the Class President. The James Bond "007" class was told to persevere even in the face of difficulty, to challenge themselves and take risks and reminded to always find happiness in their pursuits and to never forget where they came from.

Cohasset village is under a magnifying glass.

The village consultant firm, Concord Square Development Company, has been taking a hard look at the downtown village area to determine what's there now and what's possible in the future.

More than six months after $30,000 in funds was initially approved at fall Town Meeting, the village project is finally underway and will be seeking public input throughout the summer.

"The final outcome will be a set of tools to make decisions about our bylaws and to help in the ongoing site review process for the Planning Board," says Michael Westcott of the Planning Board and point man for this project. "We expect to also deliver thoroughly vetted bylaw changes that enable the kind of development we would all like to see for the village. We want to keep the village vital for business and essentially unchanged for the residents."

Angus Jennings, principal planner for Concord Square, says the initial information gathering period, or phase one, is nearing an end. Jennings and his team have been working over the past month to assemble data on parking, housing, historical resources and open space. A review of current zoning bylaws on the books, an investigation to see if there is adequate parking and a development of a base map are also

Father, son face charges under Social Host Act

Police interrupt drinking party

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For the purpose of this law, "furnish" means to knowingly supply a person under 21 with alcoholic beverages on property owned by the person charged.

A night that was supposed to celebrate a lacrosse playoff win and impending high school graduation did not end up rejoicing much of anything. Cohasset police responding to a noise complaint on Pond Street found a house party with underage drinking. The police have charged residents of the house, a father and a son, with furnishing liquor to minors. This is the second time in less than a year that residents of the same home have faced charges under the Social Host Responsibility Act.

Anthony DiPaolo Sr., 49, of 43 Pond St., has been summoned to court on a charge of furnishing alcohol to minors at his house where approximately 30 youths were apparently drinking beers on Thursday night (May 31). Many of the teenagers, who were standing in the side yard of the property, scattered when the police arrived on the scene shortly after 11p.m. The officers observed cases of beer and red plastic cups filled with beer littering the yard, according to Officer James McLean's police report.

Eighteen-year-old Anthony DiPaolo Jr. approached the officers as they came closer to the house and allegedly told them to "back out to the driveway." The police reported that the young DiPaolo had the smell of alcohol on his breath and his person. During the officers' field investigation and questioning of the remaining youths, DiPaolo turned to Officer McLean and went into a fighting stance, police said. Shortly after, the younger DiPaolo was arrested.

As the officers were escorting DiPaolo to the cruiser, his father DiPaolo Sr. emerged from the house. The officers advised the elder DiPaolo that he would be summoned to court on charges of furnishing liquor to minors. He will appear before a court magistrate where the charges will be reviewed.

When asked to comment, the elder DiPaolo referred all questions to his lawyer, Jack McGlone of Greenberg, McGlone and Hurley, a Boston-based law firm. Although McGlone refrained from making a statement on DiPaolo's behalf, he did say that the DiPaolos' property has a security system with video surveillance that may have captured the events as they unfolded on Thursday night. DiPaolo had the system installed because of his high profile job as the CEO of Work 'N Gear and feared break-ins, said McGlone. They are in the process of getting a copy of the tape from the security company.

Father, son face charges

McGlone said that "emotions ran high" on both sides — the police and the DiPaolos — and the tape might clear up some of the night's events.

None of the other youths were taken into custody. Police Chief James Hussey said the officers could not determine if the remaining youths were under the influence of alcohol so they had no reason to take them into custody at that time. However, their names were taken down and the parents of the youths were notified and if it was a youth's second offense, the school was notified.

The younger DiPaolo spent the night in a cell at the police station. During the course of the night, DiPaolo used what police believe was a penny to carve his initials and profanity into the floors and walls of the cell, Hussey said. He was transported to court in the morning to be arraigned. He pleaded not guilty to charges of underage drinking, providing alcohol to minors, disorderly conduct and felony vandalism. DiPaolo was then released to his parents.

Last June the police responded to a similar party at the DiPaolo residence. When the police arrived to the home approximately 60 teens were inside consuming beer from cans and red plastic cups, according to the police report. Police received a tip from a concerned parent whose daughter had returned home from the party. The caller said the DiPaolo parents had arrived home and "turned a blind eye to the party, and let the youths continue to drink at the home," the report stated. In that incident the younger DiPaolo was arrested and his mother, Gloria DiPaolo was summoned for furnishing alcohol to minors. The charges were dropped on both DiPaolos after they paid court fees.

Under the Social Host Responsibility Act, an adult does not have to present to be charged with allowing underage drinking on premises under his or her control if there is reasonable belief that the adult knows the underage drinking was going to occur. For the purpose of this law, "furnish" means to knowingly supply a person under 21 (except for children and grandchildren of the person being charged) with alcoholic beverages on property owned by the person charged. If found guilty, the penalty can be a fine up to $2,000 or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or both. Incidentally, the law was enacted after Gregory Smith of Marshfield was killed in a car crash as he drove home drunk after attending a graduation party in Cohasset.

Although the younger DiPaolo is not of legal drinking age, he still can be charged with providing alcohol to minors, said Hussey.

Underage drinking is a problem that is found throughout the Commonwealth, Cohasset is just a case in point. Hussey recognizes that the police will always have to deal with situations where youths experiment with alcohol, however, he is concerned that parents are ambivalent to the problem.

"I wouldn't want any parent in the Commonwealth to condone alcohol use by those underage. We can't give permission to youth to break the law. If parents allow kids to drink alcohol, it just opens the door for kids to break the laws. There is a reason the drinking age is 21," Hussey said in a phone interview.

High School Principal Joel Antolini could not discuss specifics, citing the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, which is a federal law that requires written permission from a parent or eligible student (18 and over) in order release any information on a student's education record. He declined to comment on the school's policy regarding off-campus events.

The High School handbook indicates that students participating in athletes in season are subject to a 24/7 rule, meaning if they are found using tobacco, alcohol, steroids, or any other controlled substance anytime during the season they will be subject to an athletic suspension.

Campaign finance report filed for 'blast' message

Nearly two months post-election, a campaign finance report has been filed to account for the town-wide phone message that was sent on Election Day, April 7. Ronnie McMorris filed a Form CPF 18A, a campaign finance report for independent expenditure promoting election or defeat of a candidate(s) at the Town Clerk's office on Wednesday afternoon.

As residents may recall, the "blast" phone message featured the voices of former Selectman Ronnie McMorris and outgoing Selectman Rob Spofford. The message asked voters to get out to the polls to prevent last minute write-in candidate Leonora Jenkins from being elected. They asked voters to cast their ballot for the eventual winners Adrienne MacCarthy and Lucia Flibotte.

According to Dennis Kennedy of the Office of Campaign Finance this form is typically used when an individual takes an action that is either for or against a candidate without the knowledge or approval from the benefiting candidate. Unlike other candidate campaign finance reports that have to be filed within 30 days post-election, Form CPF 18A indicates that the expenditure must be filed with the Town Clerk within seven business days of the expenditure. The form states the expense was paid on June 4.

McMorris's filing names MacCarthy and Flibotte as the benefiting candidates. It cites an expenditure of $147.04 to the Leesburg, Virginia company, Next Big Thing, which was the telephone technology firm used to distribute the message.

Neither MacCarthy nor Flibotte had campaign funding from outside sources, so they were not required to file a campaign finance report with the town. McMorris could not be reached for comment by press time.

'Stabbing' victims won't work with police

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset police are investigating an altercation Sunday afternoon in the village that ended with two brothers being treated at the hospital.

The case could end up at the District Attorney's office because the boys, ages 18 and 16, are not cooperating with police, Chief James Hussey said Wednesday.

Police got involved after receiving a call from South Shore Hospital in Weymouth at 2:47 p.m., Sunday (June 3) about two Cohasset teenagers, who the hospital believes were the recipients of stabbing wounds. The wounds were not life threatening, Hussey said.

Hussey said an officer went to the hospital to speak to the two victims. The officer spoke to the boys' mother briefly who said one of her sons said he had been injured in a fall off a skateboard and someone had assaulted the other.

Both victims were not forthcoming with information when the officer spoke with each of them and have continued to be uncooperative, Hussey said.

The altercation occurred in the town parking lot near the rear of the gas station where one of the brothers worked.

"Based on the information we had, we canvassed the area of the gas station and came across some blood evidence at the rear of the station by the town parking lot," Hussey said. "Detectives were notified and we protected the crime scene and conducted interviews."

Police have identified another person, a 20-year-old Cohasset man, involved in this case and recovered the potential weapon — a pocket-like knife — from him.

Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon said the two brothers suffered lacerations that were consistent with an edged weapon and the third person involved had some minor injuries. He explained without the full story the third individual cannot be described as a suspect or a victim.

"We have not been able to figure out exactly what transpired," he said. "We will investigate to the degree we can. But this issue could end up in the District Attorney's Office, which has the legal mechanisms to investigate matters further."

Lennon said in the normal course of events police are able to develop probable cause and bring charges.

"But without the cooperation of the victims, it could be up to the DA about how to proceed," he said.

Drunk teen

Police took a 16-year-old into protective custody at 10:23 p.m. Friday (June 1) following reports of kids causing a disturbance on Black Horse Lane. When officers arrived they spotted a youth in the area who took off upon seeing them. Twenty minutes later, an officer observed a youth fitting the description on Elm Street by the harbor. When the officer tried to speak to the youth, he started running; the officer caught up with him and determined he was intoxicated. The juvenile was brought into the station and subsequently released to his mother.

False checks

A Plymouth man, who allegedly cashed stolen checks the day before, tried again but this time ended up being arrested. Police said a call came in from Stop & Shop at noon on Wednesday (May 30) reporting that a man had returned and was attempting to cash two false checks.

The checks were on a closed account, Chief Hussey said. Based on interviews, the 31-year-old man was charged with uttering a false check, forgery of a check and receiving stolen property.

Hussey said police contacted the person whose name was on the checks who said they were taken six months ago and he had closed that account at his bank.

Unlicensed

A 55-year-old Cohasset man stopped for speeding on Beechwood Street last week got more than a ticket.

A police officer was using radar to monitor traffic on Route 3A when he clocked a car traveling 47 mph in a 35 mph zone. The officer pulled behind the car as it turned left onto Beechwood Street and pulled it over.

The operator could not produce a license and allegedly did not give police his real name. Chief Hussey said he provided a name and date of birth and said he did not know his social security number. Police could not confirm any license with that name and birth date.

The man then gave police the correct name. He was charged with operating on a suspended license and refusing to identify himself; he was cited for speeding and for not wearing a seatbelt.

Erratic driving

An officer pulled behind a vehicle on Hull Street that had been reported as having been operated erratically by a cell caller. The officer observed the vehicle cross the centerline and pulled it over. While asking the driver – a 28-year-old Brockton man — for his license and registration, the officer observed a small plastic bag containing a green leafy substance believed to be marijuana sticking out of his pocket.

The man was charged with possession of marijuana and marked lanes violation, Chief Hussey said. The incident occurred at about 1a.m. on Tuesday (May 29).

Minor crash

Two vehicles sideswiped one another along Parking Way in the town parking lot last Wednesday (May 30) at just before 11 a.m.

Chief Hussey said a 1990 Mack Truck out of Scituate and a 2002 Toyota from Hingham were passing each when the damage to their side-view mirrors occurred.

There were no citations because no fault could be determined, he said.

Missing prescription

Police are investigating a potentially stolen prescription of Oxycodone that a woman found missing from her pocketbook when she left work for the day last

Village consultant to include public process

being worked on as part of phase one of the project.

To complete the data collection process and then move on to analysis and recommendations, members of Jennings' team will be seeking input from the village merchants and landowners in the upcoming week. They will be visiting downtown shops armed with surveys and questions.

"Our goal is to gather as much information as we can" so the team can better understand the dynamics of the area and take their thoughts into account. "We want to get a sense of why they chose Cohasset Village for their business" as well as understand what they see as the advantages of the location and the challenges they face.

The consultants will also be asking if the merchants and property owners foresee significant changes in their piece of the village over the next three years, ranging from small modifications in signage or adding staff to larger projects like complete renovation or changes in building use.

A key component of the project is to promote development that will ensure business stability year round. Part of that plan will likely include apartments, but its Jennings' job to investigate what scale and design would work best for the village business district.

In addition to business vitality and housing, the consultant will also make recommendation on parking, village character, open space and improving pedestrian connections, infrastructure and zoning bylaws.

The town, with the help of Concord Square, is seeking a Priority Development Fund grant from the Department of Housing and Community Development. If awarded, the grant funds would allow the town to seek the services of architectural design firm. The retention of an architectural firm would enable the production of high quality, design guidelines and provide original renderings of the village. The illustrations would bring "clarity to the end product," says Jennings. The town has heard favorable reviews for the application and expects to hear back within the next week.

A public kick-off meeting will be held on June 19 at Town Hall (time yet to be determined), in which the consulting team will present the project objectives and discuss specific opportunity sites. They invite all to participate, in particular landowners and village merchants. A series of meetings will be held throughout the summer to provide all interested parties to share in the process.

"[The project is all about the most public space in town, the village. It really is Cohasset's character and getting public input each step of the way is the only way to do it," says Westcott. Concord Square's experience with small village centers and predisposition was a large part of why they were chosen for the project.

Thursday from her job on King Street. Chief Hussey said she had had the prescription filled earlier in the day and when she got ready to leave for the day, it was no longer in her handbag. "We are following up on some leads and the matter is under investigation," he said.

Animal bite

A caller reported to police last Wednesday (May 30) that the neighbor's boxer had just bitten her elderly mother. The victim was able to get the dog off by using her cane, police said. Chief Hussey said police did confirm that the dog had punctured her skin.

Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy said the dog was up to date on its shots and its owner has agreed to put up a fence. "Everyone is working together," he said.

Run off road

Police ended up taking a man, who is legally blind, into protective custody last week after he refused to get out of the cruiser at his father's house. The incident occurred at about 11:45 a.m. last Wednesday (May 30). Police responded to a call from the Mobil mart from a pedestrian who said he had almost been run off the roadway. However, when the officer arrived the man, who had a dog with him that was not a seeing-eye dog, was not sure where the incident had occurred. The officer, realizing the man had been drinking, offered to drive him to the Cohasset address he provided as his father's residence. However, once there, he refused to get out of the cruiser and was taken to the station "to sleep it off," Chief Hussey said. He was offered a Breathalyzer test, which he agreed to, and failed, police said. The department also has a kennel and kept his dog until the man was ready to be released.

Ditched

The operator of a 2001 Ford Ranger called police at about 6:50 a.m. Thursday (May 31) to report he was traveling south on North Main Street when he swerved by Cedar Street and went off the road into a ditch. Chief Hussey said he was transported to the hospital with what appeared to be minor injuries. The vehicle was towed.

Suspended license

An officer conducting traffic enforcement on Pleasant Street at about 2:30 p.m. on Thursday (May 31) observed a person drive by whom he knew did not have the right to operate a motor vehicle, Chief Hussey said.

He could not stop the car at that moment but knew where the individual was staying. He wrote a citation and hand delivered it; the 31-year-old Scituate man will be summonsed to court for operating on a suspended license. The officer also let the owner of the car know she should not allow the man to drive her vehicle.

Bicyclists falling

Bicyclists are continuing to fall at the grade crossing on North Main Street by Woodside Cemetery. A caller reported some bicyclists were falling as they were crossing the tracks at about noon, on Sunday (June 3). Apparently they were looking down and did not see the signs asking bicyclists to walk their bikes across. The angle of the tracks at that location causes the bicycle's wheels to get trapped and people fall off their bikes.

Chief Hussey said something must be done to rectify the situation by creating a way that bikes can get around that location, he said.

Retaining wall

A Jerusalem Road resident had an unwelcome surprise when he returned home to find that someone had run into at retaining wall in the 90 minutes he'd been away Sunday afternoon (May 27). The property's wall is made of railroad ties, about six of which had been displaced by the impact.

There was a small piece of plastic at the scene that could of come from the vehicle. The incident remains under investigation.

Secure plates

Police received two reports recently of "stolen" license plates that turned out to be lost not stolen, Chief Hussey said. In one incident, the plate was discovered in Scituate by police there and was returned to the owner. In the second incident, the plate was found at the car wash.

Hussey said it is a good idea for residents when getting their car's oil changed or other work to check the screws on the license plate.

A lost plate can be a real hassle. He said chances are the registry would have to issue a new plate with a new plate number.

'Rosano Triangle' needs site plan review

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Joseph Rosano's plan for a mixed use building with commercial and residential purpose got approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals and received a building permit back in September 2006. If all had gone according to plan, passersby on Route 3A would have already seen the semblance of a new building — instead of a pile of dirt.

Now, after three informal meetings with the Planning Board to discuss his building, the board voted 3-2 on Wednesday night to recommend the Building Inspector not to issue a permit until there is a full site plan review.

Rosano ended up in front of the Planning Board after his building permit expired. The Planning Board contends that the Planning Board should have been Rosano's first stop because of the proposed building's location in a commercial district. The plot of land, often called Rosano triangle, is bordered by Lower King Street, Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Rosano Lane (formerly Crocker Lane), is zoned residential but is in a commercial district.

However, Rosano has argued in his three meetings with the Board that he has already gone through proper procedure with the Zoning Board to get approval for his multi-purpose building with medical/professional offices on the first floor and one apartment on the second floor. He defends his permit saying at the beginning of the process, he was never advised a site plan was necessary and was given verbal assurances from the Building Inspector that the permit would be renewed with no problems.

"It is real close to gray areas that make lawyers a lot of money," said Al Moore, Chairman of the Planning Board, in a phone interview. That gray area seemed to turn a little black and white for, at least, Moore and member Bob Sturdy after they received a letter from Town Counsel advising them that a site plan was required for the development. Member Stuart Ivimey was the third majority vote has said from the first informal meeting with Rosano a site plan should be required.

"The reality is this requires a site plan review," said Ivimey, while sympathizing with Rosano's situation is still concerned with traffic and safety in conjunction with the proposed building. The current plan includes two curb cuts onto to Route 3A: Rosano Lane and what will be an "exit only" driveway, both of which did not sit well with the Board.

Vice Chairman Bill Good and Mike Westcott, the two opposed votes, expressed they were comfortable discussing the issues with the plan without a full site plan considering Rosano's cooperation up to this point.

Part of the reason, some members of the Planning Board are concerned about the proposed development is the parcel is located in a "hot spot" that is going to see a lot of changes in the near future. The plot is in the center of a few potentially large developments: the MBTA station and potential transit oriented district (TOD) to the north and Avalon development to the south. A traffic light is also in the works for that intersection of King and CJC Highway.

The discussions with Rosano have been drawn out over three meetings and, at times, emotions have run high on both sides. The Planning Board has tried to walk the line between being fair to the applicant and making sure that the project will not have any negative impacts on the area.

At his first appearance on May 9 the Board requested that their engineer, John Modelewski, look over the plans and offer his concerns, if any, with the plan. Rosano complied with their request, seeing no other way to move the project forward.

At the second night of discussion on May 23, Modelewski gave his preliminary review of the project. His concerns were primarily traffic related.

"This is highly sensitive area traffic wise," he said at the May 23 meeting, "if this was a full site plan review, I would want a traffic engineer to be involved."

Modelewski said his chief concerns were the Rosano Lane curb cut, the access driveway be moved and the amount of parking spaces. At the meeting on Wednesday night, Rosano brought plans that addressed some of Modelewski's concerns: a moved access driveway, as well as reduced parking from 17 to 10 spaces. However, he contended he could not close off access to Rosano Lane as requested because other individuals have easements over the Lane and frequently use it. Rosano Lane would be kept unpaved to discourage the public from using it as a cut-through.

Before the vote was taken, the Planning Board requested that Rosano contact the parties who have rights to the easement to see if they would be willing to surrender their rights to Rosano Lane.

After the vote was taken, the Planning Board said that they could schedule the review as soon as July 11. A full site plan includes a public hearing where residents can air concerns and the Planning Board and Modelewski will take an in-depth look at all aspects of the project.

Beach and recycling permits to expire June 30

The expiration date of the beach and Recycling Transfer Facility permits is June 30. The "all facility sticker" for the next fiscal year will be on sale starting the week of June 18 during normal business hours at Town Hall and at the DPW garage on weekends starting June 23, from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., and Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Sticker prices will remain the same as last year – $50 for residents under the age of 60 and $15 for seniors. This sticker will allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility and Sandy Beach, as well as parking at all areas in town that require a sticker.

In addition, residents will be required to purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. These bags will be offered at the Department of Public Works building and various locations throughout the town. All commercial contractors and vehicles registered in a business name should pick up their stickers at the Department of Public Works. Residents are encouraged to purchase stickers through the mail by providing the appropriate fee, a copy of a current registration and a self-addressed return envelope.

TOP PIANIST

South Shore Conservatory recently congratulated Cohasset piano student, Audrey Kirwan for placing second in her division of South Shore Conservatory's seventh annual Piano Solo Competition. As a winner, Audrey, a student of Piano Instructor Hui-Min Wang, received a performance in a special winners concert on June 3. Fantastic news, Audrey, congratulations.

FARMER'S MARKET

Get ready for the Farmer's Market getting ready to kick off on Thursday, June 14. This weekly event is held from June 14-Oct. 18th from 2:30-6:30 p.m. and is filled with fresh produce, entertainment, arts and crafts, activities for the kids and so much more.

SCHOLARSHIP

Cohasset High gradate Laura Campedelli was among 10 recipients of $5,000 Pilgrim Arena Scholarships awarded last week. Laura will head to Boston College in the fall.

The recipients and their families were honored at a special reception last Friday at the arena on 75 Recreation Park Drive in Hingham. The Pilgrim Arena awards scholarships annually to graduating high school seniors. The winners are selected by the Scholarship Committee of the board of directors at the arena.

RELAY FOR LIFE

The Cohasset Relay For Life including Scituate, Hingham and Hull is coming on June 15 and 16. This is an event that supports the American Cancer Society for children through adults held at Alumni Field at the Cohasset Middle/High School. They are looking for volunteers for the day of the Relay and also if anyone needs luminaria bags and bows. Please call Jacqui Goyette-Vitello at 781-383-2668 or email PJVIT@aol.com.

SKIDMORE GRADS

Cohasset residents, Kathleen C. McCarthy and Taylor L. O'Brien were among 600 students receiving degrees during Skidmore College's commencement May 19 at the Saratoga Performing Arts Center. Kathleen is a sociology major and Taylor is an education studies major. Congratulations to you both on your success.

CEA VOLUNTEER

After helping one of his own grandparents learn how to use a computer seven years ago, Austin Breslow began volunteering at Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs to help all of the seniors in the community who wanted to learn about computers. During the seven years that he has been a volunteer, he has helped more than 80 seniors learn the ins and outs of computer technology and also created a manual for a teaching a computer technology class for senior citizens. Austin has helped some seniors in their late 80's go from being scared to turn on a computer to e-mailing their friends and searching for information on the internet.

In honor of his volunteer service to the CEA, Austin was presented with a 2007 Community MVP Award by New England Patriots owners Myra and Robert Kraft.

The Patriots presented a $1,500 grant to Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs on behalf of Austin, who has spent the past seven years teaching senior citizens how to use computers.

DEAN'S LIST

Quincy College announced its Spring 2007 dean's list and Cohasset student, Sara Osmanski was listed on it. Super work, Sara.

LAW DEGREE

Brian R. Riley, a son of Bob and Carol Riley and a 1996 graduate of Cohasset High School, received his Juris Doctor degree May 20 from Suffolk University Law School at their centennial commencement exercises in Boston. Excellent news Brian, congratulations!

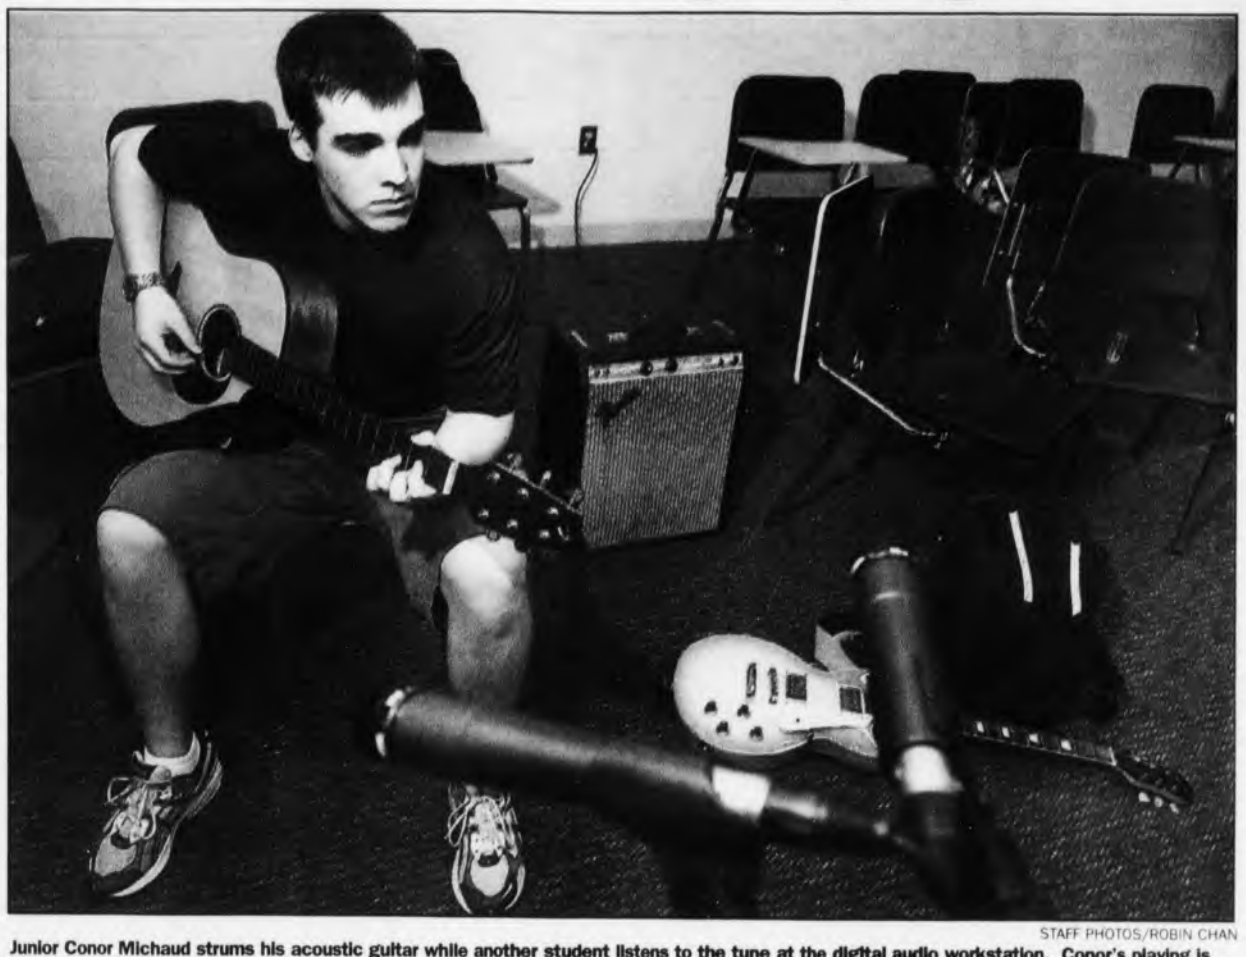
Students schooled in recording equipment

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM



A rising music recording artist could get their start right here in Cohasset. In fact, high school musicians could be recording their very first CD release in the near future. Thanks to recent workshops training students on a digital audio recording device, students could be recording their latest original music, school concerts and audition CDs right at the high school.

The Digital Audio Workstation, or DAW, was given to the music department close to two years ago as a gift from the Class of 1984, in memory of one of their own, Peter Daggett, a student and man who was passionate about music.

"He would have likely been among the interested guitar players there [at the training]," said music teacher Bryan Marks, "the Korg D1600mk II (the recording device) is indeed an appropriate memorial gift to the school from his classmates."

However, the high-tech machine was not user-friendly and with a 300-page manual, it was a little overwhelming to both members of the faculty and the students. Although Marks and another teacher successfully recorded a few school concerts, they did not feel comfortable teaching it to others and felt the equipment was not being used to its full potential. They needed someone with expertise to show them how to set up a recording session and record music.

Then the opportunity for collaboration between the Cohasset Arts Boosters and the South Shore Conservatory came up in the early spring. The Conservatory was looking for more involvement in local schools and offered an Audio Recording Workshop that could teach students how to use the equipment. Booster parent, Carol Meyers, contacted Mark Campbell, director of Hingham campus of the South Shore Conservatory, and he agreed to teach a four-week workshop with any interested middle-high school students.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Junior Conor Michaud strums his acoustic guitar while another student listens to the tune at the digital audio workstation. Conor's playing is picked up by the microphones and can be digitally edited and recorded by the workstation. With the help of the workshop, students will be able to create a professional sounding recording.

Freshman Austin Meyers adjusts the gain, fade, loudness and master volume on the digital audio workstation. The Class of 1984 donated the recording equipment in memory of their classmate, Peter Daggett. (For a video of the workshop, visit: www.cohassetmariner.com)

Seven interested students signed up for the workshop. Some are involved in the school band, others play in ensembles outside of school, a few have even started their own bands — and some do all three. These multi-talented kids are taking full advantage of the opportunity to learn more about different aspects of music and audio recording. The students see music as something they want to pursue in the future.

"It's a good thing for those who are interested in music, to know something about audio recording," said Campbell, "how much music nowadays is live or from concerts? The majority is recorded music."

The workshops have progressed from setting up a recording session to editing music to transferring the final product to CD, "once this is done they can come in and use the equipment," said Campbell.

Matt Blaze and Conor Michaud, both juniors at the High School, have their own band and they have started to write "better original music."

"I hope to learn how to do a professional recording," said Conor. Although they haven't hit the big time yet, Marks said the most important thing is they have a good time getting together and playing music.

Campbell explained the intricacies of the studio equipment and the different ways a recording session can be set up with a comfortable ease and in simplest terms.

"If guitar players can do it, anybody can," he joked, as each student held a guitar on their lap. He references famous bands like the Beatles and Led Zeppelin, who used similar recording set-ups in their early years, to engage the students.

After a short lesson, the students got hands on experience with the digital recording workstation, with headphones on their ears they adjusted the loudness and the fade or panned the microphones left to right — each modification changed the sound. Finding the right mix of the different elements is the key to a professional recording.

"You're the engineer, you make the choice," said Campbell, "it's your job to get the best performance out of the performer."

Once the students are adept with the digital recording workstation and can produce professional sounding recordings, Marks hopes they will impart their knowledge on other (younger) students so the equipment can get continued use.

"I hope they'll help record concerts, make CDs out of performances. Professional audio recording is not cheap and we have a wonderful opportunity to have it homegrown," Marks said. Making CDs of school concerts or other performances could also be a fundraising opportunity for the Boosters—with continued student interest, the gift could keep giving back for years to come.

The Cohasset Arts Boosters sponsored this workshop. Their mission is to provide essential support for fine and performing arts at the Middle-High School. To learn more about their efforts visit: www.cohassetartsboosters.com

Class of '007 told to 'live life'

Class President Mike Corry, after welcoming various members of the audience, exclaimed "yahoo for school! Yahoo for us!" that got his classmates and the crowd to laugh.

"Today isn't just a celebration of the past; it's also a grand welcome of our individual futures. Class of 2007, embrace the things to come and appreciate the foundation that our parents, friends, and teachers have given us," Corry said.

Although Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini told the audience he mistakenly left Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh off the program, she was unfazed, "thank goodness the superintendent isn't sensitive to things like that." She then offered the class some words of wisdom inspired by baseball legend Cal Ripken Jr.

Walsh began by congratulating the smart class in which 97 percent will pursue higher education, some at prestigious universities such as Dartmouth, Boston University, Fordham, Perdue, Cornell, St. Andrews in Scotland and Tulane, just to name a few.

She said the students find themselves in a society that observes life rather than lives it, citing the advent of many reality television programs. She did not want the class of 2007 to fall in love in 13 weekly episodes or travel the world via contestants on a TV show, instead Walsh quoted Ripken's motto "get in the game if you want to play, play if you want to win."

She advised the class to take to heart Ripken's life and words as outlined in Ripken's book, "Get in the Game: The 8 Elements of Perseverance That Make the Difference." Ripken's philosophy developed as he worked to surpass Lou Gehrig's record for most consecutive games played.

She told the students that they already have the first element: the right values. Parents, teachers and the community have instilled the values of hard work, excellence, honesty and integrity in them, she said.

Walsh said they would need to find a way to incorporate Ripken's other elements into their lives and pursuits: a strong will to succeed, a love for what they do, preparation, anticipation, trusting relationships, life management, and the courage of their convictions.

"When you leave here today, you will be in the game. Play everyday," Walsh said, "experience life to the fullest and enjoy every inning of the game."

Next up to the microphone was the first of two valedictorians, Caren Garber who intertwined Max Ehrmann's poem "Desiderata" to inspire her classmates to "reach for the stars" but "keep your head out of the clouds."

"But most of all, remember that, as Ehrmann concludes, 'with all its sham, drudgery, and broken dreams, it is still a beautiful world. Be cheerful. Strive to be happy,'" she said.

Ryan Ingram, also earned the title of valedictorian, pointed out that taking risks in one's life might bring the sweetest victories. She cited examples from her own high school experience where it was the non-academic, intangible achievements of which she was most proud — traveling to the Middle East, spending a week immersed in a different culture and language on the French exchange, and joining the Spinnaker senior year.

"We all have our comfort zones, our safe harbors, our shallow waters. But in choosing not to venture into the deep end or beyond protected waters into the uncertainties of a tumultuous ocean, we limit our own happiness," she said, challenging her classmates to "take a risk, to delve into the uncertain so that one day you might discover a real limitless sense of completeness."

Ingram wished her classmates "the highest of tides and the most daring of adventures."

Antolini took the podium next to highlight some of the many accomplishments of the class.

"You are well prepared to move on," Antolini said. A well-rounded class, students had garnered accolades for work in the classroom, on the stage and on the playing fields. They have traveled the world and brought a worldly perspective back to the classroom.

"These are the building blocks of things to come," Antolini advised them to enjoy the friendships they have gained in Cohasset.

After all members of the Class of 2007 received their diplomas, caps and woops of joy were in the air. Antolini concluded the exercises, "Cohasset High School Class of 007, you're dismissed!"

Kurt Gritzan remembered

In the most poignant moment of the graduation exercises, the Class of 2007 and school administration honored the Gritzan family with a certificate of recognition for their son Kurt's "contributions to the class of 2007."

Kurt Gritzan, a member of the Class of 2007, passed away in April 2006 after a battle with cancer.

High School Assistant Principal Mike Gill said he taught his classmates a "lesson in courage, determination and hope."

Christine Gritzan, Kurt's mother, came to the stage with a standing ovation to accept the certificate. She held the certificate up to the Class of 2007 in a motion that seemed to both congratulate and thank them.

ZBA closes public hearing on Cohasset Hardware plans

Draft decision is due in July

Jim and Tina Watson, owners of the building, are seeking to turn the iconic village building into two retail spaces on the first floor and four one-bedroom apartments split between the second and third floors.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset Hardware will remain as is for at least another month but the proposed plans are one step closer to a determination. The Zoning Board of Appeals has closed the public hearing and will have a draft decision at its next meeting on July 10.

Jim and Tina Watson, owners of the building, are seeking to turn the iconic village building into two retail spaces on the first floor and four one-bedroom apartments split between the second and third floors. In order to execute their plans, the ZBA will need to grant both a special permit to allow multi-family dwellings on the second and third floor as well as a variance to get around the 40,000 square foot lot restriction.

Initially, the Watsons only applied for the special permit but at the first public hearing in May the ZBA advised they would need to apply for a variance. The variance application is a more stringent process with more guidelines.

Key to the approval of the special permit and the variance is proving the applicant would be deprived of reasonable use of the building. The strongest argument for the approval was that many (or perhaps most) of the buildings in the village business district already have apartments on the second floor.

"Because of the regulatory 40,000 square foot rule, we're not allowed to use our building the way other [building owners] are using their building," said Charles Humphreys, counsel for the Watsons.

Getting an accurate count of just how many buildings in the district have apartments — and how many — may be the deciding factor of the variance. The ZBA requested the applicant provide a census of apartments in the village.

Building inspector Bob Egan reported that the village consultant hired by the Planning Board was in the process of getting that number and could have an accurate number within a week.

Another sticking point was in the initial designs of the building there was an apartment solely on the third floor. A zoning bylaw prohibits apartments on the third floor of a building and the Watsons would then need two variances to proceed with their plans. The ZBA suggested the plans be revised to include part of the dwelling unit on the second floor.

As a result, the plans were adjusted to include a 150-square foot room on the second floor; the square footage count included the staircase to the third floor. The plans call the room a "study."

Woody Chittick, Chairman of the ZBA, said that with the staircase the room was only about 80 square feet — not what he would consider a room. A dwelling unit is defined in the zoning bylaws as cooking, living, sanitary and sleeping facilities.

Charles Humphreys, counsel for the Watsons, argued that it was a habitable, useable, functional space and should be considered as such in the greater scope of the dwelling unit.

"The study on the second floor does suffice the way the bylaw is written," said ZBA member Peter Goedecke later in the meeting, but admitted it raised questions of whether the language of the bylaw needs to be adjusted. Another option may be to reduce the number of apartments from four to three, suggested ZBA member Charlie Higginson. He said that the reduction would not cause a loss of reasonable use of the lot by the applicant.

Peter Brown of the Economic Development Committee spoke in favor of the proposed changes to Cohasset Hardware, "I don't think it's any mystery that the 40,000 square foot regulation is flawed." He praised the design as something "very positive" for the village area.

Humphreys conveyed a sense of urgency in his final comments, "my clients need relief now. The building needs to be rehabbed now."

In addition to the census of apartments in the village area, the ZBA requested a drawing of the after construction elevation in the coming weeks.

Heather Collins, community program manager, and Sarah Hannan, executive director, proudly display a Certificate of Special Congressional Recognition for the Art Center's coordination of the 2007 Congressional Art Competition for high school students.

Art Center Receives Congressional Recognition

U.S. Rep. William D. Delahunt, 10th Congressional District, awarded a Certificate of Special Congressional Recognition to South Shore Art Center and its community programs manager Heather Collins May 24 in recognition of the Art Center's coordination of the 2007 Congressional Art Competition for high school students. The 160 pieces submitted to the competition were on exhibit at the Art Center through June 3. The award-winning pieces, chosen in the categories of painting, drawing, multi-media, photography and graphic design, will then be displayed in a special exhibition tent at the Art Center's 52nd annual Arts Festival on Cohasset Common, June 15 through 17.

"It is not often that an arts institution is recognized publicly, but the Art Center recently was honored not only by Congressman Delahunt, but also by the Massachusetts Alliance for Arts Education," said Sarah Hannan, executive director of the Art Center. On May 31, the MAAE awarded the center its 2007 Champion of Art Education Award for Outstanding Cultural Institution. Hannan said, "It feels great to have this recognition. We know we are fortunate to have incredibly dedicated and supportive students, faculty, board and staff and the awards are a nice pat on the back. The Art Center is committed to offering visual arts classes, exhibitions and programs that enrich the lives of our greater community and we believe we are fulfilling our mission every day."

Lobster roll sale is on

Despite a shortage of lobsters this past winter, lobster lovers will be glad to hear that First Parish in Cohasset will again present its annual lobster roll sale June 15, 16 and 17, during the South Shore Art Center's Festival on the Common. The all-meat, fresh lobster rolls, with no filler, will remain at last year's size and price ($13) including a bag of Cape Cod potato chips. "These lobster rolls have become a tradition for festival attendees over the years" said Betsy Millard, co chair of the committee along with Penny and Art Myles. "In fact, quite a few buyers return the next day for yet another taste of summer — they're that good!" Penny Myles suggests getting co-workers together at lunchtime on Friday, or bringing lobster rolls home for lunch or dinner with family and friends on Friday, Saturday or Sunday.

Pre-ordering is encouraged. Orders can be mailed to the Parish House, 23 North Main Street, Cohasset, MA 02025 with checks made out to First Parish in Cohasset, or order by emailing or calling Penny Myles pmyles74@comcast.net or 781-749-1989. Orders can be picked up at the Parish House on Friday, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., and 4 to 7 p.m.; Saturday, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 4 to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. There will be a lobster pick-up zone in front of the Parish House.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Stay tuned

Local access was something promised to cities and towns when cable-TV first came to the area.

We recall the days when there were local studios in each town, followed by regional studios. Now plans are afoot to close the TV studio in Norwell, which serves Cohasset and several other towns.

However the current cable-TV negotiations could open the door for new opportunities.

In Hingham, the Cable Advisory Committee is considering asking for cash in lieu of a studio – money that the town could use to acquire a mobile studio van to cover local events, such as the Fourth of July and sports.

Comcast's contract with area towns expires in 2009 so negotiations have begun. Cohasset and other towns could sign an agreement with Comcast and/or any other qualified vendor.

All those of baby boomer age and younger have grown up with TV. It is a huge part of our lives. Cable-TV has opened television up so much more. (How many of you remember when there were only three channels?)

The Cohasset Cable TV Advisory Committee, which meets at 7:30 p.m. Thursday (June 14) at Town Hall, could benefit from input from townspeople, civic groups, and others who might be interested in producing local programming.

Here in Cohasset we are fortunate to have "Our Town" which focuses on local issues and is produced by a handful of dedicated volunteers both in front of and behind the camera. Wouldn't it be great to have more local programming?

Community-based programming that might include a mobile TV van could only be good for Cohasset. There are many potential TV "stars" in town such as those who participate in making events like the Relay For Life, South Shore Arts Festival and Road Race by the Sea happen. It would be nice to be able to bring more of the look and feel of these events to local TV viewers. The videos could then become part of the historic record. We also think it would a great way to involve more young people, who have grown up in the video era, with town events.

Readers can contact the cable committee through the Selectmen's office at Town Hall. Let them hear from you.

Village plans

Although Village is clearly in transition with the recent closure of Cohasset Hardware, our lovely town center is looking better and better. The new sidewalks and crosswalks have pulled things together.

As we drove through town this week, we were particularly struck by how terrific the top of Elm Street looks (where Elm and S. Main streets meet). The Cohasset Historical Society museums have been refurbished, and the antique store and fireplace shop add beauty to the corner, which is enhanced by the new sidewalk in the area.

The consultant firm, Concord Square Development Company, is now on board. In the months ahead, bylaw changes could be proposed that will help the village increase its vitality while maintaining its character. A public, kickoff-planning meeting with the consulting firm is planned for June 19 at Town Hall. (The meeting's time had not been determined by press time).

Here at the Mariner, the village continues to be one of our "favorite" subjects. We are solid proponents of keeping our downtown area healthy because it is a critical part of what makes Cohasset so special.

Readers can continue to look forward to more village coverage in the months ahead.

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Those dubious about attempts to foster democracy in the Middle East might consider some remarks from a paper by Natan Sharansky, former political prisoner in the Gulag and now an Israeli official, and Ron Demer, Minister of Economic Affairs in the Israeli Embassy in Washington, published in the May issue of the American Spectator.

"The virulence of the Islamic threat both inside and outside the Middle East is linked to the region's freedom deficit" "Like fascism, Islamism extremism is best cultivated in tyranny."

"To lose heart about the possibility of a democratic Middle East is very short sighted. For most of the problems today are not evidence that Arabs are incapable of building free societies, but rather evidence that such societies would pose a mortal threat to the forces of tyranny and terror in the region."

"The lesson of Lebanon, then, is not that democracy cannot be built in the Middle East, but rather that it will not be built without a fight." As for the unfortunate result of Palestinian elections (electing Hamas to power) the authors suggest: "Rather than call for elections at the beginning of the process of reform, elections must come only after that process is well underway."

"By far the worst of all possible scenarios is for America to simply turn its back on democracy in Iraq and thereby hand the enemies of freedom a great victory." "Tragically, judging from the many recommendations of last year's Iraq Study Group that would reward tyrants, court dictators and abandon democracy, it appears to be the 'new' bipartisan consensus."

The authors clearly believe that the choice is between bringing freedom and democracy to the Middle East, or suffering from unending and increasing attacks on our societies.

HEALTH NOTES

Let's go to the beach!

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Six years ago, Congress passed the BEACH Act of 2000, requiring that coastal and Great Lakes states and territories report to EPA on beach monitoring and notification data for their coastal recreation waters. The act requires EPA to maintain an electronic monitoring and notification database of that data. So each year, the EPA posts on a weekly basis, its latest data about beach closings and advisories for the 2006 swimming season.

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH) is responsible for implementation of the bathing beach monitoring program at more than 500 coastal beaches in Massachusetts. The BEACH Act resulted in funding used to increase and implement consistent water quality monitoring throughout the state, increased public awareness of beach water quality issues, and identify areas of concern. This act funds beach sampling done in Cohasset each week.

All public and semi-public bathing beaches in Massachusetts are required to be monitored for bacterial and other types of contamination during the bathing season. The bathing beach season in Massachusetts runs from Memorial Day through Labor Day during most years.

If water samples from a beach are found to exceed regulatory standards, the beach must be posted as unsafe for swimming due to bacterial contamination. Monitoring is currently conducted at over 600 locations at 500 marine beaches. You can see a map, updated weekly, of the results of this monitoring on the web at http://mass.digitalhealthdepartment.com/public_21/beaches.cfm?btown=Cohasset

The six sampling sites are: Bassings Beach, Black Rock, Little Harbor, Sandy Beach, Sandy Cove, and Cohasset Yacht Club as shown on the representation of the Google map displayed with current data on the above web site. Look it up; the map is easy to use and you'll get the latest data!

Renewable power and energy efficiency meeting June 13

The South Shore Coalition representing the towns of Braintree, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth presents Making it Happen in Your Town, A South Shore Forum, on Wednesday June 13, from 6:30 to 9 p.m. at Hingham Town Hall, 210 Central St., Hingham.

Across Massachusetts and around the world, communities are acting locally to improve global sustainability.

Learn more about what you can do in your town to use more clean power, increase energy efficiency, and save tax dollars.

- How to start and sustain an energy committee in your town
- The basics of community wind projects and the resources available to help you
- How to make municipal buildings and operations more efficient
- Opportunities to increase green building and conservation in the private sector
- Legislation and policies necessary to increase sustainability
- How communities on the South Shore can work together to save energy and money

The program includes:

- Table exhibits and networking (6:30 to 7 p.m.)
- Short presentations on capacity building, conservation, and renewable energy (7 to 7:30 p.m.)
- Community exchange and panel discussion (7:30 to 8:15 p.m.)
- Small Group Discussion (8:15 to 9 p.m.)

Participants and presenters will be from the following

- State agencies
- Non-profits and foundations
- Vendors and consultants
- Citizen leaders from other communities

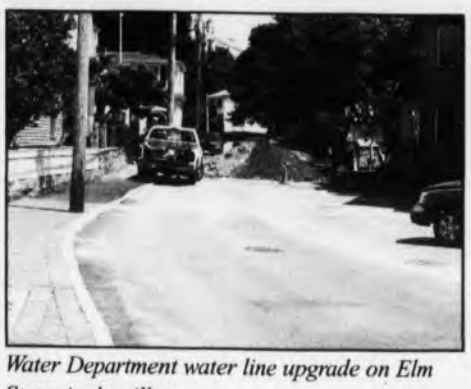
More village work this summer

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN



Toward the end of last week, two new projects began and another will begin next week. Last week the repair of two additional sections of seawall got underway.

Seawall work– The repair of the seawall at the Cohasset Sailing Club on Government Island was started. This is a rather small job and should be completed in a week or two. Because the work area is out of the way, this repair will not be visible unless you visit Government Island. The other new seawall project is on Border Street, running from Lawrence Wharf (next to the Old Salt House) down to the Veterans Memorial. This work will be very visible. Although the way it looks now, we will be able to keep two-way traffic open on Border Street and won't have to resort to one-way traffic with traffic lights as we did on the other section of Border Street.

Village revitalization – Those of you who were in Town last summer remember the work that was done in the center of the Village. Most of the comments about the redesign and resulting construction are very favorable. But we do get questions about the condition of Brook and Elm streets. Residents ask why these two streets don't look as nice as the other streets. Well, the answer is simple, the project was not finished.

The Town ran out of money. We used up all of the money from the original PWED (Public Works Economic Development) grant without completing the project. Since last summer, the Town has gone back to the Transportation Department, who gave Cohasset the original grant, and explained that the time delay from when the grant was awarded in 2001 to actual construction in 2005/6 caused the costs to increase to a point beyond our financial resources.

It's interesting to note that Transportation Department officials actually came to Cohasset without our knowledge to assess the quality and quantity of the work we were able to complete. The feedback that we received from the officials was that our Town did a very good job at doing what we had committed to do. We believe that this was one of the reasons that early this year the Transportation Department agreed to add sufficient new funds to our PWED grant to enable project completion.

Water Department water line upgrade on Elm Street in the village.

Forest Avenue ledge waiting for removal.

So, now we have the financial ability to finally complete Brook and Elm streets. However, this part of the project won't be nearly as difficult as the Main Street and Depot Court portions from last year. The reason is that while we had all of the heavy construction equipment here last year we were able to get all of the underground drainage work done. So, this summer there will be no deep holes to contend with. The only work remaining is at the surface; new curbing, sidewalks and street paving. This should go very quickly, compared with last year.

So when will this work start? We're glad you asked. You should plan on construction starting about Monday, June 11th. The contractor working on the Revitalization completion is the same contractor working on the two newest sea wall projects and has historically been easy to deal with and has done high quality work. For those of you who are keen of eye, you may have noticed that there was some work in Elm Street for utility upgrades at the old hardware store this past week, but it had nothing to do with Revitalization. (See photo)

Back To Greenbush – We have just learned that the MBTA must do some remedial drainage work at the Lower King Street crossing. This will involve closing Lower King Street for several days while the road is excavated and new drainage fixtures and pipe are threaded around all of the many underground utility services in this area. By the time you read this work may have already started, since we are not sure of the schedule for this work.

Forest Avenue – This past week the work started to remove the ledge alongside of the road for the sidewalk. The contractor will be moving up and down Forest Avenue wherever the ledge needs to be removed. Please drive very carefully. The road will be very congested during construction. And, be very careful at night because the contractor may have equipment and material stored along the edge of the road. We ask your indulgence to not park on Forest Avenue during construction so that the contractor can store his equipment at the road side. This saves time and enables the job to be completed quickly.

Curses, hoaxed again

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Most of us were horrified last week when BNN, the Dutch national television network, announced that three potential organ recipients would compete on the "Big Donor Show" for a life-giving kidney from a terminally ill cancer victim.

Viewers themselves would be able to vote for the candidate of their choice but the final selection, said the announcement, would be up to the donor, identified only as "Lisa," after she interviewed the candidates, their families and their friends.

This, of course, turned on the spigots of the "Have we come to this . . ." crowd. The words "tasteless" and "unethical" appeared prominently in their comments. But no one bothered to ask a key question: How do the organs match medically?

In fact, I was even thinking of doing a little tsk-tsking myself but fortunately I'm only allowed out of the home once a week and by that time the opportunity to look foolish passed.

A few hours before the show was to air, BNN announced that "Lisa" was not dying of a brain tumor and there would be no televised contest for her kidney and it was all a hoax concocted to raise public awareness of the need for organs.

At the same time, 11-year-old Jamison Stone was taking bows in Fruithurst, Ala., for killing a 1000-pound, nine-foot-long wild boar after a three-hour chase on a hunting trip his father.

A photo of little Jamie clutching his trusty rifle and peering over the body of the monster hog quickly circulated around the country and the TV networks fell all over themselves issuing invitations to the youngster to appear on a morning show.

A few days later, it was revealed that the monster was not a wild boar after all but a pig named "Fred," owned by the Lost Creek Plantation and turned loose in a 150-acre, fenced-in pasture after it was deemed too big for slaughter or breeding.

Once again, the news media fell into the trap of taking a photo and an announcement for granted and not asking obvious questions. For instance, I would think a 1000-pound, nine-foot-long pig would have attracted some attention before this.

Even the best of us occasionally are prone to taking some things at face value.

The staid old Financial Times of London got its knickers in an uproar 10 years ago when the Guinness brewery disclosed that it had signed an agreement to become the sponsor of the millennium celebration at the Greenwich Observatory.

Until the end of 1999, the press release said, Greenwich Mean Time, from which time all over the world is calculated, would be known as Guinness Mean Time to the consternation of the Financial Times. The date on the release, March 30, could have warned them.

A mysterious news release arrived on assignment editors' desks in New York in the spring of 2000 announcing plans for the 15th annual April Fools Day Parade down Fifth Avenue, even describing one float about Mars missions as costing $10 billion.

Two TV news crews from CNN and Fox actually showed up at the appointed time and place. Apparently, nobody bothered to read beyond the first line of the release.

My life as a concert groupie

TALES FROM THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

On a lark, I went to a Grateful Dead concert the summer before my sophomore year.

With summer coming and the South Shore Music Circus and other venues announcing their schedules, I've been reminiscing about concerts I've attended over the years. I grew up in Columbia, Maryland, right down the street from Merriweather Post Pavilion, one of the country's premier outdoor concert theaters. This meant that I was introduced to "Dead Heads" long before I'd ever even heard "Uncle John's Band." Their VW vans cruised into town, they set up camp in the woods next to the facility, and a strange new aroma descended upon the neighborhood.

It wasn't until I attended college that I was exposed to the actual band and their music. On a lark, I went to a Grateful Dead concert the summer before my sophomore year. Clearly out of my element, I had to borrow my tie-dye attire for the day, as my prepster wardrobe consisted mainly of Fair Isle sweaters, polo shirts and headbands.

However, someone must have thought I fit right in, as only a week later when I was back in upstate New York at Colgate University, I received a call from a former high school classmate, checking to see if I was still enrolled. He had heard a bizarre rumor that I had dropped out of school and was following the Dead around the country. As the ultimate good girl/scholar/athlete, I was incredibly flattered and told him to keep the rumor going. This he did, as I was to discover years later at a high school reunion.

Other infamous moments of my concert-going past:

The "I'm no Simon Cowell" Award. In order to finance my high school senior week beach plans, a friend and I ditched school to buy Madonna tickets so that we could resell them to freshmen. Our reasoning? This Madonna chick is a one-hit wonder. "Like we'll ever hear from her again."

The Marcia Brady/Davy Jones Fantasy Moment. He didn't come to my house, and I wasn't president of his fan club, but Rick Springfield once kissed my hand at a concert and I didn't wash it for at least 24 hours. Yes, I always wanted to be "Jessie's Girl."

Why I Still Hate Courtney Cox. Through some fabulous connections, I once got tickets right up front to see Bruce Springsteen. Unfortunately, I was never pulled out of the audience for some "Dancing in the Dark" with the Boss. Years later, when Courtney Cox made her mark in Friends, I was devastated to learn that the video was rigged.

The Most Difficult Ticket to Get in Boston. Anyone with a small child knows that "The Wiggles" are "The Beatles" for the toddler set. When they came to the Boston for the first time a few years ago, I was lucky to get some in the few minutes before they sold out. One less fortunate friend resorted to calling a ticket broker who, exasperated after fielding dozens of similar calls throughout the day, informed her that while he could get her any Rolling Stones tickets she wanted, the Wiggles were just not going to happen for her. However, if she did come across some, he had a finance guy willing to pay good money for a pair.

The Great Escape. In my youth, the one group that rivaled the Dead Heads for bizarre parking lot antics were Jimmy Buffett's Parrot Heads. In my twenties, I made annual pilgrimages to the Margaritaville mayhem, relishing the spectacle of generators powering 20 blenders of Margaritas at once; pickup trucks converted into swimming pools; and thousands of Baby Boomers in Pirate gear longing for changes in latitudes so that they could escape from their lives for a while.

In my early 30s, when tickets became difficult to come by, I suddenly realized that while I appreciated Jimmy Buffett's songwriting and showmanship, I really didn't need to escape my life anymore. And even if I did, while it might involve a Margarita or two, it certainly wouldn't involve men wearing shark fins on their heads and dancing in hula skirts.

Yet, even now, while I haven't joined in any pre-concert tailgate antics in a long, long time, I still smile whenever I hear Jimmy Buffett sing, "If we weren't all crazy, we would go insane."

Diane K. Danielson is a Cohasset resident whose career as a concert groupie was short-lived and uneventful; but who knows, maybe a tailgate at the South Shore Music Circus might change all that. For more of Diane's random musings visit www.womensDISH.com.

Connecting, not separating with nature

TOWARDS A SUSTAINABLE COHASSET

JOANN MIRISE

With endless commitments sucking our time and suburban sprawl eliminating our open land, it takes a conscious effort to connect with nature.

The invitation came one October afternoon a half dozen years ago. I had to re-read it more than a couple of times to fully grasp what exactly I was being called upon to witness.

Two very close friends – a married couple – had decided to separate after a period of attempted reconciliation. The invitation was for their separation ceremony.

I have a lot of free-thinking, bohemian-type friends with all sorts of alternative ways (which I relish) so getting an odd request was not out of the ordinary. But this one completely threw me.

First, there were all sorts of logistical questions. What does one wear to a separation ceremony? What do I bring? The only two guidelines were that it was to take place in a clearing in the woods, so wear appropriate shoes. And there would be a picnic afterwards, so bring a dish to share. Appropriate shoes and a snack, for a separation ceremony held in a clearing in the woods. Huh?

The directions to the clearing were vague, as you can imagine most instructions of this type would be. ("In the far corner of the parking lot, enter at the wooded opening near the tall tree with black markings above the knot that looks like an old man's face." What?)

Luckily there were others who I recognized as guests of the occasion, so with swift and quiet resolve we found our way to the place where we were expected. There was a circle crafted in the dirt, marked by some Native American-looking artifacts and carefully placed stones. The 20 or so of us were instructed to join in a circle.

The ceremony was led by a shaman. With a powerful, captivating energy, she called upon the elements of the Earth including the sun, wind, water, animals, and the four directions of south, west, north, east, to help my friends through their transition. Some of it I didn't quite understand but the main message — that we are intrinsically interconnected with everything that surrounds us — came through loud and clear. The beauty of the ceremony was trumped only by the depth. There wasn't a dry eye in the crowd.

This was one of the most authentic, moving experiences I have ever had. For the couple, it was a testament to the love and respect they had for each other. For the sacrament of marriage, it was proof that this bond was sacred. For each of us as individuals, it was a reminder of the good we are capable of demonstrating. For the group, it was an example of how a community can come together as a stronger whole. And for the Earth, it was recognition of the intense healing power she freely offers.

In our daily lives we can create meaning through the simple act of just being in nature. The richest way to experience the outdoors is in its most unstructured, natural form – taking a walk in the woods, wandering the tide pools at the ocean, or simply watching a butterfly dance through your backyard. This is especially true for our children, for it is the deep connection with nature that we develop in our childhood that can be the basis of a lifelong respect for the environment.

With endless commitments sucking our time and suburban sprawl eliminating our open land, it takes a conscious effort to connect with nature. Richard Louv, author of "Last Child in the Woods," has even come up with a diagnosis, "Nature Deficit Disorder" which is characterized by our propensity to stay indoors within our artificially controlled environments. The result is a context that places our existence as the primary reference point of life. Collectively, our children are at risk of growing up thinking they are the center of the universe, when in fact we are a small part of a much larger creation. Can our civilization, in its fragile state, afford a future generation of leaders who have no sense of place in our natural world?

With this I leave you with the parting words that I heard a thousand times yelled from the kitchen of my childhood home: "Go outside!"

'Oldest fifth-grader' joins school field trip

Senator visits museum with his alma mater

It was all part of a Foster Elementary School field trip on which the senator, a Foster alumnus, and Hingham native was invited.

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"Who is the oldest fifth-grader here?" asked docent Charles Woodard at Hingham's Old Ordinary museum.

Several hands flew into the air but one noticeably did not – the one belonging to state Senator Robert Hedlund.

But Woodard quickly pointed to Hedlund and the 45-year-old "fifth-grader" was called to demonstrate how to utilize a colonial-era tool called a "draw shave" used to trim wood to make things like buckets.

It was all part of a Foster Elementary School field trip on which the senator, a Foster alumnus, and Hingham native was invited.

As it turns out back in February, Hedlund was speaking at a 325th anniversary event at Hingham's Old Ship, a national landmark and the oldest wooden house of worship in the country still in continuous use. He explained to the audience that he always takes out-of-town guests to see Old Ship but had never actually been inside before. Hedlund explained he was absent from school the day his fifth-grade class went on a field trip to Old Ship and the Old Ordinary, a former tavern where travelers could get an "ordinary" meal at a fixed price.

A member of the historical society and Old Ordinary House Committee was in the audience that February day. Soon a letter was dashed off to the senator, a Weymouth resident, inviting him to join this year's Foster field trip.

Hedlund accepted the invite and rode on the school bus with Mrs. Gail Marskalka's class on Tuesday morning. His nametag served as the permission slip and he was given "special dispensation" by being allowed to bring his ice coffee along – a drink he had to part with once he stepped inside the museum.

As he climbed off the bus, he had already made a friend in Joe Cifrino, who later revealed he might be the "second" oldest fifth-grader in the class because he turns 12 in a couple of days. Joe grew up on Hedlund's old street, Foley Beach Road.

Hedlund, who stands 6 ft., 3 ins., was clearly the tallest on the tour, towering over his classmates the biggest of whom stood about 5 feet.

The senator, who represents eight towns including Cohasset, had to duck under the low ceilings and doorframes of the structure that dates back to 1680. He listened to the docents as the class went from room to room and learned about everything from trundle beds and beehive ovens to cross-stitched samplers

Due back at the State House that afternoon for a formal session, Hedlund, who is known for being pretty casual when not at work, was the only one in the class not wearing sneakers and shorts.

Mary Roever, who was conducting the tour of the upstairs rooms, asked the class why bedding often included long canopies. One student replied "for fashion" and Hedlund raised his hand and said, "to keep the bugs away." However, the senator was incorrect. Roever explained bugs came from below. Another student had the right answer and said "to keep the cold air out."

It was later learned that colonists often had to cope with bed bugs because mattresses were made of straw; bed supports were tightened with a special device: hence the expression, "sleep tight and don't let the bed bugs bite."

At one point Hedlund, who acknowledged that he gets queasy at the sight of blood, participated in a mock demonstration of a leg amputation – a common practice in olden times to remove an injured limb. He noted that fifth-grader Michael Ford, 11, who played the patient "has a great career ahead of him as an actor."

Marskalka, the fifth-graders' teacher, explained the field trip was a culmination of their study of American history and Hingham history.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Old Ordinary docent Julianne Mehigan talks to fifth-graders from Foster School — including former Foster fifth-grader Bob Hedlund — about the history of the house that dates back to 1680.

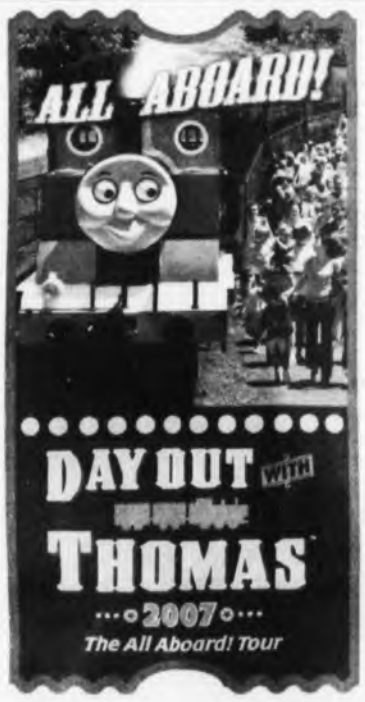
The Old Ordinary hosts 15 fifth-grade classes each year, including those from the three public elementary schools in Hingham, St. Paul's and Derby Academy.

Hedlund, who graduated from Hingham High in 1979, said he had "learned a lot" as he climbed back aboard to school bus for the second half of the field trip, a tour of Old Ship.

About The Old Ordinary

If readers would like to visit Hingham's Old Ordinary, 21 Lincoln St., this summer, hours from mid-June to mid-September are Tuesday through Saturday from 1:30-4:30 p.m. or by appointment. Adults $3; children under 12, $1. For information call, 781-749-0013. The design of the grounds is attributed to Frederick Law Olmsted, Jr., and they are maintained by the Garden Club of Hingham.

The Old Ordinary, a property of the Hingham Historical Society, dates from 1680 with additions made in 1740 and 1760.



State Sen. Robert Hedlund, who missed his fifth-grade trip to the Old Ordinary, joins Mrs. Gail Marskalka's Foster Elementary School class on Tuesday. At right are guide Lisa Hemphill and June Pratt of Hingham's Old Ordinary House Committee.

Fifth-grader Aiden Brashier, 10, and Sen. Bob Hedlund, who joined the field trip, check out the structure of the Old Ordinary.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund listens to some questions posed by docent Mary Roever while taking a tour of the Old Ordinary. Unlike the fifth-graders, Hedlund had to duck as he went from room to room.

How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE

Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com).

This chart shows Cohasset's police spending per capita in 2002, 2003 and 2004. The chart also shows the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group. By comparing Cohasset with similar communities, one can get a sense for how Cohasset has decided to allocate its resources to policing the community.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

For more information about Municipal Benchmarking go to municipalbenchmarking.com

Editor's note: Benchmarks is an ongoing series that is run when space is available.

Consider yourself asked and donate blood

A decline in blood collections over the past several weeks has resulted in a shortage of approximately 1,600 units of blood across the Northeast.

While the reason for the decline in collections is unclear, one thing is certain – patients rely on blood transfusions every day.

There is currently less than one day's supply of many blood types including O-negative, the universal blood type. The Red Cross is most comfortable with a three-day supply of blood.

Blood drives are occurring across New England and can be found by calling 1-800-GIVE LIFE.

Most people can give blood through the American Red Cross. Potential donors must be at least 17 years of age, weigh 110 pounds or more and be in general good health. Most medications and medical conditions are acceptable — call for specific information on your particular situtation.

To make your appointment to donate blood or if you have questions about donating blood, call 1-800 GIVE LIFE (800-448-3543) or visit www.newenglandblood.org.

Library Corner

Independent film night is June 21

The following events will take place at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film "The Bothersome Man" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, June 21, in the Meeting Room. Free admission and refreshments provided courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Library Book Group – Join others for coffee and discussion of Anse Seierstad's book "The Bookseller of Kabul" on Wednesday, June 27, at 10 a.m., in the Meeting Room. All are welcome.

New Books on CD – Just in are these new titles. Reserve a copy today. "Exile" by Richard North Patterson; "Quantico" by Greg Bear; "The Quest" by Wilbur Smith; "Lords of the North" by Bernard Cornwell; and "Bleeding Hearts" by Ian Rankin.

Knitting Group – The Knitting Group will meet on two Wednesdays this month: June 13 and 20, in the Meeting Room. Edna Finegan of the Senior Knitting Group will be the instructor. Free. All knitting levels welcome!

MP3 Players Available for Checkout – The library has two MP3 players available to checkout. These devices are great for downloading audio books from the library's Overdrive Audiobook service. Listen to favorite books while gardening, exercising or relaxing. Easy-to-read instructions make operating the player a cinch. Present a valid OCLN library card to the circulation desk to check one out.

FOR CHILDREN

'Catch the Beat' at the library — Registration begins Monday, June 25, at Paul Pratt Memorial Library for the 2007 Massachusetts statewide summer reading program, "Catch the Beat @ Your Library."

Visit the library Web site at cohassetlibrary.com calendar for full summer details.

Rec Notes

Youth tennis starts June 25

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a variety of sports programs during the summer of 2007, designed specifically and individually for boys and girls, ages 4 through 18. All programs have individual applications, should you wish to register for any of these programs, call the Recreation Dept. office at 781-383-4109, or stop by the office on the first floor of Town Hall. Programs are limited in size. To insure acceptance into a program, register as soon as possible. Family discounts are available for some programs. Sports programs are scheduled to meet regardless of weather conditions in most cases and should it be necessary to move into the High School, you will be notified at drop-off time for the status that day.

Youth Tennis – Youth tennis will begin Monday, June 25, and continue for seven weeks, through Friday, Aug. 10. Registration will be held from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 3 p.m., Monday June 11 through Wednesday, June 13 and an evening registration will be held from 5 to 7 p.m., Tuesday, June 12. The program is offered for children ages 7 through 18 years. Participants can choose from two schedules, Mondays and Wednesdays or Tuesdays and Thursdays. The fee for the seven-week session is $80 per person. Lessons for beginners, intermediate, and advanced players are offered. Rain day policy: If it rains before 9 am, all tennis classes may have to be canceled for that day. Call the Recreation Office at 781-383-4109 for weather status reports. Fridays are rain make-up days.

Dance with Caroline – A dance workshop will be held for youth ages 7 and older from 3 to 4:30 p.m., Monday, June 18 through Thursday, June 21, in the Town Hall auditorium. The class, directed by Caroline Carr, will include basic jazz and hip hop dance techniques. Emphasis will be placed on developing a healthy, active lifestyle, building strength, flexibility, and endurance, as well as feeling good and having fun. Participants are encouraged to dress in comfortable clothing and take a bottle of water, a snack and an open mind to class. The fee is $80 per participant. Registration forms are available in the foyer of the Town Hall or by calling the Recreation Department.

Boot Camp – Boot Camp fitness training classes will be instructed by Betsy Callanan. This unique physical training opportunity will meet from 6 to 7 a.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays, starting Tuesday, June 12, for 10 weeks through Thursday, Aug. 16, on Cohasset Common in front of Town Hall. The fee for the 20 class sessions is $100, and checks can be made payable to the Town of Cohasset. Ms. Callanan will run an interval callisthenic and running fitness program for both men and women for all levels of ability. While running and/or walking remains an essential aspect of this cardio-vascular training format, inclusive will be various integrated calisthenics such as jump roping, stairs or hills, squat thrusts, lunges, push-ups, skipping/running knees, sit ups, etc. Ms. Callanan has designed this program to improve cardio-vascular endurance and strength. Dress in layers as weather conditions dictate, bring a water bottle and jump rope to class and wear running shoes. Success in this class is based upon your individual personal best, not as competition with others.

South Shore Baseball Club – Held Monday, June 25 through Friday, June 29, at Milliken Field. Ages 7 to 12 will meet from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Fee: $185. Ages 5 to 7 will meet from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Fee: $125. Directed by Frank Niles of the South Shore Baseball Club.

South Shore & Cape Basketball Academy –Held Tuesday, July 10 through Friday, July 13, in the Cohasset High School gym. Boys and girls in grades 7 to12, meet from 9 a.m. to noon. Fee: $125. Directed by Dorian Bryant, CHS Varsity Basketball Coach.

South Shore Basketball School – For ages 8 to15, this program meets in the Cohasset High School gym from Monday, July 16 through Friday, July 20. Youths ages 8 to 11 will meet from 8:30 to11:30 a.m. and youth ages 12 to15 will meet from 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. Fee: $125. Directed by Ron Ford, Cohasset Athletic Director.

Boys and Girls Lacrosse Clinic – For youth in grades 3 to 6, this clinic will be held Monday, July 23 to Friday, July 27, from 8 to 10 a.m., at Milliken Field. Fee: $85. Directed by Jamie and Ronan Buick.

Soccer Squirts South Shore Soccer Camp – This camp for ages 4 to 6 will take place from 8 to 9:30 a.m., Monday, July 30 through Friday, Aug. 3, at Milliken Field. The fee of $95 includes ball and camp shirt. Directed by SSSC member, Jon Anderson, Babson College coach.

Q & A with Bebe Davis

Third-grader is Principal of the Day

Editor's note: The Printcipal of the Day was an auction item for the PSO Telethon and Live Auction. Bebe's mom had the winning bid on the item.

• What did you like best about being Principal of the Day?

My favorite part was inviting my friends for an ice cream party immediately after lunch. I really like ice cream and my friends – and this was a perfect combination of the two. I couldn't do that during the regular school day because there is the "Wellness Policy" and you can't have sweets (unless you are the Principal and you bring in ice cream). My second favorite part of being principal was interviewing a candidate for a teaching position.

• What surprised you the most?

I don't have an answer for that yet.

• Would you like to be a principal when you grow up?

Maybe, but I want to be a horseback rider the most. I think being principal is a good job and you never get bored…not like going to school (as a student) which can get kind of boring.

• What did you learn most about being a principal?

Packing MCAS boxes is boring. I also learned that the principal has to go evaluate the teachers and how well they are teaching.

Bebe Davis, who was Principal of the Day last Thursday, and Principal Keith Gauley send out a phone message to parents about two upcoming orientations.

Deer Hill School "Principal for the Day" Bebe Davis checks the time during a "walk-through" of Mrs. Hanson's third-grade classroom. A "walk-through" is one of the many duties the principal performs each day to monitor the classroom environment.

Principal of the Day Bebe Davis and Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley look over teacher candidate Andrea Manning's portfolio during an interview.

Laxers looking good

CHS boys tune up for semifinal against Hanover with big win over Bishop Stang

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

After its victory over Weston, the Cohasset High boys lacrosse team showed why it is the number one seed. Facing Bishop Stang, the Skippers completely dominated the game and won easily, 16-4.

Only 30 seconds into the game, junior Mike Grimm ran in and scored the first goal of the game for either side. A couple minutes later, senior captain Mike Bunstein put in another goal for the Skippers. And only a minute later, senior Chris Davis scored the Skippers' third goal.

The game was quickly out of hand for Bishop and it was clear who the better team was. After Grimm's second goal of the quarter, senior captain Dan Trendowicz scored a goal of his own with an assist from Bunstein. This made it 5-0 Cohasset and that's all the Skippers needed, but that didn't stop them from scoring.

Clark's Fund Run set for Saturday

The Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund was created to honor Clark's life and work by enhancing Cohasset's sports and recreation facilities.

This Saturday, June 9, the sixth annual "Clark's Fund Run" will take place at the South Shore Music Circus at 10 a.m.

The 3.5-mile course is a scenic and challenging loop including the Cohasset Common, Sandy Beach and Clark's neighborhood. The $20 race registration fee includes a t-shirt, ice cream from Nona's Homemade Ice Cream in Hingham and refreshments from Pepsi-Cola. At 9 a.m. there will be a 1-mile fun run for children and their families. The cost of that event is $10 per person or $25 for the entire family.

When Clark Chatterton passed away on July 5, 2000 from complications of cancer, a small piece of Cohasset also died. Clark was born and bred in Cohasset and spent his entire life in the town. He grew up, lived, worked and raised his family in Cohasset. Clark loved Cohasset and its citizens loved him.

Clark gave back to Cohasset too, not only by his mentoring of hundreds of students and faculty, but by his countless acts of generosity to people who needed a helping hand and to the town itself. His memorial service overflowed the Music Circus, and it was apparent that many townspeople looked forward to the opportunity of creating a lasting memorial to Clark.

As a result, the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund was created to honor Clark's life and work by enhancing Cohasset's sports and recreation facilities. Now that almost six years have passed, the Clark Chatteron Honor Committee has undertaken and completed many local projects.

A new basketball court was constructed and completed in collaboration with the Cohasset Basketball Boosters program behind the Deer Hill Elementary School. Two Automatic External Defibrillators (AED'S) were purchased in collaboration with the Cohasset Fire Department for use at all high school athletic events and in the middle high school.

Clark's tradition of sending one high school student to the Presidential Classroom in Washington D.C. is continued. New athletic benches were purchased for the schools Clark Chatterton Athletic Complex. Additional financial support was provided for the Cohasset Metco Program to supply a late afternoon bus for the students to return home after school activities or athletics.

Financial support was given to the high school athletic department to fund the Athletic Trainer position. New fitness equipment and maintenance packages were purchased for the Fitness Center in the middle high school for the use of students in physical education classes. New swings were purchased for the playground at the new Deer Hill Playground. Financial support was given to the purchase of the playground underlayment at the new playground built behind Ripley Library. Last year all of the race proceeds were given to the Cohasset High School Swim Program.

Since its inception the fund has donated over $75,000.

The fund has been able to provide support to many town groups to finish or start projects that enhance the athletic and recreational opportunities for the children and families of Cohasset. The reason that the fund is so successful is because of the support we receive from people every year. Our primary fundraisers are the Clark's Fund Run road race, held every June, and "Clark's Fall Scramble" golf tournament held every October. We are passionate about keeping Clark's name and memory alive and continuing the things that Clark would enjoy.

To maintain its ability to further Clark's legacy, the fund relies on your support. Please consider some of the following options as we head into our fundraising season:

- Sponsor or participate in the Sixth Annual Clark's Fund Run on Saturday, June 9 at The South Shore Music Circus.
- Make a tax-deductible donation, payable to the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund, P.O. Box 652, Cohasset, MA 02025

CHS softballers suffer tough 1-0 loss to West Bridgewater in semifinals

By Alan McCall
CORRESPONDENT

TAUNTON - It's usually veteran leadership that carries teams to victory in the later rounds of the state tournament.

Tuesday night in the Division 3 South softball semi-finals, however, it was eighth grader Alyssa Gray who stood tall on the big stage.

Gray ripped a triple down the left field line to score senior Michelle Read (walk) from first base in the bottom of the fifth inning, and that's all the third-seeded Wildcats would need as they bounced 10th-seeded Cohasset, 1-0, in a thrilling contest.

West Bridgewater (17-5), the defending sectional champions, will meet Mayflower League rival Diman Regional VoTech, which eliminated Nantucket 7-1 in the other semi-final game, in the Division 3 South finals today (Taunton High School, 5:00 p.m.) The teams split their two regular season meetings this season.

One inning before her game-winning hit, Gray robbed Cohasset of a potential two-run double, making a sensational catch on a sinking line drive down the left field line by Cohasset's Carly Salerno with two runners on base, ending the Skippers' best chance to score in the game.

"Our team is used to being in big games, and we made big plays and did the things we had to do defensively to win this game," said West Bridgewater co-coach Ed Fitzgerald. "It took a while for our bats to get going, but once we started to make contact, good things started to happen."

The early Wildcats lumber slumber was due to the gritty

Hillers get the points they need to knock off Lady Skippers

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

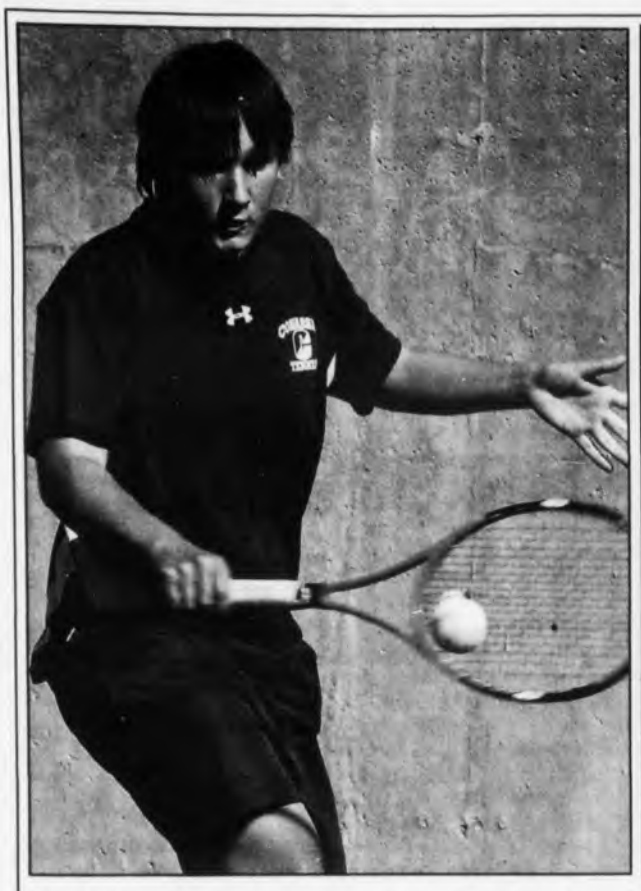
As had happened five times already this season, Wednesday's Cohasset High girls tennis match came down to Sally Meehan at second singles.

The Skippers junior has thrived in such situations this spring, winning all five of those matches. On this day, however, Meehan's opponent was just a couple shots, a couple points better.

Hopkinton senior Lucie Wall took a 3-0 lead in the third set, withstood Meehan's comeback to tie it at 4-4, and won the set, 6-4. The victory gave the Hillers a 3-2 win and a berth in the Div. 2 South final. Cohasset ended its season with a 19-2 record.

Skippers head coach Gigi Meehan, Sally's mom, said despite the loss her daughter enjoys playing in the spotlight with a match on the line.

"She loves it. That's when she's at her best," said the coach. "When she was down 0-3 in that third set, I was still confident she could do it...But that other girl wanted it just that little bit more, and Sally made a few little mistakes that may've cost her."



At the beginning, it looked like the match wasn't going to be all that competitive, as Wall took the first set rather easily, 6-2. But Meehan pulled it together and played vastly better tennis in the

The Skippers finished their season with a 10-10 record.

Bunstein, Davis, and Trendowicz each score yet another goal in the first quarter making it 8-0 in Cohasset's favor.

When this happened, head coach Stew Curran decided it was time to let his bench get some action. Freshman Dean Driscoll took full advantage of this opportunity to play by scoring Cohasset's ninth goal of the contest.

"We got the young kids playing early which was really good to see," said Curran about watching his future stars play.

Another future star, freshman goalkeeper Jack Murphy, got his chance to play as well. He played almost the entire second half and allowed only two goals. The starting goalkeeper for Cohasset, junior Nate Porter, let up just two goals in the first half.

The final three quarters were much slower than the first, but Cohasset continued to put in goals. Mark Flibotte, Chris Mills, P.J. McCaw and Andrew DiPaolo each scored one goal during the game. Bunstein was able to record his third goal, giving the All-American a hat trick. Grimm scored a goal in each of the final two periods to end the game with four goals.

One thing that Cohasset improved on from its first round game against Weston was cutting down its penalties. The Skippers will need to continue to avoid careless penalties if they want to advance further. But one thing Curran felt his team did not do well in was face-offs, as his two main guys were outplayed by Stang's face-off man.

Curran and his team are focused on its next tournament game against Hanover, to be played today (June 8) at 5 p.m. Although the Skippers beat Hanover, 14-5, in their regular season meeting, Curran said the Indians will be looking for revenge, so he is going to do everything to get his team ready to play.

A win would advance Cohasset to its third straight state championship game, and the Skippers would host the winner of Saturday's Scituate/Dover-Sherborn game at SHS.

Skippers 10, Weston 5

The Skippers played their first game in almost two weeks last Thursday, taking on the Weston Warriors. Although it may not have been their best performance of the year, the Skippers were able to come away with a 10-5 victory.

Without star defenseman Jeff Brown in the lineup, Cohasset's defensemen would have to step up their game if they wanted to win. At first this looked like it may not happen because after only a minute, Weston scored the first goal of the game.

Fortunately for the Skippers, they have an offense that can turn it on whenever it wants. With about five minutes left in the first quarter, Flibotte tied the game. Later in the quarter senior attackman Chris Davis scooped the ball up during a scramble in front of the Weston net and put it in giving Cohasset its first lead of the day.

As the quarter was winding down, Weston was able to tie the game at 2-2 at the end of the first quarter. It could have been a lot worse for Cohasset at this point, but Porter made two outstanding saves against a strong Weston line.

The second quarter started off very similar when Trendowicz scored before a minute had gone by. Still, without Brown, the Cohasset defense was shaky at times and Weston was once again able to tie the score. Only a minute after the Wildcats tied it up, Cohasset came right back with a goal from Grimm. From there, Cohasset never looked back and Weston was never able to overcome the Skippers' firepower.

Flibotte added two more goals in the quarter and then after Weston scored again so did Grimm. Bunstein had two assists in the quarter, one to Flibotte and one to Grimm.

The third quarter was a completely different game, as the two teams went back and forth, but neither was able to score until Flibotte added his fourth and final goal of the game. The assist again came from Bunstein. The goal would be the only one of the quarter.

After three periods of play Cohasset led 8-4 and things were looking good for the Skippers. The fourth quarter got off to a slow start, but then junior P.J. McCaw wound up from deep and fired a shot that the Weston goalie had no chance to save. Weston scored a goal with five minutes left in the game, but by that time Cohasset was ready to prepare for its next opponent. To fully seal the win, Grimm scored his third goal of the game, giving him a hat trick.

Down the stretch of the final period, Porter made a few key saves to make sure Weston had no chance of coming back. His goaltending held Weston to only five goals and helped Cohasset get the victory to advance in the tournament.

"It's a nice win, we're happy, but we didn't play the type of lacrosse that we need to," Curran said following the game.

pitching performance by Cohasset senior Christina Pinkus, who had seven strikeouts in the first three innings and allowed just three runners over the first four frames. Pinkus, who will play at Wagner College next season on a scholarship, finished with just three hits allowed in a fine complete game performance.

Cohasset (13-10), meanwhile, was able to get runners on base off West Bridgewater starter Alyssa Williams in each of the first four innings. But the Wildcats defense made the plays behind her to keep the Skippers scoreless, keyed by an inning-ending double play in the third when Williams caught a hard line drive by Virginia Spofford and doubled the runner off of first.

With the 1-0 lead in the sixth, Williams struck out the side against Cohasset's two- three- and four-hitters. In the seventh, the Skippers got the potential tying run to third base. Kristen Monaco led off with a single and was bunted to second by Christine Coner. Salerno followed with a ground ball to shortstop and was just barely thrown out at first, moving the runner to third base. Williams ended the threat by getting Brittany Dunn to ground out.

"I am very proud of this great group of young ladies; we played a very solid game which could have gone either way," said Cohasset head coach Deb Bostwick. "This team set a school record by going the furthest in the state tournament than any other Cohasset softball team and we'll work hard on getting back here next season.

"Christina Pinkus pitched an outstanding game for us. She's an incredible softball player and we'll miss her very much next season."

second set. After Wall broke serve to make it 5-4 in favor of Meehan, the Cohasset player returned the favor by winning four straight points, including a couple great shots at net to force a third set.

In the third set, after losing the first three games, Meehan regained her momentum and won four of the next five, breaking Wall's serve twice in the process. Serving 4-4, Meehan couldn't keep it going, as Wall took the next eight points to finish off the match.

"It may've been a classic example of too little, too late," coach Meehan said of Sally's comeback attempt after dropping the first set.

Cohasset was in a position to win with its continued dominance in singles, as junior first singles Meg Anderson and freshman third singles Maddy Altholtz both won in straight sets.

Playing against Hillers junior Katie Schwartz, Anderson came out on fire and won the first set 6-0. Realizing she wasn't going to out-hit her opponent, Schwartz went to a steady diet of lob shots to try and take Anderson off her game.

As a result, the second set was a little more competitive. But Anderson, with a backhand that was at times untouchable, won that set as well, 6-3. The match finished in little over an hour.

"Meg's style is to get it done and get it done fast," said coach Meehan. "She just likes to bang the ball and intimidate her opponent and get that momentum, and she'll keep hitting that ball until she gets it."

Altholtz finished her season undefeated in singles play after defeating Hopkinton sophomore Shannon Murphy, 6-2, 6-3. Murphy was also undefeated coming into the match, and the girls played a lot of long points and close games.

It was the singles players that carried Cohasset down the stretch, and coach Meehan is already looking forward to having all three back next spring.

"Between the three of them, they lost three matches all year," she said. "And none of them are graduating, which is exciting."

At first doubles, senior Elizabeth Landon and sophomore Jenny Magruder struggled to a 1-6, 0-6 loss to Hopkinton seniors Meg Anderson (yes, that's her name, too) and Cara Maresca. At second doubles, Cohasset senior Charlotte Landon and Maggie McGoldrick had a slightly better go of it, extending Hillers juniors Kelly West and Kim Foley before ultimately losing, 4-6, 2-6.

Coach Meehan said her doubles players are better than what they have shown in recent matches, but said a lack of practice time recently may have prevented them from working out whatever was going wrong.

"I have great doubles players, but sometimes you just go through a bad stretch and that tends to continue (with little practice time)," Meehan said. "But I know this will fire up the girls that are coming back to do well next year."

Sally Meehan watches her volley during the second set of Wednesday's match against Hopkinton.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse

The U-15 Whites played at Marshfield Sunday in a misty, rainy game outnumbered 2-1 but certainly not outplayed as it was one of their best games of the season in team concept play. The scoring was spread widely between eight of the 12 Cohasset players and hustle was the name of this game.

Cohasset won every face off (17) and got to most ground balls with the relentless efforts of Pete McKenna, Charlie Neaves (goal, assist) and John Collins (goal). The mid line of Thomas Flibotte (goal), Danny Czerkawski (goal, assist) and Sam Richardson (assist) drove Marshfield into a defensive position all day.

The Whites never trailed in this one as the sniper fire of Mitch McNary (four goals, assist) was unstoppable by even a seemingly tough Marshfield goalie. Defensive hats go off to Geoff Swain, Brennan Bukowksi and point man Dean McNary (goal, two assists) as they pushed back on the green attack all game in keeping the shots clean at goalie Kyle Healy (15 saves). Dean McNary also had two great feeds in the offensive zone that showed off all that practice time of a team that is clicking on all cylinders in their finale of regular season play.

James McKelvey played a strong supporting role helping to stymie Marshfield on many potential breakouts. The total assist numbers and support these players displayed in this game shows not only the skill level they are now at, but a great understanding of the game, field and sportsman like representation of a great lax program.

The last game of the regular season saw the Cohasset U11 White team finish with an unblemished record following an 8-3 victory over visiting Duxbury.

From first whistle to first goal took a total of 14 seconds as Patrick Holway grabbed the face and broke downfield to find A.J. Kucinski in front of the net. A pass, catch, and shot put the Cohasset team up 1-0. Things slowed a bit after that as both teams settled down and a few goals were exchanged in a relatively close first half. Holway found the net a couple of times and Cole Morrison put one in as well with an assist from Martin Buckley.

With the defense playing a well disciplined zone, Duxbury found it difficult to penetrate. Cohasset took a 5-2 lead into the half and the Duxbury crew would get no closer for the rest of the game.

In the second half, Cohasset put in three more goals with two coming from the ever consistent Conor Hayden and another from Adam Benson. Ryan McElhinney was instrumental in ball control as he was able to dominate ground balls throughout the contest. Sean Mavilia, playing his best game of the year caught a sweet pass twenty feet out, dodged a defensive player and fired a great shot that was saved by the goalie for Duxbury.

Duxbury would net one more score from Cohasset's stingy defense, but that would be all. Jake Burchill and played very well on defense clearing the ball and Nick Lydon shut down several players in the second half and kept the opposition out of the game. Justin Fein put in one of his special performances constantly breaking up plays and getting the ball to the offense. He and Mike Yerardi and the rest of the "D" showed why wins come from the defense.

Owen Kefallinos was once again in goal and made several stops to add to the woes of Duxbury.

As has been the case for the entire season, the entire team played with passion and great efforts were also put in by Max Fitzgerald, Jack Donohue, Christian Lydon and Luke O'Brien at middie, Ian kennedy at defense, and Owen Burchill, Levante Haber and Cal Robbins on attack.

The U15 Blue, U13 Blue and U11 Blue all had their games cancelled.

Summer Sports Camps

Summer basketball camps

Cohasset High School varsity basketball coach Dorian Bryant will offer two camps this summer for kids.

The Big Man & Point Guard Perimeter Camp, an intensive four-day camp, will be held July 10 through 13, for youths in grades 7-12. The Ultimate Development Camp is a two-day-a-week camp for five weeks, beginning July 2. Both camps are designed so that the camper receives quality instruction on basketball fundamentals.

Applications are at the Recreation Office at the Cohasset Town Hall or can be downloaded at www.cohassetbasketball.com. Go to Links/AAU Teams & Summer Camps/Cohasset Summer Basketball Camp. The deadline for registration is Wednesday, June 20.

For information e-mail coach Bryant at dorianbry@aol.com.

Youth tennis lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer youth tennis lessons this summer for boys and girls ages 7 and older.

This seven-week program starts Monday, June 25, or Tuesday, June 26, with one-hour lessons meeting twice per week on a Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule. Various levels of instruction are available. The cost is $80 per participant. Registration will be held in Town Hall auditorium from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m., June 11 to 14, or from 5 to 7 p.m., June 12. You must register in person during the times listed above.

If you know your swim and/or sailing schedule prior to registering for tennis, it will be helpful, as the Rec Department has more scheduling latitude than either swim or sailing lessons.

PUBLIC NOTICE
RIGHT-OF-WAY MAINTENANCE

National Grid, New England Power and/or Massachusetts Electric Company plan to apply herbicides along certain transmission line rights-of-way between June 11, 2007 through December 21, 2007. A more precise date will be provided if requested. Massachusetts General Law Chapter 132B, Section 6B requires electric utilities to provide certain notices of this work to the public.

Herbicide use for management of vegetation along the rights-of-way is done within the context of an Integrated Pest Management (IPM) program. In right-of-way management the pest is tall growing trees that will grow into the wires causing outages and safety concerns. Biological control is a component of the IPM program. Biological control is achieved by promoting the establishment of low growing plant communities that resist invasion of rights-of-way by tree species. Selective use of herbicides to control tall growing trees allows low growing shrubs, grasses, ferns and herbaceous plants to become established and resist re-growth of tree species.

Accord Concentrate and Arsenal herbicides will be applied directly to the surface of tree stumps immediately after trees are cut. In addition, Accord Concentrate, Arsenal, Escort and Krenite herbicides will be applied selectively to foliage of the target plant using hand-held equipment.

Transmission lines may be identified by locating metal letters/numbers on a wood pole or painted letters/numbers on a steel structure.

Further information may be requested by contacting (during business hours Mon-Fri. 8:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.): M.V. Sikora, Forester, National Grid, 25 Research Drive, Westborough, MA 01582. Telephone: 508.389.9087.

SCHOOLS

'Teen craziness has undoubtedly peaked'

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTINE KENT

What's up everyone! Hopefully, all you senior parents were able to finally dry your eyes and pull it together long enough to make it through the ridiculously hot graduation ceremony on Saturday at the Music Circus. With 90-degree heat plus humidity, being under that green tent for an hour or so seemed more like being trapped in a greenhouse. If it hadn't been for the three engaging speeches by Valedictorians, Caren Garber and Ryan Ingram, and a humorously insightful speech by Class President, Mike Corry, the crowd would still have been spinning from the always-thorough speech by School Superintendent, Denise Walsh.

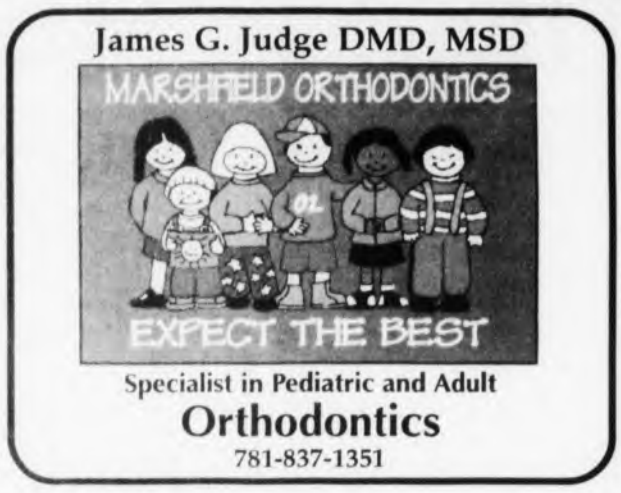
With all the events involving teenagers that have occurred in the past week, one starts to wonder if Cohasset is the new location for a Martin Scorsese film. But don't start locking your doors just yet, with all the changes and newly gained freedoms (seniors graduating) teen craziness has undoubtedly peaked (hopefully).

With all the events involving teenagers that have occurred in the past week, one starts to wonder if Cohasset is the new location for a Martin Scorsese film.

Aside from all the current dramas, things inside the brick walls of CHS remain surprisingly mellow and ordinary, even with the end of the school year only inches away. With all the MCAS tests, SATS, and gloomy weather, most of the student body seems to be drained of energy and motivation (sorry teachers but can you blame us)? Let's hope people can find just enough juice so that they can cheer on both the Music Theater Classes' Friday night performance of Stage 161 and the talent show on Saturday, hosted by our own Amanda Simpson. Each performance supports a great charitable organization while providing ample amounts of entertainment to all who attend! Maybe two fantastic shows are just what we all need to recharge our batteries. Good luck to AMT and Amanda Simpson this weekend, break a leg!

Before I forget, here's a look at what went down this week:

- Except for a Bullying Policy Meeting in the office, Monday proved to be pretty uneventful... at least for those of us who were not able to accompany the sixth grade class to Camp Bournedale!
- Tuesday, the return of MCAS for grades 9 and 10, which meant a morning of movies and "review" for the juniors left out of the fun.
- Wednesday, sadly, 9th and 10th graders were forced to endure yet another day of Science MCAS, while the rest of us pleaded for no quizzes or class work In addition; the Middle School celebrated their wonderful artistic talents at Arts Night. The Lacrosse team played in their Tournament game and since this column is due on Wednesday, I obviously do not know much else! Let's hope our guys did well.
- Thursday, there was the Spring Teacher Appreciation "party" at the Light Keeper's Cottage.
- Friday! In addition, to the Cohasset Diversity meeting in the library, the American Musical Theatre Class will be performing at 7:30, their long awaited show, "Stage 161."
- Saturday, the running shoes will be hitting the pavement at the Clark Chatterton Fun Run...and don't' forget the talent show.



Well, that's it for me this week. Have a great day!

Goodbye to Georgie!

Please join us at the Carriage House School for a "Farewell to Georgie Open House." Stop in and wish Georgie Gladdys, director of the Carriage House School, well on her new adventure! The event is from 3:30-5:30 p.m., Friday June 8, in Trueblood Hall (First Parish House).

Light refreshments will be served!

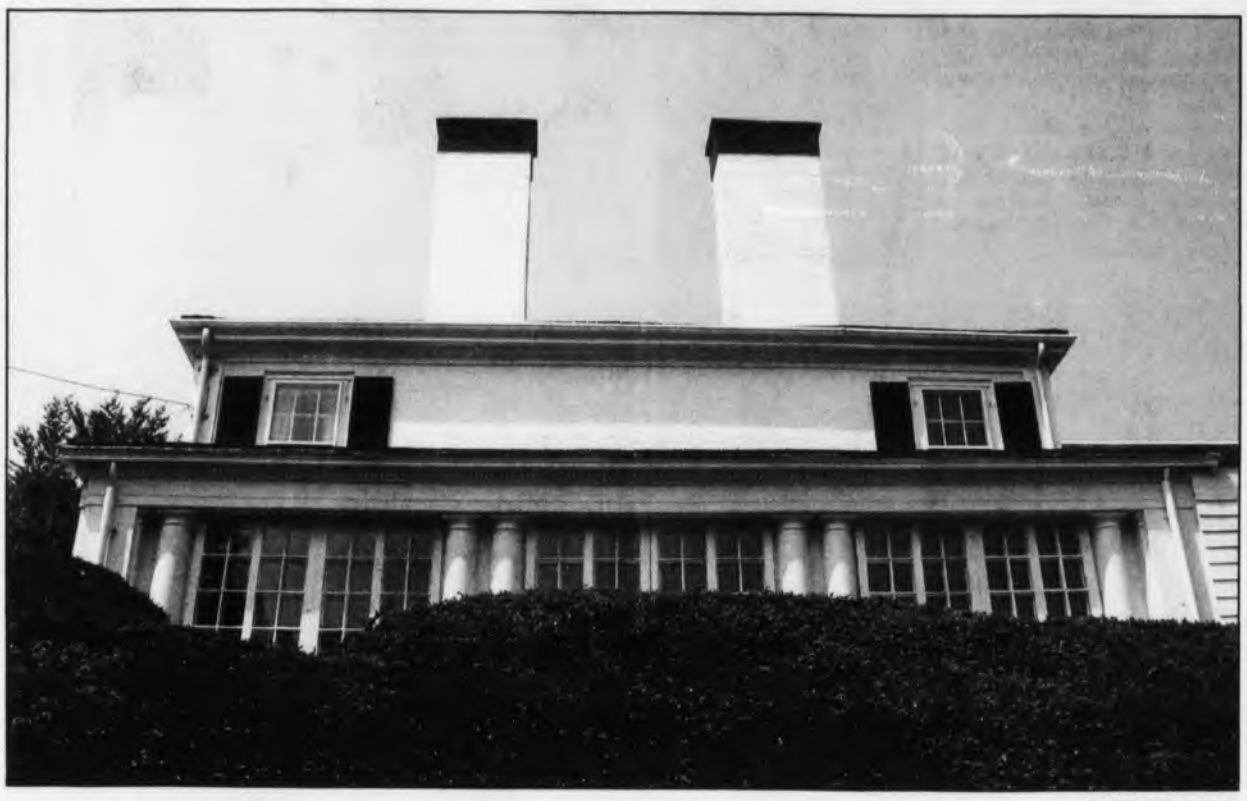
Hingham Main Street antique to be a draw

Seven private dwellings featured on house tour

By Constance Gorfinkle
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The William Torrey House on Main Street in Hingham is one of those homes that conjures up romantic musings of what might have gone on there in bygone days, when perhaps men and women – dressed in morning coats and bustled skirts – strolled across its rolling lawns to enjoy the serene Crooked Meadow River that wanders through the back of the property.

Indeed, that's the fantasy enjoyed by a recent visitor to the house, now owned by Khristian and Timothy Hawver-Scott.



One of seven private dwellings on the 83rd Annual Tour of Hingham Homes on Sunday, the William Torrey House is a graceful structure featuring Georgian and Greek Revivalist elements that has been reconfigured and restored by the Hawver-Scotts to reflect the intentions of its builder, almost two centuries ago, and the requirements of a couple living in 2007.

Thus, one enters an elegant foyer where the ceiling has been raised to reveal a stunning fanlight, once concealed, and a long, straight hall that used to meander to the kitchen, a grand space that now can be seen beckoning with warmth and hospitality.

Created by Kitchen Concepts of Norwell, this room is the heart of the house, enlarged considerably by the combining of three rooms, whose centerpiece is an island, topped by a handsome dark-stained walnut counter big enough to accommodate the culinary aspirations of both Hawver-Scotts.

As do all the rooms in the house, the kitchen is enhanced by architectural details appropriate to its era and handsomely incorporated by the three brothers who comprise the local firm Baker Construction.

In such a comprehensive restoration, the smallest detail must be considered when blending the old with the new, so that there are no glaring inconsistencies. Thus, a magnificently tiled bathroom manages to make a happy merger of a footed tub with a glass-enclosed shower.

PHOTOS/MARY FORD

The restored William Torrey House on historic Main Street in Hingham is sure to draw a crowd during the 83rd Annual Tour of Hingham Homes, sponsored by the Hingham Historical Society.

That the Hawver-Scotts have achieved such a fine restoration throughout the 4,285-square-foot house is not due to chance but experience. Having previously owned two other antiques – one erected by the Pilgrims in Plymouth, the other a cape in Yarmouthport used for vacations – they have learned the joys and frustrations of such an undertaking, that, along with history, rot sometimes lurks beneath the precious planks.

But, while they enjoyed the Plymouth and Yarmouthport properties, they were willing to sacrifice them both for the Torrey House the minute they saw it.

"It felt like karma," said Khristian.

In such a comprehensive restoration, the smallest detail must be considered when blending the old with the new, so that there are no glaring inconsistencies.

Khristian with Bank of America and Timothy with Home Goods, both successful executives, are enamored with history. That is made obvious by the objects throughout the house, which they picked up at auctions and on various travels. In Timothy's case, those include exquisite prints of English Georgian mansions he bought in London and prints of Native Americans in elaborate and unusual dress, commissioned by the Smithsonian Institution.

Among Khristian's contributions are decorative tiles manufactured in 1880 by a Chelsea company. The sense of destiny he'd had upon seeing the house for the first time was underscored when he discovered in one of the bedrooms that the fireplace surround was made of similar tiles by the same company.

Their collections often determine the themes of different rooms. Thus a downstairs sitting room that boasts several striking pieces of Asian origin Timothy laughingly refers to as "our Chinese room." But not all their objects are works of art. One bedroom wall is bisected by a wooden propeller, found by a friend in the Mojave Desert and given to Khristian because of his fascination with aviation.

Since coming to town in 2005, the men's interests grew to include Hingham artifacts, such as the doll's chest that graces a mantelpiece, made by the Tower toy factory which flourished here in the 1700s. Also on display are several pieces of china that had once been used in Hingham's Agricultural Hall, the imposing building where the town's agricultural fairs were held when this was largely a farming community and where now stands the Hingham Public Library.

With the inside of the house now complete, Khristian and Timothy are turning their attention to the rest of the almost two acres their property encompasses. The grounds, which are already graced with a footbridge over the river and a summerhouse where one can seek shade in hot weather, looks lovely to a casual observer. But, as already demonstrated, the Hawver-Scotts are anything but casual.

Passing through an airy sunroom and onto the open porch they've added to the house, the two studies the grass just beyond, which in fact does look patchy in places.

"Don't worry," smiles Khristian. "This all will be reseeded in time for the tour."

Besides the seven private homes on the tour, which takes place from 1 to 7 p.m., Sunday, June 10, four public buildings will be open. They include two properties owned by the Hingham Historical Society: the 1680 Old Ordinary House Museum, whose current exhibit is drawn from the Society's collection of antique quilts, and the 1818 Old Derby Academy, a one-time private school that now is the Society's headquarters. Also on view is the 1681 Old Ship Church, a nationally registered historic site that is the oldest wooden church in the United States still in ecclesiastical use, and the 1887 GAR Hall, a newcomer to the tour.

Tickets cost $20 in advance and $25 on tour day and may be purchased in advance at several commercial locations in Hingham Square: Andrew Zona Studio, Bowl and Board, Noble's Camera Shop and Whitney Gordon Jeweler; at Queen Anne's Corner in Corson's Glass House; at Lincoln Plaza in Noble's Camera Shop; in Cohasset, at Buttonwood Books and at the Hingham Public Library.

To order tickets by mail, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with a check made payable to the Hingham Historical Society, to HHS, P.O. Box 434, Hingham, MA. 02043. Make sure to mark the envelope "house tour."

On tour day, tickets will be $25 and sold only in the Old Ordinary at 21 Lincoln St., after 10 a.m. At that time, tickets previously purchased may be exchanged for tour books, which are required for entry to the houses.

STAFF PHOTOS BY MARK GARDNER

The North Front of Stowe School has played host to Hollywood movies, TV commercials as well as witnessing many important moments in history.

Former school still a place of learning

By Mark Gardner
MGARDNER@CNC.COM

It's been nearly 20 years since I last visited my old school, Stowe (a private boarding school, called an independent or public school in the UK) set in the bucolic Buckinghamshire countryside of England.

On our first day at school, we were informed that we were to meet with the headmaster. We were fresh-faced kids, all somewhere around 12 years old, most of us terrified in the knowledge that this was where we would be spending the next five years, punctuated only by infrequent trips home to see our parents.

I chose Stowe for many reasons. Partly, for the un-public-school-like vision of allowing children to flourish in an environment that wasn't entirely academic. Sports, drama and music held equal sway with academics. It was also based more than 100 miles from home, thus allowing me a certain degree of independence from my parents. My other choice, Charterhouse, the school that fostered the careers of several members of the band Genesis, was only 15 minutes from home. For a boy descending ever deeper into the "terrible teen years," that was far too close for comfort.

So the headmaster had us all gather on the North Front steps of the famous old main building and stated, in a booming voice that echoed around the weathered Corinthian columns, "none of you gathered here will understand true beauty until you leave this place and one day return."

Of course such a grandiose statement was bound to fall on deaf ears. Indeed your author feels distinctly sheepish in having to admit spending more time using the ornate 17th Century buildings and the immaculate, Capability Brown-designed grounds as smoking hideaways and drinking holes. But such was a teenager's life at boarding school in the 1980s.

When we were sixth formers at Stowe (the US high school equivalent would be juniors and seniors) we often bragged about how we would return in convertible cars with cigarettes in one hand, and alcohol in the other. As it turned out, we first returned for the funeral of a fellow Stoic, tragically killed in an automobile accident whilst on a scholarship in the United States. None of us were in the mood to reflect on what it felt like to return to our old school, rather we pulled together as a class in our collective grief for our departed friend and his grieving family.

So when my wife suggested we return to Stowe during our trip to England this spring, I was initially reluctant, but then intrigued. Would I really appreciate the school's true beauty, would memories come flooding back of the many wonderful experiences I enjoyed during my tenure at Stowe, or would it simply be a sentimental trip down memory lane?

We drove up to the school from London. Thankfully, Stowe is not far from the capital, moreover, the weather was, for England at least, perfect. It was still and cool, with a slight mist hanging in the air. We turned into the main driveway and as we pulled around to the North Front my wife gasped, "I cannot believe this is where you went to school." I simply smiled. For me, it was a chance to catch up with some old ghosts.

I pointed out that the "Berlin scene" from "Raiders of the Lost Ark III" had been shot right where we were standing, as well as a scene from the Russell Crowe feature film "Proof of Life". But she didn't seem all that impressed. Rather she was trying to take in the surroundings — a main building built in the late 17th Century by Sir Richard Temple, later to become Lord Cobham; Nearly 700 acres of park-land-style gardens that were built by Capability Brown, gardens so widely admired that the poet Alexander Pope waxed lyrical about them. The gardens, more like an expansive park, are dotted with temples with names such as Temple of Concord, Fane of Pastoral Poetry, Temple of Ancient Virtue and Temple of Friendship. There are more than 40 monuments, arches, houses, temples and sites to see, all set around tranquil lakes and grasslands.

In 1997 the Stowe Trustees had to hand over the ownership and upkeep of the grounds to the National Trust as they had become too expensive for the school to maintain. And what an extraordinary job they have done.

The spring term had thankfully ended the previous day so we were able to wonder around the grounds and inside many of the building un-bothered. Certainly a flurry of wonderful memories did come flooding back to me, but I was also taken by how truly beautiful the place had become: the grounds, returned to their original glory; the main building where we ate as a school, the dining halls with murals on the ceilings, walls adorned with enormous oil paintings; the school church where we worshipped twice a week; and of course my old house, slightly updated from when I was there, but a place that still retained the spirit of yesteryear. We walked around the 11-acre lake, past the Temple of the Worthies, and strolled over the Palladium Bridge, thought to be haunted (according to school legend) by the headless horseman, and up into the surrounding fields. As we stood in the Elysian Fields, surrounded by sheep, my wife turned and, smiling cheekily noted, "it's nice, but it's no Sacred Heart."

The place that was my home away from home for five years between 1982 and 1987 truly was a place of exquisite beauty. And what's more, the general public can now experience that beauty for themselves. The gardens are open almost year around, the main buildings have tours at least twice a day during open season.

For years, Stowe was just a place I had to be, a place to get away from my parents, to learn, to have fun. Now it has become the place of tranquility and breathtaking beauty that my headmaster spoke of all those years ago.

A replica of a medieval throne is carved into an old tree that sits proudly in the Elysian Fields, part of the park-style gardens open to the public year around.

June is Home Safety Month

Hands-on approach against five leading home hazards

While most people claim they feel safest in their homes, Home Safety Council research shows that nearly 20,000 deaths and 21 million medical visits occur on average each year as a result of injuries in and around the home. During Home Safety Month in June, the Cohasset Fire Department is urging Cohasset residents to take simple steps to make their homes a safer environment from the five leading causes of home injury – falls, poisonings, fires and burns, choking/suffocation and drowning.

"During June, Cohasset Fire Department is working with the Home Safety Council to remind Cohasset residents about simple but potentially life-saving changes they can make in their homes today," said Chief Robert Silvia. "Creating a safe home doesn't require a lot of time or money, but home safety needs to be an ongoing priority to help avoid serious injuries."

Simple Tips to a Safer Home

New Home Safety Council research found that while the majority of U.S. adults think about home safety often, very few take action. The Cohasset Fire Department is joining the Council's Hands on Home Safety campaign, by asking families to make safety improvements in their homes this month, and throughout the year. Follow these simple steps to protect your family from the leading causes of home injury.

Prevent falls

- Have grab bars in the tub and shower.
- Have bright lights over stairs and steps and on landings.
- Have handrails on both sides of the stairs and steps.
- Use a ladder for climbing instead of a stool or furniture.
- Use baby gates at the top and bottom of the stairs if babies or toddlers live in or visit your home.

Prevent poisoning

- Lock poisons, cleaners, medications and all dangerous items in a place where children can't reach them.
- Keep all cleaners in their original containers. Do not mix them together.
- Use medications carefully. Follow the directions. Use child resistant lids.
- Install carbon monoxide detectors near sleeping areas.
- Call the Poison Control Center at 1-800-222-1222 if someone takes poison. This number will connect you to emergency help in your area.

Prevent fires and burns

- Have working smoke alarms and hold fire drills. If you build a new home, install fire sprinklers.
- Stay by the stove when cooking, especially when you are frying food.
- Keep space heaters at least three feet away from anything that can burn. Turn them off when you leave the room or go to sleep.
- If you smoke, smoke outside. Use deep ashtrays and put water in them before you empty them. Lock matches and lighters in a place where children can't reach them.
- Only light candles when an adult is in the room. Blow the candle out if you leave the room or go to sleep.

Prevent choking and suffocation

- Things that can fit through a toilet paper tube can cause a young child to choke. Keep coins, latex balloons and hard round foods, such as peanuts and hard candy, out of children's reach.
- Place children to bed on their backs. Don't put pillows, comforters or toys in cribs.
- Clip the loops in window cords and place them up high where children can't get them.
- Read the labels on toys, especially if they have small parts. Be sure your child is old enough to play with them.
- Tell children to sit down while they eat and to take small bites.

Be smart around sater

- Stay within an arm's length of children in and around water. This includes bathtubs, toilets, pools and spas – even buckets of water.
- Put a fence all the way around your pool or spa. Always keep the gate closed and locked.
- Empty large buckets and wading pools after using them. Keep them upside down when not in use.
- Make sure your children always swim with a grownup. No child or adult should swim alone.
- Keep your hot water at or below 120° F degrees to prevent burns.

OBITUARY

Gerard Matthew ('Matt') Deveney

Talented musician, salesman

Gerard Matthew ("Matt") Deveney, beloved son of Gerry and Missy Deveney of Cohasset, loving fiancé of Keleigh Quinn, and devoted big brother of Sara M. Norris, Elizabeth A. Deveney and Grace M. Deveney, passed away on June 5, 2007 at the age of 35 after a heroic battle with cancer.

Matt grew up in Cohasset. He graduated from Cohasset High School in 1989, and the friendships formed during that time were maintained throughout his life. Matt found his life's passion at the age of 7 when his mother signed him up for his first piano lesson.

A talented musician, Matt played the keyboard for several bands and performed regularly throughout the Boston area. Matt's favorite band was the Grateful Dead and he enjoyed jammin' as a part of several Grateful Dead cover bands, most recently Playin' Dead.

Matt spent his work life at the family business, Deveney and White Monument Company in Dorchester, Mass. An easy-going personality made Matt a natural salesman and excellent manager. Matt also enjoyed playing poker, going fishing, cruising in his boat, and taking road trips to concerts with friends.

In the fall of 2002, Matt traveled abroad to accomplish a remarkable feat: walking across Spain. In 30 days, Matt and his sister Grace walked 500 miles and had the adventure of their lives. He brought laughter, joy and comfort to all who knew him and he will be sorely missed.

A memorial service will be held at 4 p.m. on Saturday (June 9th) at South Shore Baptist Church in Hingham.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to Dana Farber Cancer Institute, Attn: GIST Research/Dr. Demetri, 10 Brookline Place, West Brookline, MA 02445.

Talbot DAV Chapter installs officers

They meet at the Weymouth Heights Club, 598 North St., E. Weymouth at 1 p.m., the third Monday of Sept., Nov., Jan., March and May.

The Lt. Ralph Talbot DAV Chapter 65 recently installed its new slate of officers for the year July 1, 2007 through June 30, 2008. The Chapter supports disabled veterans in the communities of Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hanson, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Pembroke, Scituate and Weymouth.

The command staff includes Paul Salvas, Commander; John Crowley, Senior-Vice; Richard Jennings, Junior-Vice; Joe McElroy, Adjutant; Alfred Donovan, Treasurer; Raymond Tremblay, Chaplain; Joseph Barbiere, Sergeant-At-Arms and Gordon O'Brien, Judge Advocate.

DAV Chapter #65 works for the physical, mental, emotional and economic rehabilitation of wounded and disabled veterans. In cooperation with its higher headquarters and other chapters, it is very active in supporting local VA hospitals and soldier's homes. The Chapter also contributes to a transportation program to get disabled veterans back and forth for medical services. The Ralph Talbot Chapter provides free assistance in processing disability applications and requests for rating adjustments. DAV Chapter 65 is an advocate for veterans and their families and endeavors to assure that the sacrifices of our American heroes, living and deceased, are not forgotten.

They meet at the Weymouth Heights Club, 598 North St., E. Weymouth at 1 p.m., the third Monday of Sept., Nov., Jan., March and May.

Lunch with the author is June 22

Buttonwood Books & Toys will host a lunch with author, Linda Greenlaw at 11:30 a.m., Friday, June 22, at The River Club, 78 Border St., Scituate. Linda will discuss "Slipknot," the first book in her new mystery series featuring Jane Bunker, a former Miami detective who moves to Marine and becomes a marine investigator. Linda's nautical experience is instantly recognizable in the characters, the setting, and the plot.

She is the author of the best-sellers "The Hungry Ocean," "All Fisherman Are Liars," "The Lobster Chronicles" and "Recipes from a Very Small Island." Linda lives on Isle au Haut, Maine, where she captains a lobster boat.

Reservations and tickets cost $25 per person and are required for this event. The price of the ticket includes a luncheon buffet, tax and tip. A book special of 20 percent off "Slipknot" can be purchased for this event.

Tickets may be picked up at Buttonwood or send a self-addressed stamped envelope with your check to Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, MA. 02025.

For menu details, information, or to order a personalized or signed copy of the book, call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

Tour is Taylor made

Music Circus welcomes 'Idol' winner June 16

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

"I think Jordin Sparks will win, but I'm not sure," said Taylor Hicks when asked who would succeed him as the new "American Idol" the day before the recent sixth season finale of the blockbuster television talent show.

"I'm a performance voter, not a contestant voter. There were some very talented people this season, so it hasn't always been easy to see who would win in the end," explained Hicks by telephone on May 22 on his way to Los Angeles to perform with other past Idols on the show launching this year's winner. "But Jordin has been consistently very good, and I think the voters will go with someone younger this season."

Hicks was right, of course, and the youngest winner in the show's history, 17-year-old Sparks, succeeded the oldest winner, Hicks, on May 23. When Hicks — who makes his first appearance at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset on June 16 — was named fifth-season winner in front of a worldwide television audience of 200 million viewers in 2006, he was just 29 years old, but his shock of prematurely gray hair — not to mention his R&B and soul-influenced singing style and unique "dance" moves — made him stand out long after judge Simon Cowell voted against Hicks even putting Hicks through to Hollywood after his first audition in Las Vegas.

"What you see is what you get with Simon, but he's really not that bad. If you can get past the Cowell scowl, then you're usually okay."

Fame is something the singer is OK with, too.

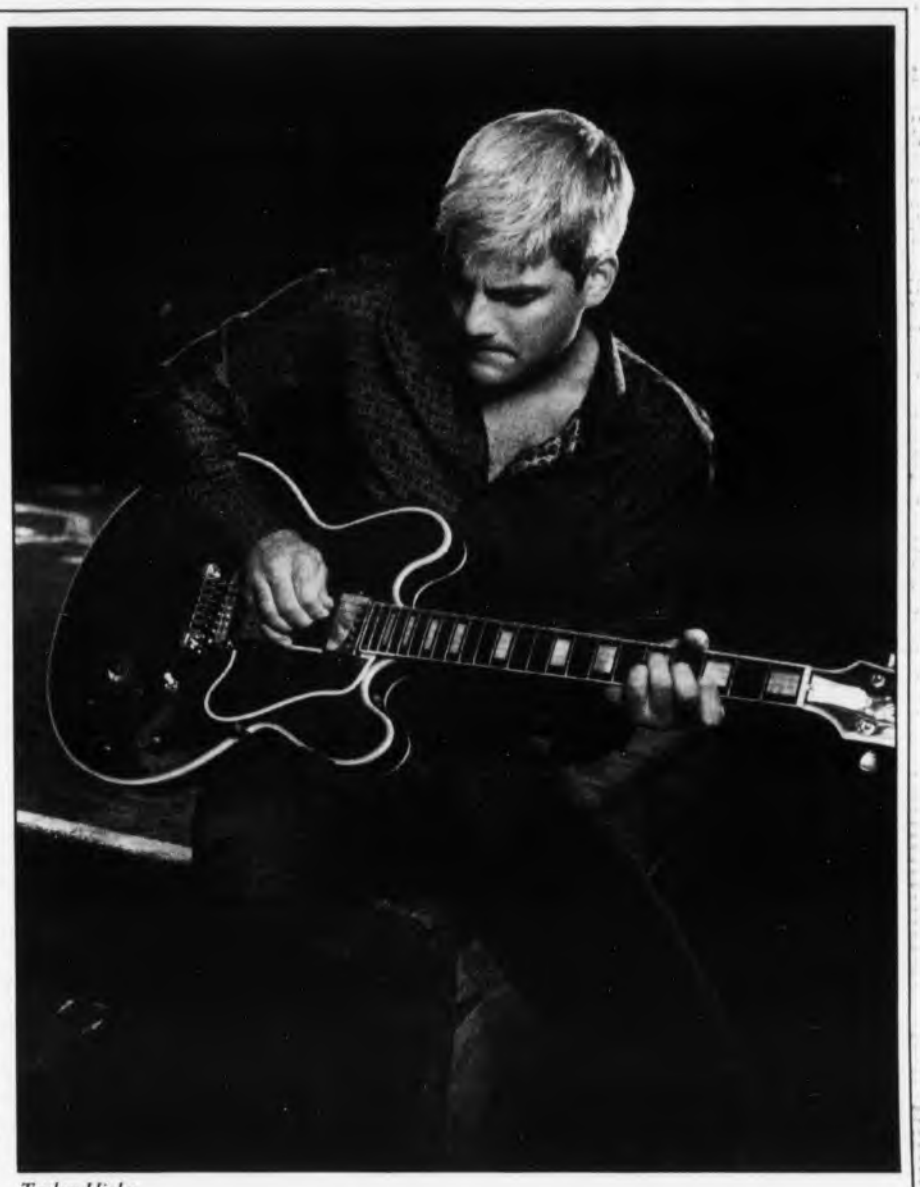
"Life moves so quickly. Sometimes I do miss my anonymity, but usually that's not a problem. When I'm home now, however, going out in public can be a chore. All in all, there's a lot of radiant, positive energy coming my way from people and that makes me feel very grateful for everything that's happened."

"You'll have to come to my show. I think that's the fun of seeing someone performing live. You never know what you're going to get.
— Taylor Hicks

Hicks' first post-Idol single, "Do I Make You Proud?" debuted at number one on the Billboard Hot 100. His latest album debuted at number two on the charts and went platinum in its second month. Hicks may be new to the charts, but his influences are people who spent a great deal of time there including Otis Redding, Ray Charles, and Joe Cocker.

"I completely connected to the emotional intensity of gospel, soul and blues at an early age. From there, I worked my way through the singer-songwriter era of the 1970s. That's where I pull a lot of my music from."

The music for his self-titled first Arista release — produced by Matt Serletic who has worked with Matchbox 20, Willie Nelson and Courtney Love — includes new songs "Dream Myself Awake" by Rob Thomas, "Places I've Been" by Diane Warren, and "The Right Place," written by Bryan Adams and Jim Vallance and originally intended for the late Ray Charles to record before his death.



"There is a common thread to the music on this new album which is that it all represents a movement toward a modern R&B and Motown sound. It is an approach also being taken by artists like Joss Stone. People are really picking up on this new sound. There is an underground movement toward modern soul and I plan to be a part of it."

With his most avid followers already dubbed "The Soul Patrol," it is likely Hicks will have plenty of company on the road ahead.

"It's like sitting on a rocket ship. The amount of work you can do in one year is just amazing," says Hicks, whose latest album was released in December and whose inspirational book, "Heart Full of Soul" will be released by Crown Publishers on July 10. "I did two earlier albums on independent labels, but being on a major label is a whole new experience for me."

Unlike other "Idol" winners and most of his fellow contestants, the Alabama-born Hicks has been a professional musician since he was 18, singing in bars and nightclubs. When Hicks takes the stage these days, there are quite a few more people in the audience, but the pleasure he gets out of performing hasn't changed.

"I'm playing places that I've never even been before on this tour, and I'm loving every minute of it. The show is mine so I can do the music that I want and I can make it a little different every night so it keeps people coming back. I've always been very aware of a live audience and how important it is to give them a show they will enjoy."

Taylor Hicks

On the road since February with his first solo tour, Hicks has been performing a song list culled from his decade-long career.

"I'm playing some stuff that's from my earlier albums, songs from the new CD and also some really cool covers," says Hicks, while declining to be more specific. "You'll have to come to my show. I think that's the fun of seeing someone performing live. You never know what you're going to get. That's the idea I want to carry into every one of my shows."

Taylor Hicks will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on Saturday, June 16. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-931-2787 or go online at www.themusiccircus.org.

Movie review

Feel Jung again with 'Paprika'

Paprika (A)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Forget spiders, ogres and pirates for a minute. The most whacked-out summer movie so far is "Paprika," a Japanese anime extravaganza that might be described as "Alice in Wonderland" for film-addicted grownups. We're surely not in Kansas anymore.

Directed and co-written by Satoshi Kon ("Tokyo Godfathers") and based on a novel by Yasutaka Tsutsui, "Paprika" may also remind some of the work of anime master Hayao Miyazaki ("Spirited Away," "Howl's Moving Castle").

As the action begins, we meet title character Paprika (Megumi Hayashibari), an attractive, daring young woman whose real-life alter ego is the psychiatrist-scientist Dr. Chiba.

With the aid of a device called a DC-Mini, Paprika enters other people's dreams and helps them with their psychological problems. Her latest client is Detective Kogawa (Akio Otsuka), who has been tormented by a recurring dream involving a foot chase and a shooting. When DC-Minis are stolen from the lab of the childlike genius Dr. Tokia (Toru Furuya), someone begins to insert himself into the dreams of others, causing the dreams to merge and often driving the dreamers insane.

If this is a woefully insufficient description of the metamorphosing, decidedly Jungian wonders of "Paprika," don't blame me. The film is the closest thing to experiencing a dream outside of the latest David Lynch offering. This is the sort of nesting-dolls-of-reality concept that Richard Linklater's "A Scanner Darkly" aspired to and failed to achieve.

A recurring image of a demented parade of confetti-pelted dolls, robots, appliances, half-dissected corpses and you-name-it is not something I am likely to forget anytime soon.

The key to most of the imagery in "Paprika" is movie history. In Kon's dream worlds, you will find references to "Tarzan" movies, Stanley Kubrick's "The Shining" (of course), "From Russia With Love," "Blade Runner," "Don't Look Now," "Peter Pan" and film noir. Paprika herself describes full-length dreams as "blockbusters."

In one scene, that lunatic parade pours out of a movie projection booth and streams across an auditorium. Kon and Tsutsui provide the voices of two mysteriously familiar bartenders in the film. An anime "Pan's Labyrinth" often reminiscent of the pop art of Takashi Murakami, "Paprika" is a psychedelic journey into the magical world of movies.

Buy the ticket.

Rated R. "Paprika" is in Japanese subtitles and contains violence, nudity and sexual situations.

Shedding 'Light' on relationships

By R. Scott Reedy

Katie Clarke and David Burnham portray Clara and Fabrizio in "The Light in the Piazza" performance at the Boston Opera House.

If you read Elizabeth Spencer's 1960 novel, "The Light in the Piazza," or if you saw the 1962 film based on it, then you know the storyline of the 2005 Broadway musical of the same name now on national tour at Boston's Colonial Theatre. If you only know the show from its advertising campaign, however, then you may be in for a surprise. What at first appears to be a story of summer lovers set to music is actually the tale of how a mother reacts when her brain-injured 20-something daughter meets a handsome young suitor while on vacation in Italy.

Developed at the Intiman Playhouse in Seattle and the Goodman Theatre in Chicago before opening at Lincoln Center in April 2005, the musical is directed by Bartlett Sher, and features a book by Craig Lucas and music and lyrics by Adam Guettel, grandson of the legendary Richard Rodgers who collaborated on some of the best-loved Broadway musicals of all time including "Oklahoma!," "Carousel," "South Pacific," "The King and I," and "The Sound of Music." Winner of the 2005 Tony Awards for Best Original Score and Best Orchestrations, Guettel's score is lush and romantic, if sometimes also a bit overwrought and operatic even for this often implausible story.

Christine Andreas as Margaret Johnson

When we first meet Margaret Johnson and her daughter, Clara, they are sightseeing in Florence when they are quite literally set upon by a high-spirited Florentine who immediately has eyes only for the flaxen-haired Clara. In mere moments, he is singing to and with her although since all of "Il Mondo era Vuoto" and most of "Passeggiata" are in Italian, you may have no idea exactly what he is saying to express his seemingly automatic ardor.

In the beginning, and for some time, Margaret endeavors to keep the couple apart. She knows that the injuries her daughter sustained when a horse kicked her in the head at her 10th birthday party have left the young woman with the intellectual capacity of a 12-year-old, making an adult relationship problematic.

Broadway veteran Christine Andreas is terrific as the conflicted mother seeking to do what's right even if she is not always sure what that is. Andreas also movingly performs not one, but two of Guittel's best numbers, "Dividing Day" and the act two closer, "Fable."

The young leads are very effective, too. Katie Rose Clarke — direct from the Broadway production — displays both strong acting chops and a lovely voice as the confused Clara. David Burnham is visually perfect as Fabrizio Naccarelli, the young man whose love for Clara blinds him to what a life with her might really be like. With his movie star looks and a smile that would be the envy of an Osmond, Burnham makes it easy to see why Clara would fall for Fabrizio.

Burnham's pitch-perfect portrayal of a young man brimming over with passion, yet still restraining it to a loving, respectful level, may help explain Margaret's final decision, but it doesn't make clear that it was necessarily the right one. With the halting, awkward nature of the book for this "romantic musical," however, this doesn't seem too far off course from the rest of the show.

Like the performances, the technical credits for this tour are first-rate, especially the period costumes by Catherine Zuber and the mood-setting lighting by Christopher Akerlind of Michael Yeargen's sets.

"The Light in the Piazza" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston St., Boston, through June 9. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-931-2787, or go online at www.broadway-acrossamerica.com

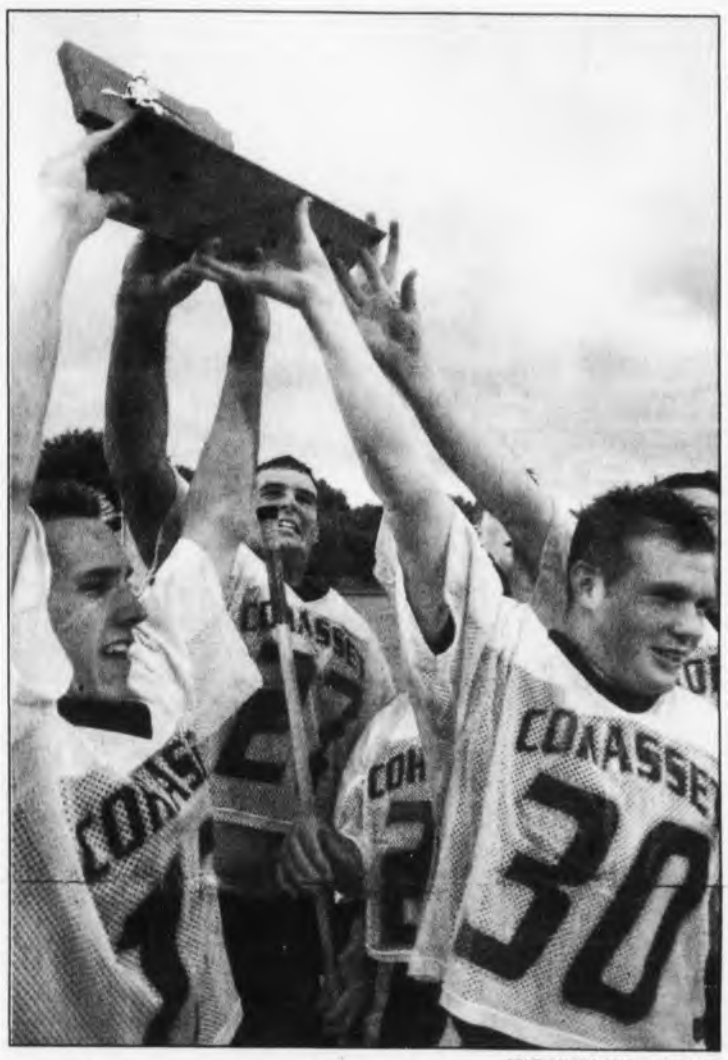
Laxers top Scituate in thriller to win 2nd straight state championship

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

In a game full of back-and-forth runs, it was one single goal that decided it.



When Scituate sophomore Kyle Crowley scored on a remarkable individual effort with 5:11 remaining in Monday's Div. 3 state championship game at Cohasset High School to tie it at 14-14, the Sailors had momentum on their side.

Crowley's goal was the team's third — the first two coming from older brother Gary — in a span of 90 seconds, eliminating Cohasset's three-goal advantage. Scituate junior midfielder Pat Mahoney controlled the ensuing faceoff, and the Sailors had the majority of the possession for the last five minutes.

But it was the Skippers who took advantage of their opportunities down the stretch. Cohasset junior Mike Grimm ripped home his sixth goal of the game with 1:52 remaining, and a series of clutch defensive plays in the dying moments of the game gave the Skippers a 15-14 win and their second straight state championship.

The Sailors had their chance at the end. Coming out of a timeout with 56 seconds remaining, Gary Crowley had possession of the ball on the sideline to the left of Cohasset's goal and found himself 1-on-1 with Skippers senior defenseman Ryan Kuczinksi. Against Scituate's All-American middy, Kuczinski made a huge check to knock the ball loose, and his clearance set off a wild last 40 seconds to the game.

What is the Troika?

Town committee could be unique

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Troika.

In the Oxford English dictionary, the first definition for "troika" is "a Russian vehicle drawn by three horses abreast." As horses became less and less prevalent in the early 20th century, the word developed to mean "a group or set of three persons (rarely things) or categories of people associated in power; a three-person commission or administrative council."

The later definition aptly describes how it is used in Cohasset's political vernacular. Troika is the name of the committee comprised of the Chairman of the Selectmen, the Chairman of the Advisory Board and the Town Moderator.

""The Troika is a fancy word for describing a threesome," says former town moderator Bill Weeks, "it's jargon that developed over many years and I suppose it makes sense."

The role of the Troika is mainly to appoint citizens to be members of various boards. According to the latest Town Report, members of the Advisory Board, the Capital Budget Committee, the Bylaw Committee, the Design Review Board, the Alternative Energy Committee and the Committee to

No horns to sound for Greenbush trains

'Quiet zone' approval process under way

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Throughout history, trains and horns have gone together. Books like "Hear that Lonesome Whistle Blow," songs like "Five Hundred Miles," and stations dubbed "whistle-stops" extol the nostalgia of what is likely to be on the South Shore, at least, a bygone era.

But, many believe, there is nothing romantic about the prospect of blaring train whistles through Greenbush's 28 remaining grade crossings, many of which are just a few feet from houses.

The Greenbush Quiet Zone, which is expected to receive approval from the Federal Railroad Administration, would be in effect 24 hours a day and cover the entire 17-mile length of the line.

Greenbush is the third leg of the Old Colony Railroad project; service on Greenbush was abandoned in 1959 about the time the Southeast Expressway opened. Greenbush service is slated to resume later this summer – almost exactly 10 years after service was restored on its sister lines Plymouth and Middleboro. Greenbush, which was delayed due to environmental issues and legal challenges, will be the only "Quiet Zone" of the three lines.

Constructing Greenbush with safety measures that could meet tough federal standards enacted with the Swift Act in the 1990s is a process that has been ongoing and has involved the affected towns along with state and federal agencies. The Swift Act, a federal law, essentially requires train horns be sounded at all public grade crossings unless a particular grade crossing is exempt from that rule. To be exempt, a grade crossing would have to have supplemental safety measures that are as effective as a train whistle.

According to published reports, the Swift Act was partially enacted in response to a federal study that showed a significant increase in train-car collisions at rail crossings in Florida communities with whistle bans.

In a letter last month, Hingham Town Administrator Charles J. Cristello, acting on behalf of the towns of Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate, notified the FRA of the towns' intent to establish a "New Quiet Zone".

In his letter Cristello enumerated the safety enhancements being made by the MBTA, which is building and will operate the railroad. The safety measures, which Cristello states cost $80 million, are being done per agreements with the towns to "facilitate the corridor's qualification for a New Quiet Zone." They include:

- Constructing four grade separation projects (tunnel, bridges) that will eliminate eight grade crossings;
- Closing seven additional grade crossings

Light shines on solar energy

Could reduce energy costs

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

With the summer solstice approaching next week, many minds are on the sun-drenched beach days ahead. Thoughts have turned to the sun as well at the Alternative Energy Committee, except in a much different way. The committee is exploring available solar energy options for town buildings.

To get the ball rolling, the AEC requested Herb Rice, a representative from Cape Cod-based Cotuit Solar, present an overview of current solar technology and available state and federal grants at their Tuesday evening meeting.

"The world receives more energy from the sun in just one hour than the world uses in a whole year, said Rice, "if we were able to capture just 1/8760th of the solar energy that the Earth receives, we'd be able to meet current energy uses."

The trick is to find the best methods and technology to harness the sun's energy. First, Rice said, is to promote conservation before implementing renewable energy technology like solar panels and wind turbines.

Once conservation efforts have been put into action, solar energy technology offers reasonable timeframes in which the investment will pay for itself, said Rice. In addition to cost savings on that level, state and federal programs offer incentives for households and municipalities to incorporate renewable energy.

There are different methods of capture solar energy: thermal and photovoltaic (PV). Thermal has up to 90 percent efficiency and is typically used to heat hot water, pools and homes. The collecting plates can be flat panels or evacuated tubes (glass tubes with metal rods). PV energy collectors have been around a long time, but they have improved over time, said Rice. The crystalline panels, flat panels with a checkerboard type surface, have an extremely long life. PV technology has a lower efficiency compared to thermal, at about 30 percent efficiency.

"Sustainability feels good," Rice said as one of the primary incentives to incorporate renewable energy practices, but there are economic reasons as well. A solar domestic hot water (SDHW) system offers a residence a payback within three to 12 years, while a PV system might pay for itself in an eight-to-15 year span.

The Massachusetts Technology Collaborative offers programs where a town can earn clean energy credits and matching grants. For residences and small businesses, there are federal and state tax breaks available if a PV or solar water heating system is installed.

At this point, the AEC is only investigating options for renewable solar energy. Possible locations for solar panels could be at the Middle-High School, the library or other town buildings. Other towns have installed smaller solar panel arrays at schools to be used as a learning tool, however, larger arrays tend to be more cost effective, said Rice.

The committee said they want to be sure there will be a return on any investment in alternative energy. The primary charge of the Alternative Energy Committee is to investigate alternative energy sources that could be implemented by the town.

The AEC is also pursuing the possibility of a wind turbine in Cohasset. Last month, a MET tower was installed on Turkey Hill. The MET tower is already collecting wind data, speed and direction, and over the next year the data will be analyzed to determine if a wind turbine is feasible. Possible sites include the Middle-High School and the Recycling Transfer Facility.

The Alternative Energy Committee (AEC) was formed officially at the 2005 Annual Town Meeting. Members include Mike Bliss, Rod Hobson, Robert Kinscherf, Luciano Lauretti, Jim Shipsky, Mimi White, and Andrew Willard.

The AEC meets regularly on the second Tuesday of every month.

Department of Corrections

An article, which ran in last week's Mariner, "'Rosano Triangle' needs site plan review," warrants some clarification. The plans for the mixed-use building off 3A propose one curb cut onto Chief Justice Cushing Highway/Route 3A, which is the existing Rosano Lane, formerly Crocker Lane. The current plans propose that Rosano Lane will be turned into an "exit only" onto Route 3A.

The Mariner incorrectly reported the current plans included two curb cuts onto Route 3A. The Mariner regrets the error.

Car break-ins being investigated

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Chief James Hussey said police are investigating three car break-ins that occurred last week. Two were on Lambert's Lane and one on Jerusalem Road, he said. The first call came in at about 7 a.m. on Friday (June 8). The victim reported that his wallet and cell phone were taken from his vehicle that had been left unlocked overnight in the driveway. The wallet contained credit cards and about $500 in cash.

The victim of the second incident reported two headrests that contained TV screens were taken. Again, the vehicle had been left unlocked.

In canvassing the area and talking to residents, police found another victim whose MP3 player was stolen. In that case, the thief may have gained entry to the vehicle through a door that was broken and did not lock.

"Detectives responded and took fingerprints," Hussey said. "The incidents are under investigation. We have a lead that we are following up on."

Hussey stressed that residents should lock their cars.

"Ninety-nine percent of the time they are fine if left overnight," he said. "But we don't want to make it easy for thieves." He said often thieves will try a door and if it is locked will walk away.

"You have a much better chance of not being a victim if you lock your vehicles," he said.

In a related matter about 7:45 p.m., Sunday (June 10), an officer following up on an earlier break-in to a motor vehicle was looking for subjects fitting a description provided to police when a couple of youths who saw the officer ran away. The officer caught up to the youths and spoke to them. Police are determining whether these individuals had anything to do with the car break-ins, Chief Hussey said.

Plant heist

Someone made off with about 100 annuals and several topiary trees from the Adrian Morris Salon, 103 Ripley Road, last week. Chief Hussey said officers surveyed other businesses in the area to see if any other plants were missing. The annuals were taken from behind the building and the topiary trees were in planters outside the front door. The total value of the plants was more than $375.

The incident was reported at 3:35 p.m. on Monday (June 4).

Hussey said police are seeking the assistance of the public. If anyone saw anything or has information pertaining to this crime, they should contact the police at 781-383-1055.

MV crash

A 1996 Lexus was hit from behind last week while turning into Hingham Lumber from Route 3A and ended up on the lawn of the business. Police said the Lexus, which had been traveling north on 3A, stopped to make a left into Hingham Lumber when a 1992 Nissan struck it from behind. The impact sent it across the street, witnesses said.

Police cited the operator of the Nissan for following too closely. Both operators were transported to the hospital with non-life threatening injuries and both cars had to be towed from the scene. The crash occurred at about 4:40 p.m. on Monday (June 4).

Identity theft

A local man came into the police station last Wednesday (June 6) to report that someone had recently attempted to establish a credit card account using his personal information. He notified Equifax, a company that provides credit card protection.

The man explained to police that three months ago he was photocopying some documents and inadvertently left one of the documents in the machine. When he realized his error, the copies were gone. He believes that could have been where the individual obtained his identifying information.

Police are following up on the matter, Hussey said.

Operator summonsed

A 22-year-old Weymouth man from Brazil involved in a single-car accident is being summonsed to court for failure to stay in marked lanes and for operating without a license.

Chief Hussey said officers responded to a radio call about the accident that occurred at just before 6 a.m. on Thursday (June 7) and found that a red Ford Focus had crashed into a utility pole on Cedar Street. When police arrived there were two males standing outside the car, one of whom was identified as the driver. He did not have a driver's license even though he entered the country three years ago.

EMTs checked both men out at the scene and neither was transported, Hussey said. The car was towed.

OUI arrest

An officer on patrol followed a car that was traveling about 50 mph eastbound on Sohier Street at about 9:30 p.m. last Thursday (June 7). As the car passed the Deer Hill School, the officer observed it travel over the centerline and then almost strike the island at the railroad crossing near the Music Circus. The officer pulled the car over after it turned right onto Ripley Road. Further observations led to the arrest of a 43-year-old Cohasset man for operating under the influence of alcohol (third offense). He was also cited for speeding and failure to stay within marked lanes.

- Fishing.
- Launching boats, canoes or kayaks.
- Scuba diving.

Allowed – only in orange cone marked area:

- Frisbees.
- Hard balls.
- Kites.
- Skimmers.

Beach visitors are invited to enjoy many days at the "Jewel of Cohasset" in a safe and environment-friendly manner.

No plates

A 34-year-old Cohasset man is being summonsed to court for operating an unregistered and uninsured motor vehicle on a suspended license.

A caller reported he had seen a man sitting in a green Mitsubishi Gallant that had no plates in the area of Doane and Beechwood streets.

The operator told police he was sitting there picking up a wireless signal. He said he just lived up the street and did not think there would be a problem driving a short distance.

Guest arrested

A 36-year-old New York City woman was charged with possession of marijuana Sunday morning after police went to her room at the Harbor Inn and could smell the odor of the drug.

Thirty minutes earlier at about 2:30 a.m. the dispatch center fielded noise complaint calls about a party in the motel parking lot. The group moved inside but other guests from an adjoining room complained about the noise. A hotel clerk called police for assistance.

When the officer knocked and the door opened, there was a strong smell of marijuana and there was a burning marijuana cigarette on the table, Chief Hussey said. Based on conversations with the five people in the room, a female was placed under arrest.

No insurance

A 45-year-old Milton man is being summonsed to court for having an unregistered motor vehicle on a public way. Police said the man asked an officer for directions to the Red Lion Inn and then pulled away quickly. A computer check on the plate revealed the insurance had been revoked. Sometime later, police found the car in the municipal parking lot and double checked the plate information and confiscated the plates. The car was towed.

Relieving himself

Police spoke to a man who relieved himself in the Sandy Beach parking lot on Monday afternoon (June 4). A caller notified police about 4:30 p.m. about the incident saying the man had urinated in front of him and his kids; the caller was able to provide police with the plate number of his car.

Police identified the owner of the vehicle and determined he had no criminal record. When contacted he told police he stopped at Sandy Beach to use the restroom and found it locked. Chief Hussey said he was very apologetic and remorseful; police gave the man a verbal warning.

Logan study results in less noise

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

While unsuccessful in stopping the now-operational Logan Runway 1432, Cohasset and other communities are bound to reap benefits resulting from a Federal Aviation Administration-ordered noise study designed to help mitigate its impacts and to keep the skies quieter and safer.

Opponents of the controversial new 5,000-foot runway listed noise, air quality, and potential negative property value impacts as key issues during their fight to stop the runway out of concern that the project would result in many more flights annually over parts of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, and other communities.

The purpose of the $3 million Boston Overflight Noise Study, undertaken in conjunction with Massport and the Logan Airport Community Advisory Committee, was to find ways to reduce noise impacts from aircraft overflights to and from Logan Airport over the South Shore and other Greater Boston neighborhoods. Both Hingham and Cohasset are represented on the board, along with Weymouth, Hull, Quincy, Milton Chelsea, Everett, Dorchester, and South Boston, and other cities and towns.

The overflight noise study recommendations will reduce noise over North and South Shore communities by routing departing planes farther over the Atlantic and higher before crossing the shoreline and by routing arrivals into the airport over the water, said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, an advisory committee member.

"The statistics developed by the consultants deal with the reduction in noise associated with overflights."
— Selectman Ralph Dormitzer

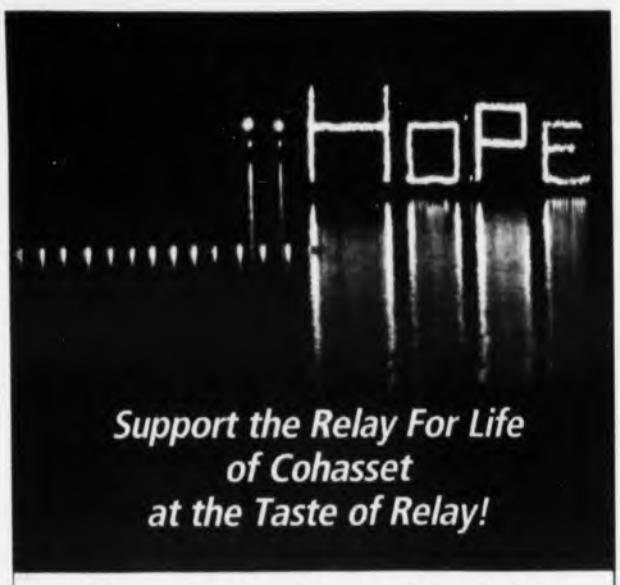
"The statistics developed by the consultants deal with the reduction in noise associated with overflights," Dormitzer said. " Therefore, many communities will experience the same number of flights but the number of flights generating noise above 50 decibels or 60 decibels will decrease as the planes will be higher."

The statistics only address noise not absolute numbers of flights, he said.

While Cohasset would experience a 42 percent reduction in overflights impacts, Hingham 53 percent, and Weymouth, 51 percent, - Hull would have a 17 percent reduction in overflights impacts, and Marshfield, 14 percent. Holbrook would experience 13 percent fewer overflight impacts and Quincy, 9 percent.

"Typically, a departing flight would, under the proposed changes, cross the shoreline about 4,000 feet higher than before and be directed with higher precision using on board computer controlled flight management systems," Dormitzer said.

While the results of the study come as good news to Hingham, Cohasset, and other communities which will experience significant decreases in the number of overflights, a challenge has arisen that could delay implementation of these measures. The towns of Marshfield and Hull want to delay the execution of Phase 1, which could take up to a year instead of implementation as early as September, officials say.



But Dormitzer does not think implementation would be delayed.

"I am not expecting the FAA to delay implementing the procedures as the noise statistics as developed by the consultants has undergone exhaustive quality control and the outcomes are overwhelmingly positive," Dormitzer said. "The procedures will be implemented in two stages, first by controller action which can be started in the fall following final procedure development and training and second, by the implementation of on-board flight management control starting in the spring of '08."

Straits Pond Watershed Association meeting

The Straits Pond Watershed Association will hold its annual meeting from 7 to 9 p.m., Monday, June 18, in the Selectmen's Room of Hull Town Hall. Among the items on the agenda is election of officers and a general discussion of the condition of Straits Pond. Among those presently serving as officers of the association are Cohasset residents Merle Graham, serving as Treasurer and Nancy Atwood, also serving on the executive board. The meeting is open to anyone interested in learning more about the pond and plans for its improvement.

Swim, bike and run for diabetes

Triathlon's proceeds benefit juvenile diabetes research

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When Race Director Bill Burnett started thinking about putting together a triathlon in Cohasset, he wanted to create an event that would be fun, challenging and civic minded. In that spirit, he chose to donate all the net proceeds from the race to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF).

Type 1, or juvenile, diabetes affects millions of kids and adults in the United States, but it was one particular Cohasset kid who inspired race director Bill Burnett to dedicate the net proceeds from the race to the JDRF. Finn Doherty, a kindergartener at the Osgood School and friend of Burnett's twin girls, was diagnosed with Type 1 diabetes just two weeks after his second birthday.

"Finn is the superhero in our everyday lives. Just about every parent who has a child with diabetes says that about their kid, but that is because it is true about every single one of them," says Suzy Doherty, Finn's mother.

"It's a great time to do a big push to raise money for Finn and for everybody else who deals with Type 1 everyday."
— Suzy Doherty, Finn's mother

Type 1 diabetes strikes children suddenly, makes them dependent on injected or pumped insulin for life, and carries the constant threat of devastating complications. Like others with juvenile diabetes, Finn and his parents must constantly monitor his insulin levels through pricking his finger about 10 times a day. Finn must wear a pump all day that constantly infuses insulin into his body and things like exercise, adrenaline and stress affect his blood sugars as well, making it very difficult to control.

"He refuses to let it get him down," Doherty says her son sees having diabetes as a part of his identity. "Although his condition interrupts his life at least every three hours or so, he just works and plays around it almost as if it is not there at all."

The devastating condition is diagnosed most often in childhood or adolescence, but it can strike adults as well. According to the JDRF website, type 1 diabetes is an auto-immune disease in which the body's immune system attacks and destroys the insulin-producing cells of the pancreas. While the causes of this process are not yet entirely understood, scientists believe that both genetic factors and environmental triggers are involved.

Doherty and her husband Sean are actively involved with the JDRF and its cause. Right now, there is no cure for type 1 diabetes but scientists are getting close, says Doherty.

"The cure for juvenile diabetes is not a pipe dream," says Doherty, however, researchers are now in one of the most expensive stages of medical research: clinical trials.

"It's a great time to do a big push to raise money for Finn and for everybody else who deals with Type 1 everyday," Doherty and her family are grateful for the Cohasset Triathlon's support of JDRF.

"One enormous benefit is to raise awareness for the condition in town and for the people who come to participate," says Doherty, "and every penny raised gets us that much closer to a cure."

With a full roster of 720 participating athletes and many sponsors, the Cohasset Triathlon should be able to pull together a fair amount of pennies for JDRF. In addition to proceeds from the race registrations, athletes are encouraged to seek sponsorships from friends and family. With weeks to go before the race, participants have raised over $16,000.

"JDRF would like to acknowledge and thank Bill Burnett and all the organizers of the Cohasset Triathlon for their dedication and efforts to help further our mission to find a cure for diabetes and its complications through the support of research," says Lauren Shields, public outreach manager for JDRF, "since inception, JDRF has provided more than $1 billion to diabetes research worldwide. More than 80 percent of JDRF's expenditures directly support research and education about research."

Chris Brown is all-star for Archbishop Williams HS

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

BUSY WEEKEND

Hey Cohasset. Can you believe a half more day of school on Monday. Summer is here! This weekend has two big events going on, The Cohasset Relay For Life for the American Cancer Society and the Annual Art Festival on the Common. The Relay is this afternoon through tomorrow morning and is a great family event for a cause that we need to find a cure for. It is held at Alumni Field at the Middle/High School and the main events begin at 6 pm. The Art Festival is all weekend on the Common and is such a community event for all. Try to take them both in.

ALL-STAR

A very proud family sent me some news about their son to pass along. Congratulations to a very talented young man. Chris Brown, a freshman at Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree, earned his varsity letter this year in Lacrosse. Archbishop Williams had a record of 13 wins and 4 losses overall and 11-1 record in the Catholic Conference which earned it the right of Co-Champions in league play.

Chris, a defenseman, was recognized as a first team All Star in the Catholic Conference and was the only freshman chosen. He also was named an All-Star for Archbishop Williams. Bob Jordan, Archbishop's Lacrosse coach, said "he was a huge part in our success this year, as a freshman who started every game and played more than 90 percent of the minutes in every game this year."

BASS TOURNEY

The Cohasset Sons of American Legion will hold its Fourth Annual Striped Bass Tournament from sundown on Thursday, June 21st through 5 pm on Sunday, June 24th. The Tournament has been renamed to "The Chucky Rose Memorial Foolish BASStards Tournament in honor of Cohasset native, Charles Rose, who passed away in April of this year. The $25 entry fee includes a T-shirt, dinner at the Cohasset Legion on Sunday at 6 pm, trophies for the biggest bass caught on land and the biggest bass caught at sea. Entry forms are available at the legion post and you must enter and pay prior to fishing but there is no deadline on entry. Happy fishing!

DEAN'S LIST

Kristen James of Cohasset has been named to the dean's list for the spring semester at Fitchburg State College. Kristen, who had to attain a 3.2 or better for is honor, is majoring in computer science. Super news Kristen, I know you have a family and friends who are very proud.

RECENT GRAD

Congratulations to Pam Haase (CHS Class of 1990) of Pawtucket, R.I., on her recent graduation from the Harvard University Arnold Arboretum School of Landscape Design. Pam's mom is Debbie Bates of Cohasset and her grandmother was Dorothy "Ma" Bates, whom many will remember from her many years of teaching junior high math at CHS.

50 YEARS

Rodney and Marilyn Hobson of Deep Run are celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary tomorrow. Rod and Marilyn moved to Cohasset in 1972 where they brought up five children, three who have now bought homes in town. The couple had ties to Cohasset when they were just a young couple. They held their wedding reception at Hugo's 50 years ago and always talked about living in town. They have been two very involved and active residents as well as two very good people. Congratulations to a wonderful couple from all of your family and friends.

BA DEGREE

Thomas Nicholas Anderson was awarded a Bachelor of Arts degree from Connecticut College at the 89th commencement ceremony on May 20, 2007. Super news.

URSINUS COLLEGE

Matthew Joseph Davis graduated from Ursinus College with a Bachelor of Science degree in biology during commencement exercises on Saturday, May 12, on the college campus. A graduate of Cohasset High, he is the son of Mr. & Mrs. Ray Davis. Congratulations.

BBA & BFA

Megan Chastain, a 2003 graduate of Cohasset High School, received her Bachelor in Business Administration and Bachelor in Fine Arts from Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Texas on May 19th. She has accepted an analyst position at Goldman Sachs in New York City. Congratulations on your success.

The Cohasset High School Swim Team Booster and Scholarship Committees have designated an annual scholarship in memory of Bryan K. Bilton, who died earlier this year. Bryan was a member of both the High School Swim and Dive Team, for which he served as Captain, and the Cohasset Summer League Swim Team throughout his years growing up in Cohasset. The recipient of the Bryan K. Bilton Memorial Swimming Scholarship must be a member of the Cohasset High School Swim team and share Bryan's enthusiasm for, and love of, this sport; must demonstrate leadership and commitment to the High School Swim Team; and, also be focused on academic achievement. This year this scholarship was awarded to two recipients — Alyssa Campbell and Brent Daly. Contributions to this Scholarship Fund in memory of Bryan may be made payable to the Cohasset High School Swim Team and sent to: Cohasset Schools Central Office for Business Administration, 143 Pond St., Cohasset, MA 02025. Please indicate Bryan K. Bilton Scholarship and note to the attention of Helen Daley, Chairman.

LAUNCH PARTY

The annual Cohasset Sailing Club Summer Launch Party is Saturday July 7th from 6 – 11pm. All adult members, parents of sailors and friends are invited to the lobster feast and auction to benefit the club. Dinner will be served from 6 until 8:30. The party is held at the CSC rain or shine; BYOB. Tickets are $50pp, payable to the Cohasset Sailing Club and are available by phoning Joyce Driscoll at 781-383-0122 or Claudia McKeon at 781-383-6125. Donations for auction items are welcome—please contact Jim Porter at 781-383-2029. See you on July 7th!

Today is a special day in our home. Daniel, my oldest son turns 17 today. We are all wishing you a special day Dan, we love you and are proud of you. Happy Birthday.

Also, a very special Fathers Day wish goes out to all the Dads everywhere this Sunday.

That is all for this week. Send in all of your summer time news to me no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm.

Cohasset's Beechwood Ballpark goes green

New field is taking shape

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A 75-year-old in town is getting a facelift, it's not a citizen though; rather it's the Beechwood Ballpark, the oldest playing field in town. The project is nearing completion and Cohasset will have a new "green" field, both in a literal and figurative sense — the ballpark includes organic turf design and maintenance.

Located at the intersection of Beechwood and Doane streets, the new field will boast a basketball court, a baseball field, a soccer field and a playground. None of the pieces originally a part of the recreational, town-owned field has been lost, each piece has only been re-configured and enhanced.

Acquired by the town in 1932, little work has been done to the land besides regular maintenance since it was built, says Merle Brown, co-chair of the Beechwood Ballpark Committee. The committee was originally formed about two years ago to raise money to update the field. It was soon realized the great expense it would take to address the issues plaguing the field. The problems with the fields were numerous: drainage, an outdated playground, an irregular baseball field and a lack of sanitary facilities.

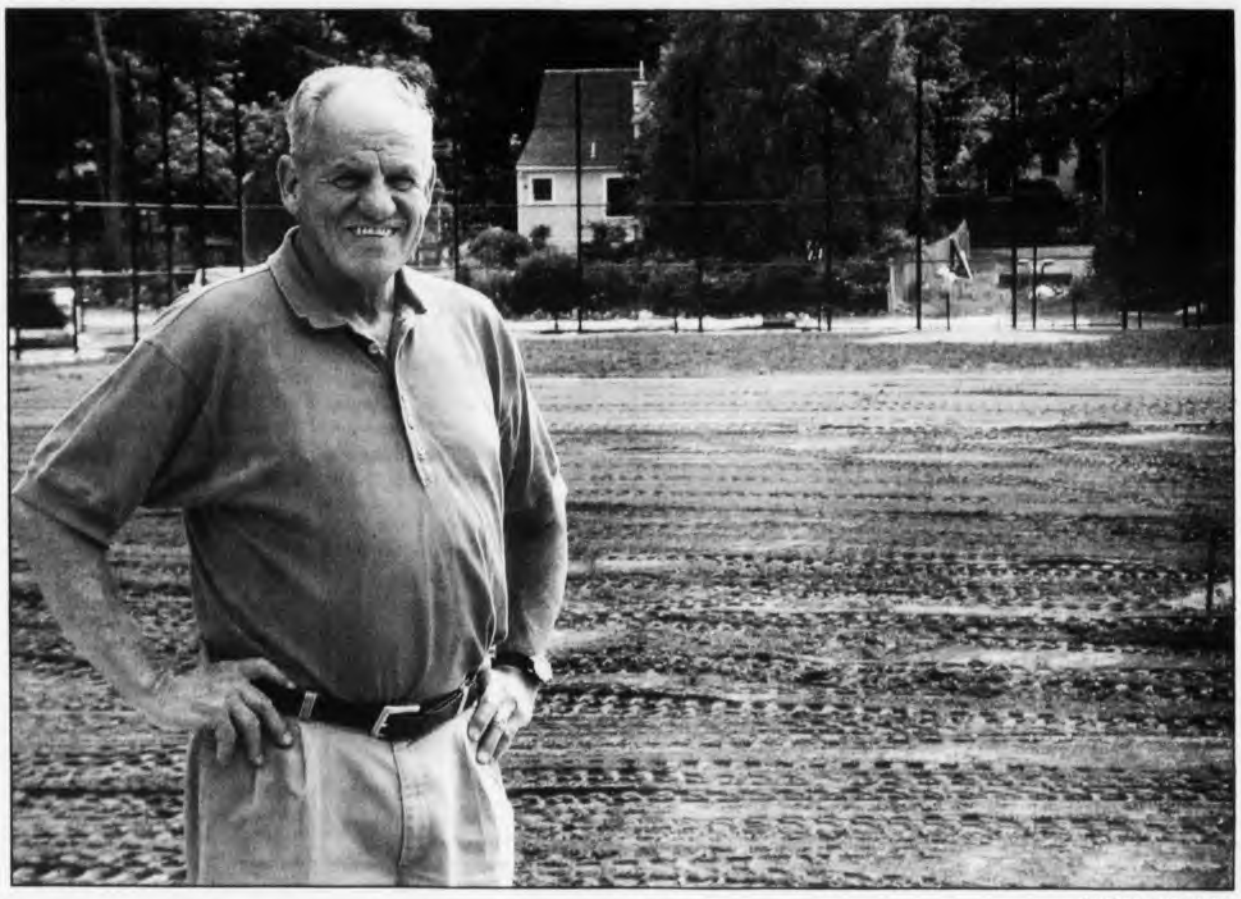
Brown has a lifelong connection with the field having lived within a 100 yards of it nearly his whole life. He grew up on the field playing pick-up baseball and other childhood games.

"Nothing was organized then," he says, but usually he could find a few friends to get a game started.

His grandfather, a selectman when the town was considering acquiring the parcel, originally opposed the town's purchase of the Beechwood park. Luckily, Brown says, after two rounds at Town Meeting voters approved the purchase of the lot. Now, two generations later, Brown is working to revitalize it.

The Beechwood Ballpark Committee received the financial backing they needed from Community Preservation funds. Town Meeting voters have appropriated more than $600,000 for the project. Initial estimates for the project ran at about $300,000, but when the project went out to bid the cost doubled. With the backing of Town Meeting, the project was able to break ground in December.

Designed by the BSC Group based in Norwell, the ballpark promised to be the showcase of the Cohasset's playing fields. It resolved the many issues that developed on the field over the years.



"The drainage wasn't sufficient on the old field. There was always a flood near second base, there was no where for [the water] to go," says Brown. To correct the problem, the entire field was leveled and drainage measures were installed. A level field took away another problem that had beleaguered centerfielders for decades — a gradual incline in the outfield.

Playground equipment was acquired from the Norwell-based Wearguard, which was selling off both its tot (under 3 years-old) and playground equipment. The new playground will be installed by the original equipment manufacturer on playground fiber, or soft wood chips that are splinter free. The playground has been relocated to the corner of Beechwood St. and Doane St. To accommodate the playground, Doane St. has been narrowed at the intersection to allow more space for the playground and to prevent cars from making a quick right onto Beechwood.

The showpiece of the field will undoubtedly be the baseball diamond. Currently only delineated in shades of brown, a field of dreams will begin to take shape in the coming weeks.

The orientation of the field has been changed to better utilize the roughly three-acre piece of land. Formerly, the baseball backstop, located on the corner of Doane and Beechwood streets, gave batters the chance for a right field home run just 90 feet away from home plate. To fix that problem, the backstop has been shifted counterclockwise 90 degrees in order to create a uniform 250 feet semicircle to delineate the outfield boundary.

Brown says the new field will be large enough to accommodate high school junior varsity games, as well as 13-14 year-old teams. A junior size soccer field will overlay the baseball diamond and a basketball court, complete with lights, will fit snugly behind left-center field. A small building behind the backstop will house a universal bathroom, storage and snack bar.

"The field will be for anyone that wants to use it."
— Merle Brown, ballpark committee

"The field will be for anyone that wants to use it," says Brown. He hopes that adult softball leagues, little league teams, Special Olympics and neighborhood families will utilize the field to the fullest extent.

The forward-thinking project is incorporating environmentally friendly practices, starting with the installation of a commercial sod, Sportsgrass. Traditional grass seeding to create an all-natural turf field would have taken up to three years to firmly take root, says Brown. By putting in the sod, the field looks to be ready as soon as July. The organic sod will use no chemicals or pesticides in the maintenance of the field creating a safer and healthier playing environment.

The downside to organic sod is the initial maintenance costs are higher in the first three years, however; the costs decrease as the sod takes root. Utilizing organic methods is especially important to this ballpark due to its location in the town watershed and proximity to Lily Pond.

That disadvantage has turned into an example of community cooperation to do what's best for the environment and the town. The Water Commission, in conjunction with its ongoing mission to protect Cohasset's water supply, has offered to pay for the additional costs of the organic sod and five-year maintenance program.

In a matter of years, the organic methods become cheaper annually than traditional chemical processes. The town should also see a decrease in irrigation costs, because an organic lawn root structure retains moisture longer.

"We're trying to make the field as low maintenance as possible," says Brown. Other low maintenance features include a timer for the basketball court lights, paint-free siding for the building and a sprinkler system.

"The area has been very cooperative," says Brown, "there's a lot of excitement now that we're near the end."

Community donations have added up to more than $25,000. The donated funds will be deducted from the CPC donation. To thank the community for their support and to celebrate the finished field, Brown plans to have a dedication ceremony in the late summer.

Members of the Beechwood Ballpark Committee include Merle Brown, Glenn Pratt (co-chair), Francis (Fay) Sargent, Fred Siegel, Lillian Curley, Lynne DeGiacomo, Michelle Loughlin, Ronnie McMorris.

To make a donation to the Beechwood Ballpark Restoration Project, send checks to the Cohasset Town Treasurer, 41 Highland Ave., made payable to the Beechwood Ballpark.

New elements for regional favorite

Dorothy Palmer award, more wearable art featured

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Like art, the South Shore Art Center's Arts Festival is an ever-evolving entity; something new and creative is always on the horizon. This year's festival, which starts today, incorporates several new elements that promise to spice up the classic ingredients of the Arts Festival.

The three-day festival draws talented artists, musicians, and artisans from all over New England to the Cohasset Common. The juried art show, a display of sixty outstanding paintings, prints, photographs and three-dimensional works, is the focal point of the Festival. The highly selective exhibit, chosen by a three-person panel, includes the most outstanding pieces from over 400 entries.

A new painting prize has been incorporated into the juried show sponsored by Hingham artist Dorothy Palmer. The prize honors one single, outstanding painting. Palmer, a painter herself, exhibits her work nationally and internationally. Palmer names her lifelong "love of art, not just painting" as the primary reason she established the award.

"The point of this is to encourage other painters," says Palmer, who has found a consistent source of inspiration and creative support during her over fifty-year involvement with the Arts Festival and the South Shore Art Center.

Palmer chose "Forsythia and Pussywillow" by Kimberlee Alemian to be the first recipient of the Dorothy Palmer painting prize. She describes the painting as "well-proportioned and well-executed."

"This painting was particularly beautiful the way [Alemian] replicated the forsythia," says Palmer, who was intrigued with the way the light flowed through the painting, "I looked at the forsythia, and I could sense feeling coming through the way the paint flowed."

Alemian, a painter by passion and training, by happy coincidence also serves as the SSAC's graphic designer and webmaster.

"I was honored, just thrilled to win the prize. [Palmer] has a good eye and she's an artist herself, I've always admired her," Alemian says. Her inspiration for the painting was simple; she was struck by the color and fullness of the forsythia this spring so she wanted to capture that on canvas. She came across the pussywillow at Stop & Shop and wanted to combine the two colors. She set up a vase with the two flowers on a table covered with a blue cloth in her studio and went to work.

"I like to respond to something that's alive," naming landscapes, portraits and flowers as some of her favorite specimens. She says there is an intensity of capturing something alive, "you're not sure if it's going to be around in a day." For this painting her muse, the forsythia, only lasted about three days before wilting.

Palmer and Alemian will be among the thousands who are expected to flock to the Cohasset Common this weekend. New this year as well is an added emphasis on handcrafted, wearable art, which will be highlighted in a fashion show on Saturday at 1p.m. Many of the artisans featured have received national recognition for their crafts. Marie Galvin's handmade hats have been featured on "Good Morning America" and in "Women's Wear Daily." Deborah Frazier's painted scarves were featured at the Museum of Fine Arts exhibition, "Art in Bloom."

The wearable art ranges from the casual to the elegant: unique silk jackets, sturdy tote bags, functional aprons and charming children's clothes. Many favorite jewelry designers from years past will be returning to display their distinctive pieces.

COURTESY PHOTO

Hingham artist Dorothy Palmer poses with Kimberlee Alemian who is the first recipient of the Dorothy Palmer Award for her painting "Forsythia and Pussywillow."

"The quality of the art found at the festival has put us on the map, but people keep coming back because they discover that this is a delightful way to spend the day in a charming seaside town, enjoying gallery-quality craft and art, as well as top-notch music," says Diane Kennedy, the Arts Festival's primary organizer.

The Arts Festival has a full lineup of musical entertainment for visitors' listening pleasure. Many musicians are back this year "by popular demand," including the Cohasset High School's jazz ensemble, Cohasset's Rusty Skippers, the bluegrass quartet "Harvest," the traditional Irish band "The O'Reillys," as well as the jazz stylings of Hingham native Nat Seelen, just to name a few.

To round out the Arts Festival's appeal to all the senses, there will be a plethora of food vendors to satisfy any appetite. Festival staples, old-fashioned kettle corn, huge lobster rolls and strawberry shortcake will be available for when stomachs start growling.

For more information please contact the art center at (781) 383-2787 or visit its Web site at www.ssac.org.

Relay Corner

'Join us for an amazing event'

By Jennifer Piepenbrink
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The opening ceremony with songs by Lisa Battista and Steven Gilbert.

The Relay For Life is scheduled to kick off this afternoon (June 15) at 3 p.m. at the Alumni Field at Cohasset Middle High School. Bring your family and friends, come on by for an afternoon and evening of walking, playing and being moved in so many ways. As we all know, cancer affects all of us in some way. The Relay helps to raise money to find cures and for research as well as to honor and recognize so many amazing people. Food will be available along with a Children's Tent and activities for all. The Luminaria event is amazing and moving, emotional and inspiring all in one.

Members of each team will walk the track at the Cohasset High School sports field around the clock; all with the same goal of raising enough money to one day end cancer. Last year's relay raised a total of $160,000. This year's goal is $200,000.

Here is the schedule of events.

Friday

• 3 pm-The Relay For Life begins with the Team registration open.

• 4:30-6:30 p.m. — Children's tent open with a theme of "Fun in the Sun" Face Painting and Crafts

• 5 p.m. — Survivor Registration open

• 6 p.m. — Opening Ceremony with singing by Lisa Battista and Steven Gilbert, opening remarks, Survivors Story, Survivors and Caregivers Lap with a song dedication by Cohasset's own Lily Sestito, Team's Theme Lap.

• 6:45 p.m. —The Rusty Skippers Band Performs

• 6:45-8 p.m. —Taste Of The Relay

• 8 p.m. — Story Telling in the Children's Tent-Joan Marie Gorman

• 9 p.m. — Luminaria Ceremony-Bagpipes by Aaron Bagley

Saturday

• 8 a.m.— DJ with music, Ray Papile

•10 a.m. — Closing Ceremony- awards, remarks and final Relay lap

Bring your walking shoes and come join us for an amazing event!

"No Train Horn" warning signs have been placed at grade crossings along the Greenbush line, including this one at the Hingham-Cohasset line on East Street near Cohasset's Woodside Cemetery. Officials are almost certain Greenbush will be designated a "New Quiet Zone" by the Federal Railroad Administration.

No horns to sound for Greenbush

• Installing four-quadrant gates with presence detection or curbed medians at 23 of the remaining grade crossings.

Alexander Macmillan, Hingham Greenbush coordinator, who has been involved with the project for years and testified before the FRA on the "Quiet Zone" issue, said the Swift Act made all rail crossings a federal concern.

He explained the five towns agreed to work together for one single quiet zone and hired a consultant to expedite the process. Hingham agreed to act at the "point person" on behalf of the towns to ensure that the criteria being put into the Greenbush data being sent to the FRA was exactly what each town negotiated.

"We were one of the first in the country to submit an application and as a result we got a great deal of attention from the FRA," Macmillan said. He explained that "new" rail lines such as Greenbush are a rarity. In most cases the FRA will be dealing with existing railroads that have no-whistle zones that now must retrofit their grade crossing safety measures to meet the new regulations.

Macmillan said from the beginning the Greenbush project was planned without train horns. Much of the line in Hingham cuts through a National Register Historic District, which is entitled to special protection. The MBTA realized early on that there would not be a permit issued for the project if train horns blared, he said. In other words, the impact on the historic district that includes dozens of antique homes would be too great to allow horns.

"Everyone wanted as safe a rail line as possible and the MBTA recognized that," Macmillan said. "From the very first it was clear that horns would not blow, so ways had to be found to adequately address the safety issues without horns or risk having no project."

Macmillan said the MBTA and the towns have become partners in the process of obtaining "Quiet Zone" status.

The partnering process was not always a smooth one, though. The MBTA wanted to construct standard grade crossings (with two arms instead of four), coupled with 100-foot long median barriers that would prevent a car from skirting around a closed gate to beat a train. The towns won that battle and in many of the grade crossings, four quadrant gates are being employed with much shorter medians or none at all.

"The FRA will be monitoring us very closely to see how it all works," Macmillan said. "The information gathered might be effective in other parts of the country."

Macmillan said the towns are nearly certain that the FRA will approve their "Quiet Zone" application.

OPINION

GUEST EDITORIAL

It's good to be a dad

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

As I carried my newborn son, Zachary into the Patriots Pro Shop at Gillette Stadium the other day, I couldn't help but tell him about where we were.

"Zachary," I said, "Look where we are! This is the home of daddy's favorite team, the New England Patriots! We're going into the pro shop to buy you a jersey!"

My wife looked on, shaking her head at my Patriots obsession. As we walked into the pro shop, I kept talking to Zachary.

"Look, Zachary! A Rodney Harrison throwback jersey! Look, Zachary! A picture of the kick Adam Vinatieri made in the snow game against the Raiders in 2001! Look Zachary! A picture of John Hannah!"

He just looked at me, drooling and gurgling, his big blue eyes shooting me a quizzical look.

It hit me at that point — the kid didn't understand a freakin' thing I was saying.

That didn't bother me, though. I was with my son at Gillette Stadium showing him the beloved team I grew up with. My dad did that with me years ago with the Patriots and the Red Sox and now it's my turn.

I still can't believe I became a dad eight weeks ago, but with Fathers Day right around the corner, it's becoming very real.

Needless to say, my Playstation use has drastically decreased, along with my sleeping time and my sanity. But it's all good— the little guy is the best thing that's ever happened to me.

I keep thinking of all the crazy things I did that my dad put up with and I can't help but think how the apple doesn't fall far from the tree.

Will Zachary ever become addicted to stealing flags off random roofs? Will he ever break into a restaurant and steal 16 cases of beer? Will he ever fall down a dune in the Caribbean and roll into a tourist's beachfront shack?

Not that I ever did any of those things. I just find myself wondering what kind of stuff he'll get himself into and deep down in my heart, I hope he does things differently than me.

Maybe he'll be a sweetheart like his mother.

My parents always told me when I was growing up that they hoped I'd have a kid just like me one day, so I could see what they were going through.

And now I do have a young son, but I can't tell if he's like me at this point. All he does is poop, eat, puke, sleep and yell at his stuffed Winnie The Pooh.

Some people would tell you that's exactly what I did in high school, but I beg to differ.

The bottom line is that I love being a father. I just don't really know what I'm doing yet. My wife tells me that when I talk to him, sometimes it sounds like I'm talking to a dog or a cat.

"He's not going to play fetch with you," she told me the other day.

Fetch or no fetch, everything seems pretty cool right now. Being a dad makes me appreciate what my dad did for me, along with all the other father figures in my life.

So to all the dads out there — and especially to my dad — I wish you all a happy Fathers Day.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Heartfelt thanks for assistance

TO THE EDITOR:

Mr. Ward provided the Mariner with a copy of his letter for publication.

The purpose of my letter is to make you aware of a medical situation that occurred to me almost at the end of this year's Memorial Day parade at the Veterans Park. Those of us marching leave the Legion at approximately 8 a.m., and return to the park around 12 p.m. This was my 14th or 15th year marching. We have marched in all kinds of weather. This year was quite warm and muggy. We were all standing at attention and saluting when all of a sudden I couldn't focus, became very lightheaded, and my legs started shaking, and I felt I was going to collapse. I knew I had a problem but had no idea what it was. The following is what occurred from that point on.

Dr. Bobbie O'Pray noticed I was in trouble and came right over. She immediately called her husband Don Staszko and Dee Wigmore over to me to get to the Legion. Capt. Dan Brennock, USN (R) was holding me up, although I have no memory of that. Don and Dee got me to the Legion where Dr. Steve Golden, who happens to be my primary care physician, and Cdr. James Mensching, USNR, who was marching with us, and also is an emergency room doctor at South Shore, immediately started working on me. At that time the following Cohasset Firemen were also there and assisting. Chief Robert Silvia, Capt Paul Bilodeau, Lt. John Dockray, Firefighter James Fiori, Firefighter/medic Randy Belanger and Firefighter/medic Robert Forde. They were in the process of getting me stabilized. Cohasset Police Officer Edward Bagley also offered assistance. Then Engine 3 and Rescue 3 arrived. Those crews consisted of Capt. Francis Mahoney Jr., Firefighter James Curley, Firefighter/medic Robert Martin and Firefighter/medic Daniel Cunningham. After all were satisfied, I was transferred to South Shore by Firefighters Martin and Cunningham. While in the ambulance they checked all my signs, were satisfied that I was ready and we left. The back end of any ambulance seems almost like a mini emergency room. All my vitals were being checked during the trip.

After arriving at South Shore I was immediately placed in a room at the emergency floor, and was checked out thoroughly by a nurse and a doctor. I was there for about four hours. From what I was told I was extremely dehydrated. I needed to large IVs to get all the fluids back in. They also ran many tests on me.

This was not exactly how I planned on spending Memorial Day afternoon. I was looking forward to the Legion's wonderful buffet, and a cold beer. Oh, well. I just want to thank everyone who assisted me. If one has a problem, having three doctors and 10 firefighters and one police officer helping is certainly very welcome. We are very lucky having people like that here in town.

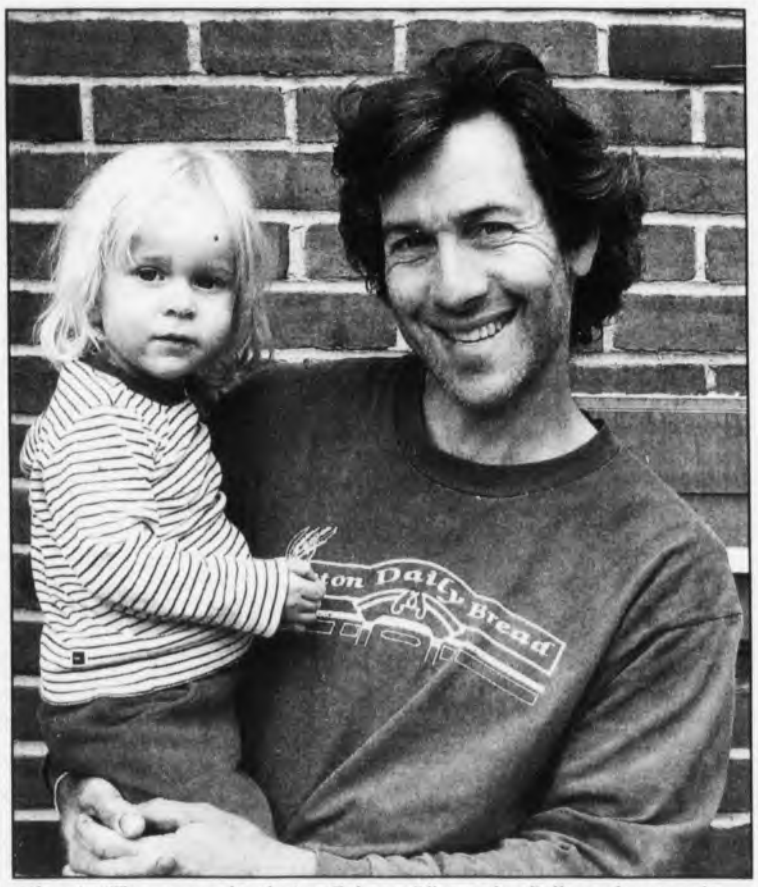
What do you think Cohasset's Troika is?



"On the train tracks where they used to turn the trains around," says Stephen Malcolm, who gave his answer in between taking orders at Atlantic Bagel.

"Something to do with the train," says Edward Figueiredo, who was waiting for his wife to come out of the Post Office.

"Three of something! But I'm not sure what," says Darilynn Evans, while hard at work at Darilynn's.

(Above) "Three towns bordering Cohasset?" says Jon Belber, educational director at Holly Hill Farms, as he walked through the Village with his daughter Nadia, 1-1/2.

(Right) "Three school buildings of Cohasset," says Officer Brian Peebles while supervising construction work on Elm Street.

The big story

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

(The following manuscript may, or could, have been transcribed from the tape of an all-news channel telecast last week. The channel is not identified.)

I'm in a helicopter high above the mansion where Paris Hilton has been holed up since the sheriff of Los Angeles County released her after she had served three days of a 21-day jail sentence. Adam, we haven't seen her for a while. Are you sure she is still in there?

I haven't seen her come out and neither have the paparazzi. They're still here.

(Shep, Congress just defeated the immigration bill. What shall we do?)

Don't bother me with trivia at a time like this, Harold. Can't you see I'm busy? Adam, who's in that van that just pulled through the gate. They look like they have uniforms on. Are they cops?

I don't know. I can't get near enough to tell. A bunch of reporters from Tokyo Asahi and Le Figaro are in the way.

Well, why don't you . . .

(Shep, President Putin just agreed to join President Bush in a defense system for Europe.)

Harold, I told you I'm busy on an important story. President Putin will just have to wait. Adam, I heard the judge has overruled the sheriff and has ordered Paris back to jail. Those may have been court officer in the van coming to take her back. Check on that, will you? Meanwhile, Geraldo had breakfast with the judge this morning. What did he tell you, Geraldo?

I've known the judge for many years, Shep, and he leaned over his French toast and sausages and whispered to me that . . .

(Shep, China just declared war on Taiwan.)

It'll keep. Go on, Geraldo.

My friend, the judge, whispered to me that he was going to rule on whatever is best for Paris and the community and if he doesn't let her go free he will send her back to jail for 21 or 45 days, depending on which one comes first.

There you go, another exclusive. I don't know how you do it, Geraldo.

(Shep, Iran just announced that it has the atom bomb and they're going to test in on Tel Aviv.)

Hold that for the six o'clock news, Harold. Maybe we can squeeze it in. Right now, we have an exclusive interview by Greta with the woman who sat next to Paris' maid on the bus that took her to work this morning. What did she tell you, Greta? How is Paris taking it?

She hadn't seen Paris yet, Shep, but she expected she would take it . . .

(Shep, someone just shot President Bush and the FBI has Osama bin Laden in custody.)

Be with you in a few minutes, Harold, we've got some important stuff going here. Go on, Greta.

like the thoroughbred that she is. She is a very misunderstood woman, Shep. That drunken driving rap. She was only taking medicine to a sick friend. And the charge that she was driving with her license revoked. She was.

(Shep, there's some new evidence in the case of that Natalee Holloway who disappeared in Aruba.)

Oh, no! Not another big story. I don't know if we can handle two at once, Greta! Greta! Where are you going?

A dad's perspective on parenting

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

Parenting up to a certain age is physically exhausting but relatively simple. You teach in black and white terms.

Last Sunday my sister-in-law gave a birthday present to my oldest daughter Caroline: a Dice-K tee shirt with number 18 on the back and "Red Sox" spelled out in Japanese characters. It was a great idea for a gift and we all fussed over it, including my nine-year-old, Mary.

"Hey that's just like the shirt Gramma and Grampa gave her last week," she said.

"Oh, I don't think so, ha ha," I said, pleading with my eyes not to persist.

"Yes it is," she persisted, annoyed that I could have forgotten already. "Remember Gramma said it only cost fourteen—"

"How 'bout some cupcakes!" I said.

Parenting up to a certain age is physically exhausting but relatively simple. You teach in black and white terms. Always be honest. Never put the cat in the microwave. Then just when you start getting enough sleep again the job becomes intellectually exhausting, because although like everyone else you have learned to navigate the gray areas and outright inconsistencies of the real world through years of trial and error, you are now expected to actually explain and defend the rules out loud to a newbie, which requires such hilariously tortured logic that you eventually lose all credibility with her.

For a year or two she tries to play along but it doesn't help. Once she discovers that rules have exceptions she becomes obsessed with unearthing every exception to every rule you've ever taught her.

"Dad, what would you do if I was kidnapped and they said I could only go if you put the cat in the microwave?"

"That would never happen honey."

"But what would you do?"

"I guess I'd have to put him in the microwave. But of course that would never—"

"What if he was already dead, and he wasn't your cat?"

"Honey I'm trying to drive."

"If you told me I had to rob a bank should I do it?"

"No."

"Even if you threatened to put our cat in the—"

"I'm turning on the radio now."

"Daddy I know this would never happen, but just, what if I kidnapped a cat and locked him in a bank—"

"La la la—"

"—and the President said you had to pay a million dollars or he would put Jesus in a microwave—"

"I'm getting out of the car now."

"We're on the highway Daddy."

These sadistic inquisitions may turn your brain to mush but at least during this phase the child still logs your answers and accepts them as authoritative. The next phase is worse, because she not only demands answers to impossible questions of ethics and manners but calls you on their stupidity. You've made a point of avoiding lawyers all your life and suddenly you live with Rudy Giuliani.

"So Dad, you're saying I'm not allowed to use that word because I'm a child and children don't talk like that. But the only reason they don't is because they aren't allowed to."

"Honey I'm trying to drive—"

"If children were allowed to say that word, then it's something children would say and it wouldn't be impolite anymore."

"La la la—"

"So by not allowing me to use that word you're making me impolite."

"I'm getting out now."

"We're in a car wash Dad."

Dishonest people are reviled, yet lying by omission is okay sometimes, and lying through your teeth is mandatory when talking to Aunt Jean. Just because everyone else has their nose pierced doesn't mean you should too; march to your own tune for God's sake. You don't like this shirt? I spent all weekend looking for a nice summer shirt for you. It's fine, trust me, it's what everyone else is wearing. If you eat french fries and cookies all day you'll get fat. Man those Bratz dolls are freakishly skinny. Honey we're late, would you just choose a pair of shoes already? Nobody cares how you look. Hang on, you can't go out with your hair like that— they'll think you escaped from an institution.

The morning it dawns on her that neither you nor her teachers nor any other adult can really explain why imaginary numbers are important, or why Paris Hilton is so famous, or how to endure a full day of adolescence without wishing the earth would open up and swallow you away from the pressures and the mocking laughter and unrequited desires of every kind — that's when the third and worst phase begins. The questions stop, the debating stops, and she simply pushes her boat off the dock and leaves you there to watch her float off into the storm on her own.

She won't sink, and in time she'll come back, I know. But she won't be the same. She'll be initiated, tempered like the rest of us.

It's no wonder we're so tolerant of our youngest child, even when she puts the cat in the microwave.

My dad is awesome. My dad is tall. His hair is dark and short. My dad has loving eyes. My dad has a great sense of humor. He likes to laugh. His smile is as bright as the sun. My dad is a chef. He does catering. He is the chef at parties. My dad also cooks at home. I love his meatballs. He takes care of our yard. My dad helps me solve problems. He helps with electronics. He is great at figuring things out on the computer. I enjoy playing baseball, soccer, basketball, football, volleyball, badminton, golf and tennis with my dad. My favorite thing to do is to go out to dinner with him. My dad makes me feel loved and special when he tells me he loves me and makes me a cake and when he calls me Princess. I love my dad!

— Lilly Ambrose

My dad is awesome. He has grey hair like my neighbor's cat, shiny hazel eyes and a face that I love. My dad is smart, funny, and as silly as a clown, and down to earth. My dad works as an electrician at the Town of Weymouth. At home my dad makes our home warm, like a dog on your lap. He lets me ride his lawn mower with him. On weekends he takes me out to breakfast and he always knows what I can do, like when it's safe to play on my driveway. My dad helps me do math, extra spelling words for my spelling test, and he also helps me learn how to ride a bike. I like helping my dad around the yard and making things with him, like paper boxes and wood boxes. I always love spending time with him. He helps me to be special (from him) by helping me learn right from wrong. He makes me feel loved a lot. My dad will always be in my heart and I love him!

— Leah Cook

My dad is great. He has black hair and he has nice eyes, as bright as his smile. My dad is funny and smart and he is also thoughtful and nice to everyone. My dad is a graphic designer. He is as creative as Frank Lloyd Wright. At home he cooks breakfast and sometimes he makes lunch. He takes care of our yard. I like to go to the little shed at the dump with him. My dad told me how to ride a bike and once he let me cut the grass. I enjoy playing chess with him and I love when he builds Legos with me. My dad makes me feel special and loved when he's proud of me and when he kisses me goodnight. I love my dad.

— Ryan Conforti

My dad is the best dad in the universe. My dad has some hair that is black and he has glasses. My dad has blue eyes that sparkle like the ocean. He is very smart and helpful and he is very nice. Loving me is what he does best! My dad works for Godwin Proctor in Boston. He is a lawyer. At home he fixes the TV when it is not turning on. My dad helps me when I fall down on my roller blades and he helps me when I get hurt. My dad loves playing street hockey with me and that makes me happy. He makes me feel loved and special when he kisses me goodnight and when he calls me Buddy. I love my dad so much!

— Will Englander

My dad is great. He's tall with brown and black hair. He has long legs. His arms are as long as a monkey. My dad is smart and kind. He lets me watch shows in the middle of his show. He is good at soccer and all sports. My dad goes to work in Watertown. Sometimes he goes to places that are far away. When he comes home I give him a big hug. He helps at home by taking care of the lawn. In the winter he uses a snow blower on the driveway first and then he makes a sledding track for us in the backyard. My dad helps me practice baseball and football. We practice batting and throwing. If I get hurt he takes care of me. He helps me figure out the TV and the computer. I enjoy when we go to the dump. I like sorting the glass bottles. We laugh together and he calls me 'Gav' too. I love to watch funny shows with him. My dad makes me feel loved and special when he says my prayers with me and when we do our secret handshake. I love my Dad.

— Gavin Dunkelberger

My dad is the best. My dad is super. He has nice brown hair and he has nice brown eyes, too. He looks as strong as a fearless tiger. My dad is funny. He laughs a lot when I make jokes and that makes me feel good. He's really smart and very friendly. For work he goes to Seattle. He is also my baseball and hockey coach. At home he helps by taking out the trash and taking me to school when my mom is at work. My dad teaches me how to hit the ball better. He also teaches me how to get a better slap shot. He helps by tying my skates at hockey games. I like when we go to Starland and ride the go-carts. I also like when he plays street hockey with me and my friends. My dad makes me feel loved and special when he calls me Buddy and when he gives me high 5's. My dad is so, so super!

— Kyle Ferreira

My dad is the best! My dad is as cuddly as my stuffed dogs. His eyes are as green as the sea and his smile shows how nice he is. My dad is as nice as a puppy. He's also funny and smart and kindhearted. My dad works in Boston and he is also a wonderful coach, "YES!" My dad mows the lawn at home and sometimes he does the dishes. My dad helps me with homework and helps me practice soccer. He also helps me pick out presents for birthdays. I enjoy when my dad plays soccer with me and when he plays board games with me. My dad makes me feel loved and special when he calls me Audie and when we play soccer without my three sisters. I love my dad sooo, sooo much.

— Audrey Hart

My dad is the best. My dad's eyes are as blue as the ocean. His hair is as black as a Chicago White Sox hat. His smile is as big as a whale. My dad is very smart about what he's doing. He is very funny when he tells jokes. He is as kind as a sports' coach. For work he goes to Boston and makes money. He works from six in the morning to six at night. My dad helps me by teaching me how to do some stuff on my homework that I don't know. When I don't know how to do something in a sport my dad helps me. I enjoy playing catch with him. I like going on vacations with my dad in the summer. My dad makes me feel loved and special by giving me hugs when he gets home from work everyday. I am happy when he reads to me after dinner. I love my dad.

— John Harzich

My dad is the best. My dad has short black hair and he has blackish eyes. When he doesn't shave his chin feels like a hedgehog. My dad has a big heart and he is very nice. I think he is thoughtful because he cares about other people. My dad works for Mercer HR Services near Boston. He has to travel a lot. He goes to places like China and Europe. My dad helps out at home by taking out the trash, scooping the dog poop and making sure the pool is clean and safe to swim in. My dad helps me by practicing baseball with me and helping me with my homework. I enjoy making pancakes with my dad and practicing baseball with him. My dad makes me feel loved and special when he says, "Goodnight Zack" and gives me a hug. My dad is great!

— Zack Herman

My dad is just right for me. My dad's eyes are as blue as can be. My dad's hair is as gray as a rainy day on the seashore, and he is as tall as a tree. My dad is funny and kind and he has the second funniest personality. His character is very cool. My dad works in California. He is a lawyer. He corrects papers and works on the computer a lot and works for a lot of companies. To help out at home my dad keeps me and my 2 brothers busy by playing with us, like playing board games like Gulo Gulo, or Scrabble Junior, or other fun or exciting games, or sports that are very fun. I have an exploding time with him. He helps me with football and soccer, and sometimes baseball, and with math homework. He is very, very smart cause he went to more than one college but not usually spelling homework but he still does it sometimes. I help him sometimes, like in dance. I try to teach him but he does not want to listen or learn how to play games that I learn in gym that he never learned like Four Corners in the dark, or just plain Four Corners. I enjoy when my dad takes me to baseball games, or Par-Tee, or a golf course, or the town pool, or the beach, or my favorite Starland, or my cousin's house, or his office. I only got to see his old one but I would like to see his new office. He said he got it clean 'cause it was a mess.' My dad makes me feel loved when he takes me places that the littler ones can't go. I love my dad!

— Keely Hunter

My dad is awesome. My dad has blue twinkling eyes. He has short brown hair and he is as tall as a house. My dad is funny, goofy and silly. He is also very smart. My dad works for a company called Bespak in England. So when he comes home I give him a big hug and tell him how much I missed him. At home my dad cleans up after meals and he helps take care of my sisters and me. Sometimes we go to the dump together. We practice football and baseball and he helps me learn strategies for Kung Fu. I enjoy going for bike rides with him and I like doing football and Legos with him. Whenever my dad is home we run down the street and back. My dad makes me feel loved by saying goodbye to me, whenever he leaves for England. He also makes me feel loved when he takes me to sports games like to Red Sox and Patriots' games. He is the best dad in the whole entire world!

— Matthew Keenan

My dad is very special. My dad has brown eyes and black hair like the night. My dad also has a beautiful smile. My dad is also cuddly like my teddy bear. My dad is loving, funny and smart. Everyone thinks he is nice and helpful. My dad does carpentry and he works everywhere. My dad takes care of me and my baby brother. He also helps out with the yard work, too. My dad helps me with my homework. Also, he first taught me how to ride a tricycle and then a two wheeler. I like to bike ride with my dad and play games with him. My dad makes me feel loved by kissing me goodnight every night. My dad also calls me Bubba and that makes me feel special and loved. I love my dad. I would never want another dad. I love him!!!

— Alyssa Lum

My dad is the best. My dad has blue eyes like the bluest sky. He has grayish black hair. His smile lights up the room. My dad has a very big heart. He is very smart and he is also funny. My dad works in Boston and he is a lawyer. He doesn't get home until late. At home my dad helps by mowing the lawn and he goes to the dump. My dad helps me with my homework and helped me learn how to ride a bike. He is also helping me with my soccer. I like when he helps me ice skate. Every Christmas he takes my whole family, except my mom, to Boston. We do a lot of fun things together. He makes me feel loved when he calls me Pumpkin, Princess and Carrot. I love it when he takes us down to the beach and tells me stories about when my parents went places. I really, really love my Dad!

— Kara Nelson

My Uncle Rob is important in my family even though he lives in New Jersey. His eyes and hair are as dark brown as a tree in the winter. His glasses have gold rings around them and make him look as wise as an owl. He is funny, silly and playful. My Uncle Robbie is a lawyer and works in New Jersey at court. He helps with the pool and cooks yummy lobsters on the stove. He came to the "Sweetheart Dance" just for me in his tuxedo and bowtie. When no one else wants to swim with me he does and we have a blast! I enjoy snuggling with him and I like when he tickles me. My uncle makes me feel special when he puts me on his lap and pretends I am food. I love my uncle!

— Dagny Nies

Who's awesome? My dad! My dad has black hair and my dad's eyes are brown like chocolate. He has a great smile. My dad is funny and cool and awesome. My dad makes lots and lots of money for other people. My dad is a good cook. He makes us breakfast. My dad helps me with my homework and softball. I like when my dad plays catch with me and it is really fun making pancakes with him. My dad makes me feel loved and special when he calls me Princess and Pumpkin and gives me Butterfly kisses and Eskimo kisses. My dad is the best dad in the world!

—Caroline O'Brien

My dad is awesome. My dad has brown hair, blue eyes and blond skin just like me. He is almost as tall as my kitchen ceiling. My dad is funny, smart and cool. My dad works on trailers at Drinkwater Trailers, in Pembroke. He makes sure that everything is in working order. At home he tucks me in, takes out the trash and helps pay the bills. My dad practices baseball with me and he helps me with my homework. He tells me funny stories about when he was a kid. I enjoy when we go to look at trains and I like going to work with him. We ride the fork lift together and he lets me drive the tractor with him. My dad makes me feel loved when he gives me kisses and hugs at night before I go to bed. My dad is great!

— Jeremy Otis

My dad is awesome. My dad has black hair, and hazel eyes and he is strong. My dad is funny and hard working. He is really, really loving and helpful. My dad works at Cohasset Collision Center. He fixes cars for 12 hours a day. He is very tired when he comes home. At home he washes the dishes and washes the clothes. Sometimes he makes dinner and gives our dog fresh water. My dad helps me with my homework and he tells me how to solve problems. He helps me with everything. I enjoy getting ice cream with my dad and I like when he watches me ride my bike. My dad makes me feel loved and special when he calls me Tori Bear. He always kisses me when he's going to work at 5 in the morning. I love my dad!!!

— Victoria Nicole Ross

My dad is the best. My dad has brown hair. He has brown eyes as dark as mud and tannish skin. My dad is very smart, funny, kind and generous. He helps me with baseball. My dad works at the South Shore Hospital. He is a M.D. He specializes in heart problems. My dad goes to the dump. My brother and I used to go with him to look in the boutique. He takes our family places for vacations. My dad helps me with my homework sometimes. My dad helped me learn how to ride a two wheeler. I enjoy playing baseball with him at home and with my baseball team. He is great at playing board games on rainy days. My dad makes me feel special because he takes me to Red Sox games, even though he's a Yankees' fan! When I'm sick he takes care of me. My dad rocks!

— Alexander Schubert

My dad is super. My dad has a bald spot in the middle of his head and the rest is brown hair. His eyes are like my brothers and he is handsome. He is sometimes goofy like a circus clown. He is very smart, friendly and helpful. My dad is the boss for his store. He works in Wellesley. He works too much, just like the President. At home he sometimes washes the dishes and he always washes our boat. My dad helps me get better at sports and he helps me with my math. I like when my dad takes me fishing. I enjoy playing sports with him. I like when he is home. I feel loved and special when my dad gives me a hug before he goes to work. He is the best dad in the world!

— Drew Skolnick

My dad is awesome. My dad has blue eyes like the ocean water. My dad is as nice as a guinea pig. My dad is as fast as a road runner. He is a scientist but mostly he does the school board meetings. At home he cleans the dishes and he does the dish washer. He helps me with my homework and he helps me build model airplanes. He helps me with plants. We plant carrots and peas together. I enjoy playing tag baseball and kickball with him. My dad makes me feel loved and special when he cuddles with me at night. My dad is the best!

— Michael Slanetz

My dad is cool. My dad is tall. My dad's hair is black as the night. I like my dad's hair. My dad is funny, cool and kind. He is helpful to everyone. My dad works at home on the computer and sometimes he has to go to restaurants to talk to people. At home he mows the lawn and he fixes things when they get broken. He teaches me how to do stuff like how to hit better in baseball. My dad makes me feel special when he comes to my baseball games. My dad makes me feel loved when he says, good night. I love my dad.

— Michael Tesauro

My dad is super! He has blue eyes just like me. He has silvery hair and he is tall. My dad is so funny and friendly and he is always so generous. He works at Boston with a company that makes razors and batteries. My dad helps at home by mowing the lawn and fixing faucets. My dad helps me with my homework and with computer problems. I enjoy playing baseball with my dad and catch with my dad. My dad makes me feel loved and special when he compliments me on how well I did at my dance performances and when I go ice skating with him. I love my Dad!

HEALTH NOTES

Students' report is full of trash

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Recently the AP chemistry class at the Middle High School applied scientific method to an audit of cafeteria, classroom, office, and bathroom trash. Objectives were to heighten awareness of how much trash a system like a school creates and to clarify the difficulty of the process of separation and disposal. The audit would estimate the possible savings from recycling trash as opposed to merely taking it to bulk trash disposal at Rochester.

In all, approximately 28 bags of trash were taken from the high school cafeteria and brought to the Recycling Transfer Station (RTF) at Cedar Street for separation and analysis. The academic plus of the work is to teach students details about the classifications of recyclable materials and the multi-layered benefits of a recycling program. Hopefully we can all learn from these students.

The draft report as it arrived in the email last week had the essentials: materials to be used, procedures for conducting the audit, a list of metrics: weight of materials, estimate of total annual trash disposal for the school, cost, etc. Then an estimate of the amount of each separate waste component, such as mixed office paper, plastic film, bottles and cans, etc. resulted in 12 components in all.

Extrapolating the annual trash figure for the sample taken to that generated in a school year, the total trash generated by the Middle High School was estimated to be 547 tons. Using figures provided by the town, school and staff people knowledgeable in the process, the students were then able to estimate costs to dispose of recycled materials from the various constituents separated in their trash pile. They determined that the annual town cost of bulk disposal without recycling for the Middle High School is approximately $55,000 whereas the cost of the various components originally separated and left at the RTF would be $27,500.

Cohasset High students sort through 28 bags of trash at the RTF.

They determined that the annual town cost of bulk disposal without recycling for the Middle High School is approximately $55,000...

The schools already recycle paper in the Abitibi program. However, the students learned that the school gets $5 and the RTF gets $17.50 per ton of paper. In short, the students' report makes several recommendations based on facts which any rational manager would seriously consider. Recommendations are limited to the school system, but relevance to the need for recycling for the entire town, and indeed for everyone, hung like a mantle over the entire undertaking.

We may be able to exist easily in our affluent enclave with little concern over the details of trash disposal, pollution and degradation of our environment, but our successors, the kids to whom we are leaving this legacy will have to learn to prepare for and live in a very different world in the future. For this reason, those whose responsibility for giving students the core essentials of science, technology, engineering and math, all important elements of the report cited, should be accorded our highest praise. The future is in their hands.

Students who wrote the report:: Sarah Brown, Cam Cope, Ryan Crough, Ian Cundall, Chloe Koines, Maura Regan, Jen Silvia, and Ann Thomae (AP Chemistry class 2007)

Audit Participants: Brian Adams, Sarah Brown, Cam Cope, Ian Cundall, Marc Fournier, Mark Kelly, Chloe Koines, Derek Lincoln, Maura Regan, Jen Silvia, Emma Simon, Dan Sullivan, Ann Thomae (AP class teacher and mentor)

Troika could be unique among towns

Survey Structure and Function of Town Government are all appointed by the Troika.

To the best of Weeks' recollection, the establishment of the committee was approved at a "long ago Town Meeting." However, the town's general bylaws do not refer to the committee as the Troika. Instead, it is only referenced in its composite parts: "a committee consisting of the Moderator, the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen and the Chairman of the Advisory Committee."

In Town Manager Bill Griffin's experience he has never run across a committee like Cohasset's Troika — in name or formation. In other towns the moderator alone typically makes appointments like the ones the Troika makes or, in some cases, the members are elected by general vote, he says.

"My first reaction was that I probably heard it wrong when someone referred to the 'Troika' the first time," he says.

How the committee was dubbed Troika is still unclear, but theories abound. It could have been a passing mention — in jest or in earnest — at a Selectmen's meeting to find a name for the committee and then "troika" just stuck. Troika could have carried over to Cohasset during the height of the Cold War, when troika was commonly used to describe Soviet Union leadership. Cohasset could have taken a page out of President Ronald Reagan's book as his three most senior advisors were referred to as the Troika. It could be that the board just needed a name and that was the first appropriate title to come to mind.

Although the committee has a curious name does not take away from the influence the Troika can have on prominent town boards. Together, they have the power to create either a cooperative board that is made up of members that complement each other or to fill the boards with people of like minds.

The Troika meets on an infrequent schedule when an appointment needs to be made, at the very least once a year. During Selectman Ralph Dormitzer's service as chairman last year he recalls only one formal meeting of the Troika and only a few appointments.

"My first reaction was that I probably heard it wrong when someone referred to the 'Troika' the first time."

— Town Manager Bill Griffin

Because the Troika's role is so specified and meets irregularly, it doesn't seem to fall into typical committee procedures. The Troika does post its meetings in accordance with the Open Meeting Law, however, the Town Clerk has no minutes on file for the Troika.

Besides a clear charge of appointing members of certain committees, there is no set of bylaws that govern the Troika. Whether a simple majority (two out of three members agreeing) or a super majority (a unanimous decision) seems to have historically been determined by the individual committee.

During Weeks' tenure as town moderator from 1981 to 1992 he created, by his estimation, a "pretty good system" where he took on the principle task of finding appropriate candidates for open seats. When he found a candidate he felt would be appropriate, he would arrange a meeting of the Troika so members could discuss the appointment. Weeks made it his policy that all three members of the Troika would have to unanimously agree to the appointment. He did not recall an instance where all three members could not agree.

The strength of the Troika diminishes when only a simple majority is required instead of an unanimous vote says Martha Gjesteby, former Selectman and Troika member, "when all had to agree you had to really work on it to reach a decision."

Dormitzer agrees, "it's unwise for a committee to have a two to one vote. With a unanimous vote no one feels disenfranchised."

During George Marlette's 12-year service as Town Moderator he says there was a number of two to one votes for appointments. Town Counsel was consulted on the issue and in lieu of any bylaw; they advised only a simple majority was required.

"The Troika was a little bit cumbersome," he says, arguing that historically the Town Moderator alone made the appointments and when the Troika was formed Cohasset was a much different town politically. Previous to the Town Manager Act, the Advisory Committee represented the "financial branch" of town. The committee was primarily responsible for presenting and creating the budget, Marlette says. He says while still a key committee they no longer have the same power invested in them.

"I always found it curious that the Chairman of the Advisory Committee votes on the Troika" to appoint the members of their own committee, or possible himself, he says. If the moderator alone was responsible for the appointments and was making ill-informed appointments, the general public could choose not to re-elect him, Marlette argues.

"Despite my reservations, serving on the Troika was a rewarding part of being moderator," he says, "we made many good appointments."

Current Town Moderator Daniel Evans likes the concept of the Troika, "three heads are better than one, and we get the benefit of three different points of view. In one sense, it epitomizes one of Cohasset's small town strengths, which is the ability of people who may have differing views on a variety of issues to work together constructively."

The Troika will meet on Friday, June 22 at 7:45a.m.

FROM TWICE AS NICE, PAGE 1

Scituate junior defenseman Ryan Woodford controlled the clearance attempt and carried the ball back into the attacking zone, but the Cohasset defense was again up to the task and managed to clear it back out. With 13 seconds left, a whistle gave Scituate the ball on the left side of the offensive zone.

Senior middy Sam Brigham picked it up and worked his way in for a contested shot, with Cohasset senior middy Dan Trendowicz playing tight defense. Brigham's shot whizzed inches over the crossbar, setting up one final, desperate attempt with three seconds remaining. Cohasset knocked down Kyle Crowley's pass from behind the net, and the horn sounded to the jubilation of those in white and the heartbreak of the boys in blue.

The most important play in that final minute came from Kuczinski.

"We knew the ball was somehow 'going to get to (Gary) Crowley, who, for my money, is the best offensive player in the state," said Cohasset head coach Stew Curran. "But we were fortunate Ryan Kuczinski just locked on and stripped him a couple times. And again, it was man-to-man. At that time, Ryan is real tired, Crowley's real tired, but our guy won and that was a battle that we needed at that point."

Curran's counterpart, Rick Bagby, said he was confident his team would bring it home after Kyle Crowley had scored his game-tying goal.

"I thought we were going to do it, yeah," Bagby said. "At that point, the momentum was on our side. I just thought if we shut them down and win the faceoff, we'd win the game. And we did (win the faceoff), and we didn't finish."

With that said, the game turned on an eight-minute stretch that preceded Scituate's three-goal run. The Sailors appeared to be firing on all cylinders at the beginning of the second half, as junior goalie Jake Gray made a couple big stops on Cohasset junior attackman Mark Flibotte while the Scituate attack went to work. Brigham, senior attackman Brendan Dickinson and sophomore attackman Greg Reynolds all scored in the first three minutes of the half to give Scituate an 11-7 lead.

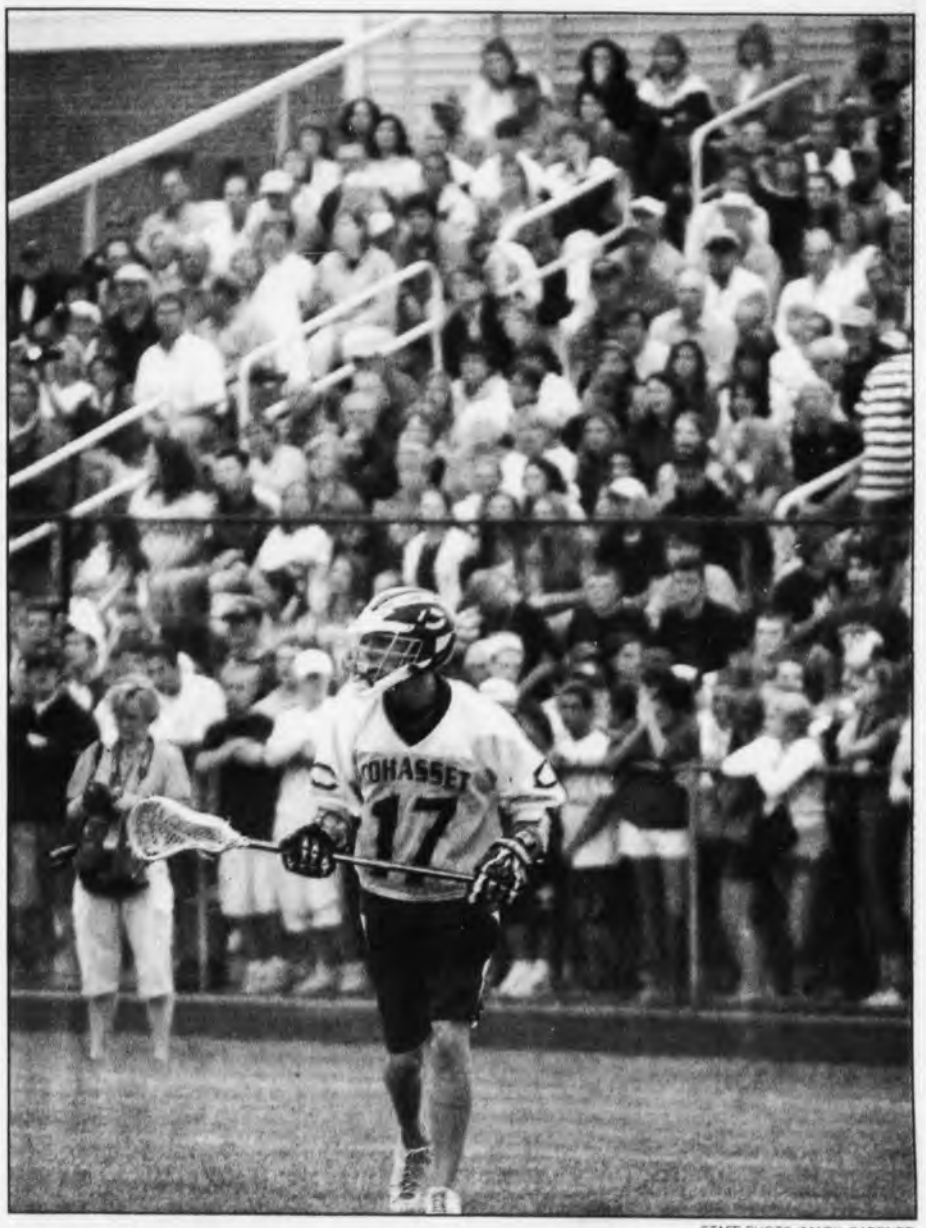
Shortly thereafter, Cohasset called a timeout, and Flibotte and junior middy Peter Ernst both missed golden opportunities to score with seconds afterward. The tide appeared to be changing, however, and when Grimm assisted senior attackman Mike Bunstein's goal with 6:24 left in third, it kicked off a run of seven unanswered goals for the Skippers.

Less than two minutes after Bunstein's goal, Cohasset had already tied it at 11, with Flibotte scoring once and senior attackman Chris Davis hitting the cage twice in that span. By the end of the third, Grimm and Flibotte had scored again to make it 13-11 for Cohasset going into the fourth. One minute and 18 seconds into the fourth, Trendowicz assisted Flibotte for a three-goal advantage that ultimately proved a bit too large for Scituate to overcome.

"That 7-0 run killed us. It just got us in a hole," Bagby said. "We fought back and did a great job coming back. But, we're up 11-7 and then we're down 14-11. That's a huge swing."

Grimm and Flibotte proved nearly unstoppable when they got the ball with room to operate, as both finished the night with six goals and one assist. Grimm said afterward he and Flibotte feed off each other's play.

"He's an unbelievable player," Grimm said. "I've been playing with him for years. We live right next to each other and we've been playing backyard games forever. I love that kid, he's one of my best friends."



Gary Crowley and Dickinson each had four goals to lead Scituate, who faced a Skippers long-pole crew that did just enough to win. Cohasset needed others to step up in the absence of star defenseman Jeff Brown, and seniors Conor Holway, Bobby Meikleham and Kuczinski, along with junior Jake Cuneo, did enough to support their teammates in attack.

And so another chapter in the intense rivalry between Scituate and Cohasset has been added. The players and coaches know each other well, just adding to the excitement that games between the two teams have provided over the last few years.

"Scituate, I mean, I'm proud of the way those guys played," Curran said. "I know a lot of them like Rick knows my guys from indoors. He and I go back a ways. I know it was painful for them to lose, but I think the better team won today."

Bagby, meanwhile, reflected afterward on how far his program has come.

"Four years ago before I took over, we were 2-14," Bagby said. "We've been in the state's final eight the second year, final four last year and the finals this year. I guess we still have one step to go."

The capacity, bi-partisan crowd at Alumni Field were treated to a show by Mike Bunstein and the rest of the Cohasset High boys lacrosse team.

The Skippers mob the field as they celebrate the 15-14 victory over Scituate to win the state title.

The unsung heroes

With the goals go the glory, but no lacrosse team is going to win anything without balance in its midfield and defense.

Junior goalie Nate Porter was money all season long for the Skippers, and made 11 saves in Monday's state championship win over Scituate. One of the steadiest long-sticks playing in front of Porter is senior Bobby Meikleham.

Meikleham's contributions have flown under the radar at times this season, but not to his coach, Stew Curran, who praised his versatility as part of Monday's winning effort.

"We moved him around a little bit and got a little more play out of him…He's a good player, underrated, but a great kid," Curran said. "Because of Bobby's ability to be flexible…We were able to do some things at the defensive end that not a lot of teams can do."

One of the reasons Cohasset was able to score seven straight goals in the third and fourth quarters was the work of junior middy PJ McCaw, particularly in the face-off circle. McCaw helped Cohasset win four out of six face-offs during that stretch, and his overall energy off the bench was a vital part of the Skippers' comeback.

"PJ's just a horse. He's big, strong, blue-collar, gets after it and hits anything that moves," Curran said. "I love the kid to death and he's going to have a big year for us next year."

Skippers top Hanover in semifinal

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

Mark Flibotte scores for Cohasset in last Friday's Div. 3 state semifinal.

STAFF PHOTOS/MARK GARDNER

In Friday's Div. 3 state boys lacrosse semifinal contest between Hanover and Cohasset, both teams came in looking for a trip to the state championship game.

Unfortunately only one team was able to go, and for the third straight year the Cohasset Skippers advanced to the championship, this time after a 14-7 victory over the Indians.

The game looked about even for the first five minutes as both teams were able to move the ball but unable to score. Then without just under seven minutes left in the first quarter, Cohasset midfielder P.J. McCaw scored from way outside to put the first goal of the day up on the scoreboard.

A mere 20 seconds later, Cohasset junior attackman Mike Grimm scored his first of six goals on the day. The Skippers would put in two more goals in the quarter, both going to All-American junior Mark Flibotte from another All-American, senior captain Mike Bunstein.

After one quarter of play the Skippers were up 4-0 and things were not looking good for Hanover. Hanover did have many opportunities in the first but Cohasset junior goalkeeper Nate Porter had two nice saves to keep the zero up on the scoreboard for the Indians.

The second quarter went exactly like the first as Cohasset went on to score another four goals to Hanover's none. Grimm scored two and had an assist, Flibotte recorded a hat trick for the game with his third goal, again from Bunstein, who added had a goal of his own.

"That was a good first half," said Cohasset head coach Stew Curran. "I'll take that any day."

Cohasset senior captain Dan Trendowicz started off the second half with a goal, assisted by Bunstein. A few minutes later Bunstein got his fifth assist when he passed to Grimm for a goal. Bunstein would finish with an amazing seven assists.

With just over eight minutes left in the third quarter, Hanover sophomore attackman Pat Lawlor got his team on the board with a goal. Only a minute later, Hanover senior midfielder and captain John Nolan scored to give Hanover its second goal of the game.

Any Hanover hopes for a comeback were short lived, though, as Cohasset's Bunstein recorded a sixth assist to Grimm. To regain his team's 10-goal advantage, junior midfielder Chuck Czerkawski scored his first goal of the playoffs. Not only that, but Czerkawski also had a great game at the face-off spot.

"Czerkawski had been in a two-game slump, but he got of it today," said Curran. Later in the quarter, Grimm recorded his sixth goal with the assist from senior Chris Davis.

Hanover was able to score two more goals in the quarter and after three they trailed, 13-4. Senior midfielder Mark Jackson scored one of the goals, and fellow senior midfielder Gerald Zoppi scored a goal of his own.

In the fourth Cohasset attempted to play many of its reserves. In the final quarter, Hanover outscored Cohasset 3-1 as Cohasset's lone goal came from sophomore Andrew DiPaolo, who scored off Bunstein's seventh assist. Hanover's Lawlor scored his second goal of the contest, and senior attack man and captain Doug Carr scored two goals in the quarter.

Hanover had many more chances to score but was unable to get past the great goaltending of Porter. He continued to make fantastic saves in the fourth and made sure that lead did not get too small.

About his team's loss, Hanover head coach Paul Zaylor said, "They got ground balls we didn't; that's what the game comes down to." He did say though that he was happy with the team's season after making it this far.

Curran said, "Our ball movement was as good at it's been all year and we're ready for the championship game."

When Curran asked his team on Thursday if it was their final practice, the team said right back to him, "No."

U11 laxers rock the jamboree

The Boys White U11 team rolled at last weekend's jamboree, defeating Plymouth 15-1, Scituate 6-3, and Hanover 5-3. Almost every player experienced a new position and several players lit up the scoreboards for the first time.

There were plenty of highlights that characterized what a fun day was had by all. To start with, Owen Burchill scored three goals and two assists in the day's first game and finished with one more score for the day. It was his birthday, and he celebrated.

Adam Benson had a monster day and was key in victories over Scituate and Hanover. Aggressive and fearless would describe his efforts. He totaled five goals and an assist in those two games.

Third graders AJ Kucinski, Dan Axelson and Jack Donohue all hopped into the cage for their first time and came up big with point blank shot stops, clears down the field, and a pass breakup on the crease; not to mention over 20 saves between the three of them. Kucinski also added three goals and three assists for the day, Axelson hit on three and one and Donohue played defense and midfield to round out his play for the day. Axelson also chose to pass to a teammate who hadn't scored during the season to give his teammate his first points of the year.

Other firsts included Luke O'Brien for a goal, Mike Yerardi playing attack who netted one and assisted another, Justin Fein who played great and aggressive defense added two scores to the days total, and Nick Lydon hit for two big ones in the first game.

The ever consistent and solid play of Ryan McElhinney was instrumental again for ball control and also good for a score. Levante Haber, Ian Kennedy, Cole Morrison and Sean Mavilia all showed their stuff as well with ball control and a little defense on both sides of the field. Connor Hayden netted three goals and an assist for the day and has really developed into the complete midfielder: face-offs, scoring ability, and defensive-minded.

He and Martin Buckley were all over the field and major reasons Cohasset was able to sweep its opponents. Buckley also added a pair of goals for the day.

Cameron Steele started a clear that went from the defensive side of the field after he picked up a ground ball, to a midfielder, to an attack. It was textbook and started with Steele. Also contributing in a big way was the Chris Lydon who played exceptional at defensive middy.

SPORTS NOTES

South Shore Spartans tryouts

The South Shore Spartans boys soccer club will be holding tryouts for the boys U12 team. The tryouts will be open to all boys born Aug. 1, 1995 or later. Positions open are for goalkeepers and field players.

Tryouts will be held Tuesday, June 26 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. and Thursday, June 28 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. All tryouts will take place at the Osborne Field on Main Street in Norwell. Please bring a ball, water and goalie gloves if you are trying out for goalie.

For further information or directions, please contact head coach Douglas Price, (781)264-3453 or via email at southshorespartans@yahoo.com.

Charity Golf Tournament

The Plymouth Aero Club will host its annual charity golf tournament Sunday, June 24, at Squirrel Run Golf Course, 32 Elderberry Drive, Plymouth. Sign-in will be held beginning at 8 a.m., with a shotgun start at 9 a.m.

The fee is $75 per player or $300 per foursome and includes golf, cart, player package, prizes and the banquet. In addition, there will be a helicopter ball drop and an auction. Proceeds from the tournament will go to establishing aviation scholarships as well as gifts to various local organizations.

For information call Dave at Squirrel Run at 508-746-5001.

Summer basketball camps

Cohasset High School varsity basketball coach Dorian Bryant will offer two camps this summer for kids.

The Big Man & Point Guard Perimeter Camp, an intensive four-day camp, will be held July 10 through 13, for youths in grades 7-12. The Ultimate Development Camp is a two-day-a-week camp for five weeks, beginning July 2. Both camps are designed so that the camper receives quality instruction on basketball fundamentals.

Applications are at the Recreation Office at the Cohasset Town Hall or can be downloaded at www.cohasset-basketball.com. Go to Links/AAU Teams & Summer Camps/Cohasset Summer Basketball Camp. The deadline for registration is Wednesday, June 20.

For information e-mail coach Bryant at dorianbry@aol.com.

Youth tennis lessons

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer youth tennis lessons this summer for boys and girls ages 7 and older.

This seven-week program starts Monday, June 25, or Tuesday, June 26, with one-hour lessons meeting twice per week on a Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule. Various levels of instruction are available. The cost is $80 per participant. Registration will be held in Town Hall auditorium from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m., June 11 to 14, or from 5 to 7 p.m., June 12. You must register in person during the times listed above.

If you know your swim and/or sailing schedule prior to registering for tennis, it will be helpful, as the Rec Department has more scheduling latitude than either swim or sailing lessons.

Swim and Dive team tryouts

Cohasset Swim Team tryouts will be held Monday, June 18 from 3-5 p.m. at the swim center pool. Swimmers must be 6 years of age by July 1, 2007 and no older than 17. There are limited openings this year.

Cohasset Dive Team tryouts will also be held on the 18th from 5-7 p.m. at the swim center pool. Rain date for tryouts for both swim and dive will be held Tuesday, June 19 with same times.

Lifeguard Certificate Training Program

There has been an overwhelming response for the Lifeguard Certificate Training program and limited class space; therefore, applicants will be accepted on a first come/first served basis. Registrations must be accompanied with payments for the course.

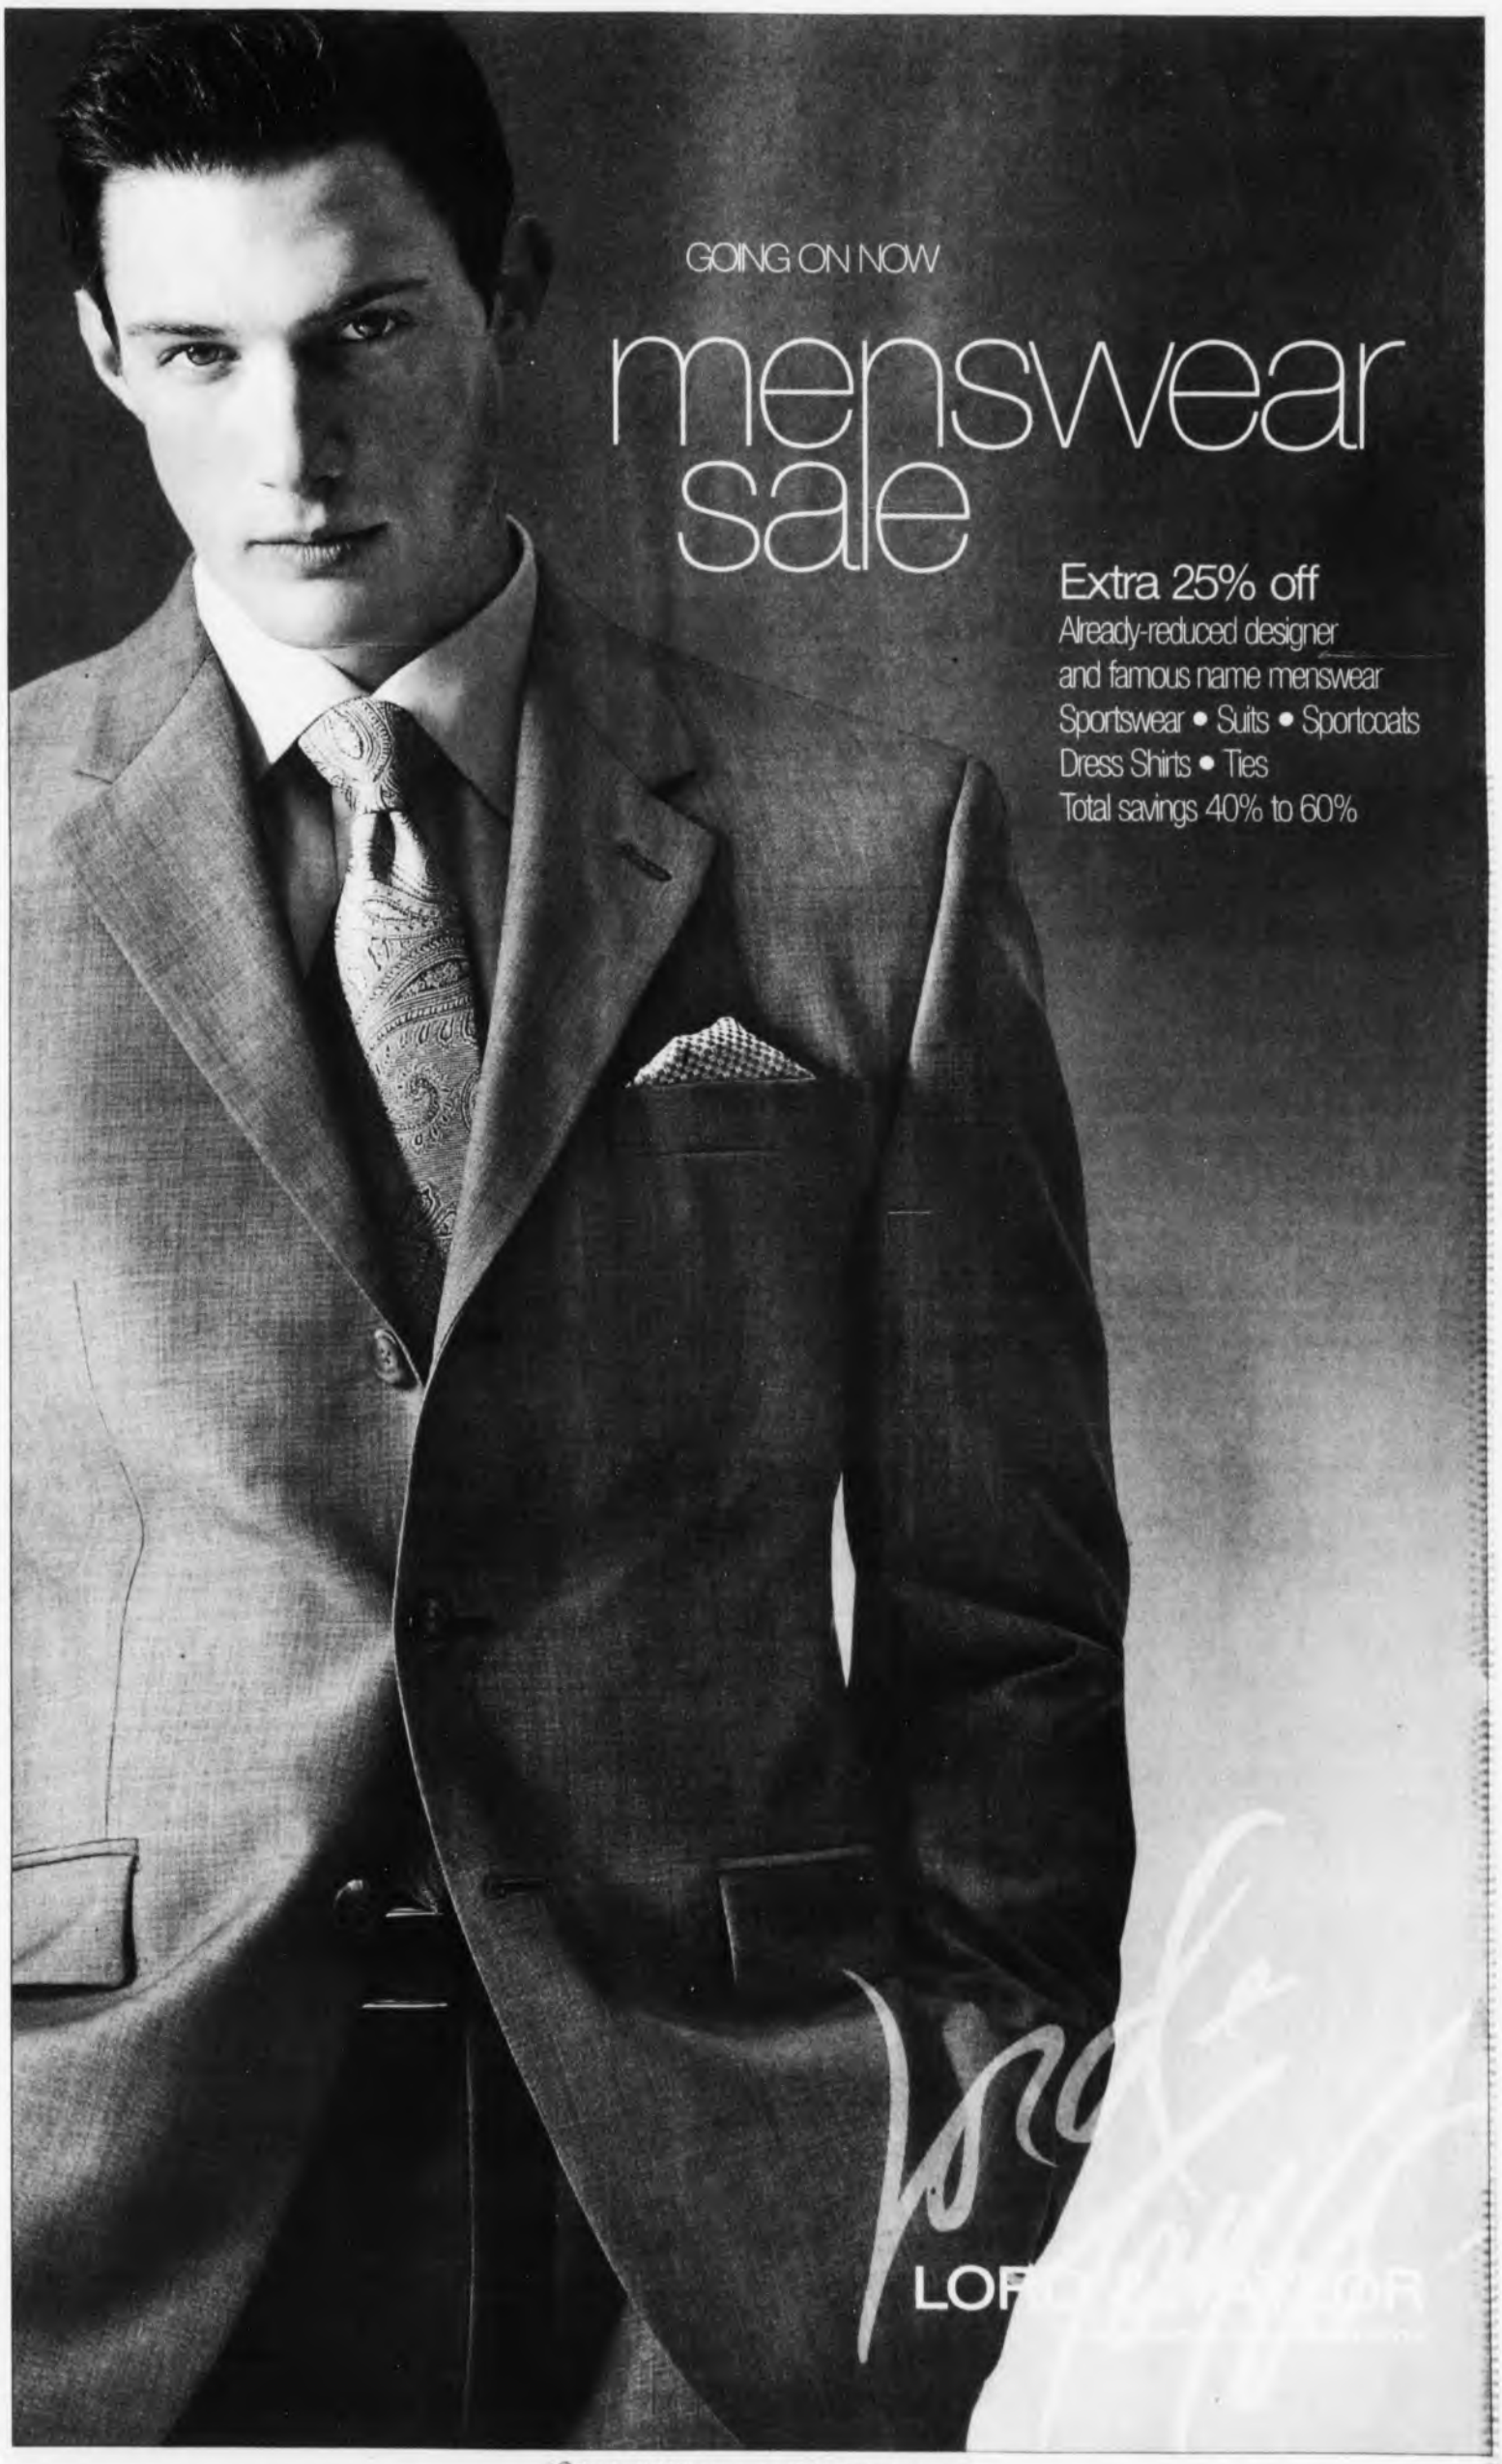
The class will run from 2 to 6 p.m., Monday June 18, and from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., June 19, 20, 21, 22. All classes are mandatory without exception.

The LGCTP course fee is $235 for Cohasset Swim Center members and $285 for nonmembers. Checks should be made payable and mailed to the Cohasset Swim Center, P.O. Box 132, Cohasset, MA. 02025. Your reply must be postmarked by Monday, June 11. They apologize for the tight deadline.

The American Red Cross runs the course for people age 15 and up, however, to be a Professional Lifeguard in the State of Mass., you must be 16 years of age. This is found in the section of the Mass. State Regulations, 105 CMR: Dept of Public Health, Section 435.23: Lifeguards.

Materials for the course cost $80 and are purchased in advance and not refundable. Therefore if a registered applicant does not pass the Prerequisite Skills Test, they will be unable to refund $80 of their registration fee.

In order to pass the Prerequisite Skills Test, one must be able to swim 500 yards continuously using the following strokes in this order: 200 yards of front crawl using rhythmic breathing and a stabilizing, propellant kick; 100 yards of breaststroke; 200 yards of either front crawl using rhythmic breathing or breaststroke - the 200 yards may be a mixture of front crawl and breaststroke; then one must swim 20 yards using front crawl or breaststroke, surface dive to a depth of 7-to10-feet, retrieve a 10-pound object, return to the surface and swim 20 yards back to the starting point with the object.



In your registration information include your name, birth date, address, town, e-mail, phone and cell phone.

For information send e-mails to Cohassetswimcenter@comcast.net.

Scituate Tennis Tournament

The Fourth Annual Scituate Tennis Tournament will be held June 16 for doubles, June 23 for singles, both adults and juniors. The cost is $40 per doubles team, $30 per singles player, with benefits going to Scituate Tennis. There will be prizes for winners and finalists. Players of all levels are welcome.

IT'S HAPPENING

Mordecai Lincoln Bridge dedication

Arthur Granville, President of the Gulf Association, Inc., announces that at 1 p.m., Sunday, June 17, the Gulf Association will sponsor a brief ceremony to dedicate the bridge over the Mordecai Lincoln Road Dam in honor of Doug Amelang. Doug, who passed away last October, was a long-time resident of Mordecai Lincoln Road, a passionate protector of the environment, and a forceful engine for local action in the Gulf River neighborhood.

They will unveil a mounted plaque that reads: Amelang Bridge – In memory of Doug "Red" Amelang, who labored with great vision year after year to restore the Hunter's Pond dam and herring run. Every returning fish is a tribute to his determination. Dedicated by the Gulf River Association, 2007.

The Amelang family requested that the dedication ceremony be held on Father's Day in Doug's memory and everyone is invited.

The Gulf Association of Cohasset and Scituate was established in 1968 to protect and preserve the beautiful tidal estuary. The Association has been active in identifying and restricting sources of pollution on the marsh, in educating citizens as to the regulations which govern land and water use on the Gulf and its surrounding highlands, and in encouraging compliance and cooperation to protect this valuable natural resource.

Family Fun Day

Kick-off summer by attending a Family Fun Day from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Saturday, June 16, at the Mt. Hope Improvement Society at the corner of Cedar St. and Clapp Road in the west end of Scituate, which will be hosted by the Maxwell Conservation Trust in appreciation for the support it has received from South Shore residents to preserve open space.

The free event will provide fun for the whole family including guided hikes and scavenger hunts in the newly acquired Litchfield property, a moon walk, face painting, "Max pics" - photos taken with Maxwell, the Golden Retriever and mascot of the Maxwell Trust and the music of Kathie Lee and Somethin' Else.

Refreshments and a lunch of hot dogs with all the fixings will be available for a nominal fee.

For information call Cynde Robbins on 781-545-4167.

Drift Away to perform

Join Drift Away, with J Place, Joe Micarelli and John Litwin Tuesdays at 8:30 p.m., at the Snug, 114 North St., Hingham. No cover.

The band features a variety of smooth jazz, blues, soul and classic standards from the 40's, 50's, 60's and 70's.

They also perform from 3 to 5 p.m., Saturdays at French Memories Café, 175 South Main St., Cohasset.

Wildlife programs

The New England Wildlife Center in its new 22,500 square foot "green" building in South Weymouth, will offer elementary and middle school students an opportunity during July and August to learn about science, nature and wildlife in a variety of workshops.

Seven unique educational workshops for one, two, three, and four days will be offered beginning Monday, July 9 and will run from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Workshops include "Puddle Jumping," an introduction to wetland habitats including vernal pools for children entering fifth, sixth and seventh grades; "Environmental Discovery," for first and second graders who will have fun learning about their surroundings and preserving the environment; "Where's Fred's Head?" that will take children entering fifth and sixth grade on an adventure to solve mysteries about wildlife, including interviews with scientists, veterinarians and field trips; "Walking with the Llamas," a five-hour hike with two Llamas through Bare Cove Park open to children entering fifth, sixth and seventh grades and three workshops for students entering third and fourth grades, including "Meet the Reptiles," "What's Under the Log?" and "Exploring with a Microscope."

Workshops will be offered by Dr. Greg Mertz, Director of the New England Wildlife Center, and Chief Veterinarian, Dr. Joe Martinez; two Weymouth High School science teachers and two additional educators that work with the New England Wildlife Center. Costs range from $50 to $230 depending on the number of days the workshops will run.

For information contact Dr. Jane Milley at 781-682-4878, ext. 123.

Tennis Benefit for Children's Hospital

Those wanting to play in the annual Cohasset Tennis Benefit for Children's Hospital can visit the Web site at cohassettennis-benefit.org and download the application, which is due Friday, June 22.

The tournament is a mixed-doubles format for all abilities and participants are determined on a first-come, first-served basis. Tennis takes place on private courts throughout Cohasset during the weekend of July 14th and 15th. The pre-tournament dinner and auction will take place Friday, July 13, at the Lightkeepers residence on Cohasset Harbor.

This charity benefit was originally started by Jesse Cox and her neighbors in the 1950s. It has since grown to include hundreds of players and a wide array of tennis abilities. In the past eight years, some $100,000 has been raised for Children's Hospital. This year's event will be channeled to the recently established Suicide Prevention Program at Children's.

For information about the tournament, to register, or to be added to the email distribution list, visit the Web site.

Blood drive

The Knights of Columbus and the American Red Cross will hold a blood drive from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., Saturday, June 30, at Knights of Columbus Hall, 440 Nantasket Ave., Hull. Nearly 2,000 units of blood are needed each day to help those in need in the local community. It only takes about an hour of time and one small pinch to become a hero to someone in need.

Anyone 17 years of age or older, weighing 110 pounds or more and feeling in good health may be eligible to give blood. For information call 800-448-3543 or visit newengland-blood.org.

Lots of stars in school this week

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTINE KENT

Congratulations boys' lacrosse! On Monday, Cohasset's star-studded team was able to retain their State Championship title, playing Scituate in what has been deemed one of the most thrilling games in Cohasset athletics. In addition to the outstanding sports talent displayed in the last few days it was a pleasantly surprising and entertaining weekend for those in the arts. Musical Theatre's show "Stage 161" delighted audiences with their upbeat renditions of hit musical numbers and homemade script. To my mum's dismay, I have subsequently altered my life goal to being a BROADWAY star! Just kidding, but the sounds of Little Orphan Annie definitely echo throughout my house.

Special congratulations to Amanda Simpson, whose faculty filled talent show was able to raise a nice chunk of change, which will be given to the Relay For Life charity. Who knew that, hidden behind the khaki pants and button up shirts, teachers are real people, or even better rock stars?! To quote a classic, "I love seeing a teacher outside of school. It's like seeing a dog walk on its hind legs," (Mean Girls).

Now, it's time for the rundown of the week:

• Monday, who could ignore the glorious victory for Cohasset in the State Championship Boys Lacrosse game against Scituate.

• Tuesday, I wrote my last Life at CHS column for this school year!

In addition to the outstanding sports talent displayed in the last few days it was a pleasantly surprising and entertaining weekend for those in the arts.

• Wednesday, aside from a boring faculty meeting, the day was pretty uneventful.

• On Thursday, the torches were lit, as sixth graders competed in Olympic Day.

• Oh Friday, Friday… The eighth graders are scheduled to watch "Romeo and Juliet" before heading off to their pool party to celebrate their middle school finale! Also, Relay for Life all night charity event takes place, bringing together hundreds of townsfolk on the high school track.

• Saturday, students get their first taste of summer vacation!

• Monday, June 18… only two hours of school…time to whip out the Alice Cooper …" School's Out for the Summer!"

Well folks, my job here is done (at least for this year) as I turn off the computer and step outside into the sunny unknown! Until next year, have a safe and awesome summer!

Adios!

Two receive scholarships in memory of Bryan K. Bilton

An annual scholarship in memory of Bryan K. Bilton, who died earlier this year, has been designated by the Cohasset High School Swim Team Booster and Scholarship committees. Bryan was a member of both the High School Swim and Dive Team, for which he served as captain, and the Cohasset Summer League Swim Team throughout his years growing up in Cohasset. The recipient of the Bryan K. Bilton Memorial Swimming Scholarship must be a member of the Cohasset High School Swim team and share Bryan's enthusiasm for, and love of, this sport; must demonstrate leadership and commitment to the High School Swim Team; and, also be focused on academic achievement. This year the scholarship was awarded to two recipients: Alyssa Campbell and Brent Daly.

Contributions to this scholarship fund in memory of Bryan may be made payable to Cohasset High School Swim Team and sent to: Cohasset Schools, Central Office for Business Administration, 143 Pond St., Cohasset, MA 02025. Indicate Bryan Bilton Scholarship and note to the attention of Helen Daley, chairman.

The c. 1810 Captain John Wilson House

Our unique 1810 historic house reopens in conjunction with the Arts Festival on the Common. Please make it a point to stop by, have some cake, and see how Cohasset residents lived in the early 19th century.

The grand re-opening is from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Saturday (June 16). The historic house features new exhibits on the Wilson family and 19th century life in Cohasset.

Come see the sword left behind on Captain Wilson's ship by a British marine during the War of 1812. Learn how children played in the 19th century See how much life has changed in the last two centuries through historic artifacts, documents, furnishings and artwork.

Stop by on your way to the South Shore Arts Festival. The Captain John Wilson House is located at 4 Elm St.

Summer solstice

Almost 40 years ago, the people of Hingham generously raised funds to protect World's End from development, forever. Bring your family, friends, and picnic supper, and share in the annual Thank You celebration on the Summer Solstice, complete with music, drinks, dessert and a breathtaking sunset, from 6 to 8:30 p.m., Wednesday, June 21. The cost is $5 for members with a membership card and $10 for nonmembers. Admission is free for children under 12. To get to World's End, take Route 3A to Summer Street, to Martin's Lane to World's End. Visit thetrustees.org for details.

Pancake breakfast

Start your Father's Day off with a delicious pancake breakfast!

Sail Nantasket will be hosting the annual Father's Day Pancake Breakfast this Sunday, June 17th, from 8:30-11 am at the Hull Yacht Club, 5 Fitzpatrick Way, Hull. The public is welcome and all proceeds will benefit Sail Nantasket, a 501(c)(3) non-profit dedicated to encouraging the sport of sailing and to administer and promote public participation in sailing related programs. A suggested donation of at least $5 will be collected at the door.

Runners remember Clark

Chatterton Fund Run 'gives back to Cohasset'

PE teacher Michael Weydt stands with some of the young Fund Run participants. The event included a one-mile fun run for children.

Sean Crowley, 16, left, and Justin Damaso, stretch out at the South Shore Music Circus before the start of the race. Chatterton, long-time athletic director at CHS, passed away seven years ago.

Mia Donahue, 3, of Scituate reaches up to get some ice cream from Kelsie Litchfield, 17, of Scituate, who is Clark Chatterton's granddaughter. Mia's parents own Nona's in Hingham that provided ice cream for race participants.

Nicole Whitney helps Ted Straughn (Both of Cohasset) with his number before the start of Saturday's Clark Chatterton Fund Run.

Sallyann Chatterton gets a hug from Jill Patterson before the start of the race. The Clark Chatterton Fund Run is named in Sallyann's husband's honor.

Patrick Whamond, 6, right, of Hingham, cheers on his father Michael, left, as Michael strides toward the finish line. He finished with a time of 22:45 to finish second in his age group in the 3-1/5-mile run.

Mike Rooney of Bay State Service finds shelter in his van while keeping track of the times for the runners. Proceeds from the run go to the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund that enhances Cohasset's sports and recreational facilities.

Suellen Durkin of Cohasset finishes strong. She was the first female runner with a time of 24:59. Clark Chatteron, for whom the race is named, was a long-time and beloved athletic director at the high school.

Noel Hart, 8, of Cohasset, sprints down the homestretch during the run whose proceeds go to the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund that enhances Cohasset's sports and recreational facilities

Matt Gregory, 12, of Cohasset, takes a sip of his water after the race. He finished fourth in his age group with a time of 27:21.

Staff Photos by Robin Chan

Cohasset Middle High School Principal Joel Antolini turns the corner to finish 10th overall with a time of 23:33.

OBITURARIES

Ryan Davis

Memorial Mass is Saturday

Ryan Davis, of Hingham, died May 26, 2007.

In his short, wonderful life, Ryan Davis brought great happiness to so many people. The son of James and Janice Davis of Hingham, he was enthusiastically curious about the world around him.

As a young boy, he loved nature. He had a pet duck, several rabbits and a cockatiel named "Cookie," who sat on his shoulder as he rode his bike. He would shriek with delight as he tried to catch frogs at a pond in Barnstable, where he lived until he was 10.

As he progressed though elementary school, his interests shifted to math and science projects, which he would work on with great intensity into the early morning hours. During this time, his teachers would often ask him to mentor other students, as he had a kind and patient manner. He enthusiastically participated in the Odyssey of the Mind program.

Ryan was also an athlete. He was a member of the Cape Cod YMCA and Duxbury Dolphins swim teams. He played soccer in the Barnstable and Hingham town teams. An accomplished sailor, Ryan sailed at the Hyannis Yacht Club, the Lincoln Sailing Center and, most recently, he was a senior sailing instructor at the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Ryan attended Phillips Academy in Andover and MIT, where he planned to major in chemistry. Upon learning of Ryan's death, Barbara Chase, Head of School at Andover, wrote, "We remember Ryan as a brilliant, compassionate young man with tremendous potential – admired and loved by those who knew him. Whether in the classroom, where he excelled with a heavy load of the most advanced courses, or in community service, as a peer tutor or as a dormitory proctor, Ryan set and achieved high standards. He also distinguished himself through his humility, conscience and profound passion."

Ryan was a caring, sensitive son who had a dry sense of humor and an appreciation for life's ironies.

He leaves his parents, James and Janice Davis, of Hingham; three sisters, Caroline, Julie and Jenna, all of Hingham; his grandmother, Catherine M. Davis of Centerville, and many aunts, uncles and cousins. He also leaves his girlfriend of many years, Mailan Pham and his best friend, Pat McDermott.

All are invited to attend a memorial Mass for Ryan, which will be offered at 10 a.m., Saturday, June 16, at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. A reception in the Parish Hall will follow. Interment is private.

Donations in his memory may be made to Samaritans, Inc., Seventh Floor, 141 Tremont St., Boston, MA. 02111.

Tucker Collins

Chief of Pathology at Children's Hospital

Tucker Collins, M.D., PhD., age 54 of Cohasset, died June 8, 2007, suddenly, at home.

Dr. Collins was born and raised in Ohio. He attended Amherst College, Class of 1975 before graduating with his M.D. and PhD. from University of Rochester Medical School. He completed an internship, residency and fellowship at Brigham & Women's Hospital and became a full professor of Pathology. He was a Pew Scholar in Biomedical research and an established investigator of the American Heart Association, as well as past president of the American Society for Investigative Pathology. He became Chief of Pathology at Children's Hospital in Boston in 2001.

He leaves his wife, Mary J. Whitley; his daughter, Caroline Collins of Cohasset; his brother, Robert Duff Collins of Sharon. He was the brother of the late Catherine Leary.

A Funeral Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m., Tuesday, June 19, 2007 in St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. Private Interment at Woodside Cemetery.

Donations in his memory may be made to Children's Hospital Trust, 1 Autumn St., #731, Boston, MA. 02215-5301 or to the Cohasset Education Foundation, P.O. Box 309, Cohasset, MA. 02025.

Cathy J. Pryles

Employed by Boston Financial

Cathy J. Pryles, 56, of Hanover, formerly of Pembroke and Cohasset, died June 9, 2007, at Massachusetts General Hospital following a brief illness.

Born in Weymouth, she was the daughter of the late Arthur and Kay (Cheevers) Turner. Mrs. Pryles was raised and educated in Cohasset, and later lived in Pembroke before moving to Hanover 20 years ago.

She was a graduate of UMass-Amherst with a degree in English, and had been employed in the Utilization Review Department at Blue Cross/Blue Shield, as a customer service representative at Scudder Investments and then for Boston Financial in Quincy.

Mrs. Pryles was a former CCD teacher and lector at St. Mary Church in Hanover.

She leaves her husband, James K. Pryles; and two sons, Michael David Pryles and Kevin James Pryles, both of Hanover.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Mary of the Sacred Heart Church, Hanover. Interment in Hanover Center Cemetery. Arrangements were handled by Sullivan Funeral Home, Hanover.

Memorial donations may be made to the Jimmy Fund, Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, 10 Brookline Place West, Sixth Floor, Brookline, MA 02445-7226.

Cecelia Sampson

Loved bowling

Cecelia (Barrows) Sampson, 92, of Cohasset, died May 27, 2007, at South Shore Hospital.

Mrs. Sampson was born and raised in Cohasset and graduated from Cohasset High School. After marrying her late husband, Mrs. Sampson moved to Hingham for 30 years, before returning to Cohasset in the early 1960s.

Mrs. Sampson was very involved with the Cohasset Senior Citizens and loved bowling, and was an active member of Cohasset Bowling League.

Wife of the late Kenneth Sampson, she leaves her niece, Margaret DeCouto; two nephews, Richard Barrows of Braintree and Bernard Barrows of Weymouth; and many great-nieces and great-nephews.

She was the sister of the late Bernard Barrows, Frederick Barrows and Velmira Barrows.

Arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset. Interment at Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Theater review

Ending on a funny note

'Present Laughter' fills the bill at Huntington Theatre

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

When the Huntington Theatre Company had to postpone its planned revival of "Streamers" until next fall, Artistic Director Nicholas Martin quickly replaced the David Rabe drama with a classic Noel Coward comedy, "Present Laughter," and cast his old friend Victor Garber in the starring role. In doing so, Martin found a silver lining in what might otherwise have been a problem for the Huntington's 25th anniversary year and gave audiences the perfect production to close out a very impressive season.

Set in the 1930s London, "Present Laughter" is thought by many to be Coward's most autobiographical play. Written in 1939 and first produced on Broadway 61 years ago, it pulls back the curtain on a past-his-prime, but still devilishly charming matinee idol as he prepares to leave for six months on the road in Africa. The grueling repertory schedule that awaits him might be cause for concern some, but for Garry Essendine it will likely be a welcome respite from the whirlwind that is his complicated, complex personal life.

Victor Garber — known to audiences from feature films like "Legally Blonde," his five-year run on the ABC-TV drama "Alias" and Broadway roles in "Deathrap" and the 1994 revival of the musical "Damn Yankees" in which he played no less than the Devil himself — is masterful as the stylishly self-absorbed stage star. Like his friends, romantic conquests, and beleaguered household staff, you'll be hard-pressed to take your eyes off Essendine, even as he eyes himself in the mirror each and every chance he gets. Garber is a versatile actor, for sure, but his work in this role reminds us that he has more than enough star power to command center stage for close to three hours and make every minute fly by.

The night before he's to sail to Africa on a six-month theatre tour, aging matinee idol Garry Essendine (Victor Garber) is exhausted by the demands of life including ex-wife Liz (Lisa Barnes) in the Huntington Theatre Company's production of "Present Laughter," directed by Nicholas Martin and running through June 17 at the Huntington's B.U. Theatre.

Hingham actress Alice Duffy portrays Lady Saltburn, in "Present Laughter."

Fittingly, Director Martin has given his leading man a company of supporting players whom a real-life Essendine himself would envy. As Essendine's ex-wife, Lisa Banes is divine as perhaps the only stalwart presence in his life. Her confident elegance and bemused outlook make her the perfect person to steady her ex, even when he seems determined to sink in the self-created drama that is his life.

Coward's wonderfully wicked way with words is in full evidence as the story unfolds and Essendine finds himself ensnared in a series of romantic entanglements. In just the few days left before he departs for Africa, Essendine must deal with visits from more than one woman who wants to seduce him including Daphne Stillington (Holley Fain), a young woman dazzled by his star power, and Joanna Lyppoatt (Pamela J. Gray), a manipulative maneater. He also has to deal with his own staff including a put-upon personal assistant, Monica Reed (Sarah Hudnut), a chainsmoking maid, Miss Erikson (local favorite Nancy E. Carroll), and his seen-and-done-it-all-before manservant, Fred (James Joseph O'Neill). As if that weren't enough, there's also a daft young playwright, Roland Maule (Brooks Ashmanskas, a 2007 Tony Award nominee for "Martin Short: Fame Becomes Me"), whose dementia adds another frenetic dimension to the already frenzied goings on in Essendine's posh London flat. I won't spoil it for those with tickets this weekend, but don't miss Ashmanskas's scene with Hingham actress Alice Duffy as Lady Saltburn, elderly aunt and guardian to Daphne. They are only together briefly, but what they do in that time is priceless.

Under Nicholas Martin's direction, a first-rate cast makes sure that the comedy comes because they take even the most farcical of the proceedings seriously, thus helping this stellar production avoid the pitfall of self-consciousness often common to Coward interpreters. Scenic designer Alexander Dodge has given Essendine a glorious London home complete with an over-sized painting of the lord of the manor done up as Hamlet. Mariann Verheyn has designed costumes that suit each character perfectly, and with help from Bloomingdale's at Chestnut Hill, has given Garber an array of the most elegant silk dressing gowns that seem to have come straight from Savile Row.

The Huntington Theatre Company's production of "Present Laughter" will be at the Boston University Theatre, 264 Huntington Avenue, through June 17. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-266-0800 or go online at huntingtontheatre.org.

Wrestling with success

Main event features Olympic gold medalist

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

As a 1996 Olympic Gold Medalist in free-style wrestling and the current star of Total Non-Stop Action Wrestling (TNA), which will set up its patented hexagonal ring at the South Shore Music Circus on June 22, Kurt Angle knows what it's like to be on top of both the amateur and professional wrestling worlds. He also knows first hand that success in one does not lead to success in the other.

"Very few amateur wrestlers make it at the professional level, because the latter is such a different experience. In amateur wrestling, you're there to win so you ignore the crowd and focus all your attention and energy on your opponent. At the professional level, it is just the opposite. Professional wrestling isn't fake, but there is a pre-determined winner of each match. The fans try and guess who is going to win, but half the time they're wrong, because a lot of what we do during a match is not pre-determined. At the professional level, it's all about moves that are sharp, snug and crisp. You have to focus on the crowd and feed off their energy as you use the match to tell a story. The wrestling has to be real, but you also have to be a good actor," said Angle by telephone from his Pittsburgh home last week.

If Angle's success in Atlanta 11 years ago cemented his status as one of the best American wrestlers of all time, then his six world championships, during eight years, with World Wrestling Entertainment (WWE) made it clear that Angle is also one of the shining stars of pro wrestling.

When his eight-year relationship with WWE — and its mercurial owner Vince McMahon — tarnished last year, however, Angle was quickly signed by TNA to be a main event wrestler on its highly rated Spike TV program.

1996 Olympic gold Medalist freestyle wrestler Kurt Angle and Total Non-Stop Action Wrestling (TNA) will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on Thursday, June 22.

"I quit WWE because I was always on the road and I had no home life. For the first three years of her life, my daughter, Kyra, would call me 'Kurt,' whenever I was home. I think she thought I was just visiting the house. I had to remind her that I was 'Daddy.' I just really needed a break. I work less now, but I have a real role in the development and success of TNA."

And a chance at a healthier, more balanced life. Injuries that long ago left Angle with chronic neck pain also resulted in the Pennsylvania native becoming addicted to prescription pain medication. According to the 38-year-old Angle, WWE was not interested in seeing him address the problem. They were only interested in seeing their star in the ring.

"I had a real problem. My daily pill intake was astronomical. More often than not, I was wrestling for WWE while completely high on pain killers. Around this time, too, my sister died, and my wife and I separated. I was really down and I needed help, but the WWE wouldn't even give me three months off to go to rehab. They made me feel like a number and not a person. Vince McMahon has one of the greatest minds in pro wrestling and I give him a lot of credit for what he has done, but before I was through with them, WWE had taken just about everything they could from me, except my name."

Angle's name entered the history books in 1996 on a hot summer's day that he will never forget.

"Winning the Olympic gold medal was the realization of a dream I had since I was 5 years old. That experience was a feeling like none other, except maybe having my two children (son Kody was born in 2006) and kicking painkillers."

Angle may have stood alone on the gold medal podium, but he shared his other triumphs with his wife, Karen, whom he married on Dec. 19, 1998.

"I'm very lucky my wife took me back. She really helped me kick my addiction. Now I work with a team of doctors who are pain specialists. I take a pain blocker, which is non-addictive, instead of a pain killer. I feel so much better now. Things are going tremendously well and I have the full support of TNA."

In return, Angle gives the Nashville-based company his full professional focus.

"I'm always talking to the office about talent and storylines," explains Angle, who will wrestle the main event in Cohasset. "In TNA, we have more athleticism and some unbelievable wrestling. I'm committed to making TNA the biggest thing in pro wrestling."

Kurt Angle and Total Non-Stop Action Wrestling (TNA) will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on Thursday, June 22. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-931-2787 or go on online at www.themusiccircus.org

Coast Guard honors lightkeepers with plaque

Artifacts of original Minot's searched for

By John Galluzzo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Word passed down through oral tradition tells residents of Cohasset and Scituate that the designer of the original Minot's Lighthouse was so embarrassed by its catastrophic failure during a storm on the night of April 16/17, 1851, that he ordered the entirety of the light's remains to be immediately salvaged from the sea floor and taken away. Historians are still trying to prove or disprove that story.

This week, the Coast Guard took up the challenge.

On Monday morning, the 175-foot buoy tender Abbie Burgess, homeported to Rockland, Maine, cruised from the Coast Guard's North End of Boston base of operations to the waters to the northwest of today's Minot Light, the granite structure that in 1860 replaced the lost tower. The trip that got the cutter there took a little more than an hour, but the road that brought the various players aboard the vessel that day stretched out much longer.

By requesting the right to place an underwater plaque somewhere on or near the site of the 1851 lighthouse tragedy in memory of lost lightkeepers Joseph Wilson and Joseph Antoine, the nonprofit Foundation for Coast Guard History set in motion a plan bigger than it ever imagined would take place.

Treating Treat's

ACE pond plan before selectmen

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In the next few weeks, the Board of Selectmen will make a determination on whether the town is interested in implemeñting an Army Corps of Engineers' plan to revitalize Treat's Pond as a salt-marsh ecosystem. Treat's Pond is located on the ocean side of Atlantic Avenue, near White Head Road.

Treat's Pond current conditions are not characteristic of a thriving salt marsh. The area is dominated by phragmites, an invasive plant that prefers to grow in a mix of salt and fresh water. There is little tidal exchange between the ocean at Sandy Cove and the pond leaving much of the area stagnant. Right now a 24-inch diameter pipe is the only means of exchange, which is only opened intermittently by the Department of Public Works. The Army Corps objectives include increasing tidal exchange, reducing velocities, creating a sedimentation basin and providing a means of controlling water flow.

David Larsen, the Army Corps project manager, presented to the Selectmen and an audience of close to 20 residents four different alternatives to alleviate the problem. From the federal Army Corps standpoint the primary objective is to restore the salt marsh, but its efforts may have some side benefits for flooding and stormwater management.

The Army Corps laid out two alternatives the town could pursue, but it did not recommend either. The first option would be to take no action on the issue. In taking no action, Larsen said their

Merchants, property owners at meeting

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When a group of diverse citizens with open minds and plenty of positive ideas meet there can only be positive results. On Tuesday evening, residents and interested parties got together in the Town Hall auditorium to discuss both the problems and possible solutions for the village business district.

"I lost a bet, I thought we'd only have single digit numbers tonight," joked a surprised Planning Board member Mike Westcott to open the meeting. He was pleasantly greeted with about two dozen interested citizens, merchants and property owners in attendance at the public kick-off meeting with the village consultant.

Angus Jennings, principal planner with Concord Square Development Company, started off the meeting by sharing his preliminary findings from 30 returned surveys. The results so far, he said, had not surprised them.

Businesses named visibility, vthe mix of surrounding businesses and the district's close proximity to municipal

Rocky Lane hits some bumps

Guardrail out of place, residents say

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Driving down North Main Street is one of the main streets in Cohasset. It is typically a pleasant drive with plenty of scenery: historic homes, a golf course and plenty of greenery make up the landscape. Many residents and visitors utilize the residential street as an alternative to well-trafficked Route 3A. The road leads right into the Cohasset Common and Village.

However, in recent months an "eyesore" has become a part of the landscape, right at the entrance to the cul-de-sac development on Rocky Lane. In late March, the entrance became flanked with two Corten steel guard rails the color of rust-orange.

"We're hearing from people all over town that they are horrible — the scale, the color everything about them is horrible," says Rocky Lane resident Leslie Armstrong. She and her neighbors in the nine-home development were taken aback when the guardrails were installed as the finishing touch on the MBTA-constructed bridge over the Greenbush tracks that now serves as the entrance drive to the Rocky Lane.

Since the installation they have met with Town Manager Bill Griffin and Greenbush liaisons, Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan, several times to find a way to have the guard rails removed and replaced with something more aesthetically pleasing.

Rocky Lane neighbors say the scale and look of the new Corten steel guardrails is "horrible."

"It's not just Rocky Lane, it's the town," who are dealing with the out-of-character guard rails says Armstrong, "they're very visible."

Ironically enough, the Corten steel guardrails were not installed as leftovers from another job, or even haphazardly. The Corten steel guardrails were chosen after the Greenbush project went through a hearing process with the Army Corps of Engineers dealing with Section 106. Hearings and Section 106 are done in conjunction with major projects to minimize the visual and aesthetic impact on historic settings. The homes on North Main Street were

Bee blamed for truck accident

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A man driving a pickup truck on Nichols Road told police a bee came into the cab and as he tried to whack it off his arm, he turned the wheel and went off the roadway.

The man was not injured but his 1999 Dodge pickup hit a tree and the impact tipped the vehicle onto its side, Chief James Hussey said. The rear window had to be broken so the man and his dog could slide out.

Nichols Road was shut down for a short time, but traffic was soon able to be directed around the accident, Hussey said.

The mishap, which Hussey described as "bizarre," occurred at about 9:48 a.m. on Tuesday (June 12). The man was cited for operating outside of marked lanes.

Intoxicated

A clerk at Cohasset Liquors notified police after turning away a customer who seemed "extremely" intoxicated and was stumbling on his way to his car at about 4 p.m., last Thursday (June 14), Chief Hussey said. The man got into his car and headed south on Route 3A. The dispatcher taking the call recognized the description of the vehicle as one that may have been involved with a hit and run incident involving property damage at Pratt Court earlier that afternoon.

Officers following the car on 3A saw it drift over the yellow line and noticed the damaged passenger side mirror that would have been consistent with the earlier hit and run.

The vehicle was pulled over at Tedeschi Plaza. Further investigation and observations by the officers resulted in the arrest of a 56-year-old Scituate man on charged of OUI (alcohol, second offense); leaving the scene of an accident; negligent operation of a motor vehicle; and marked lanes violation.

The man was able to make bail but police held him in protective custody at the station until he was OK to leave, Chief Hussey said.

Hydroplaning

Multiple 911 calls came into dispatch on Monday (June 11) at just past 9 p.m. reporting that a vehicle had crashed into a stone wall on Jerusalem Road. Chief Hussey said the vehicle was heading south at about the 700 block of Jerusalem Road when the operator lost control, went off the right side of the road making contact with the rock wall at a residence. He said there was extensive damage to the underside of the vehicle that had to be towed. There were no injuries but the operator was cited for driving at a speed that is greater than reasonable and proper for the conditions and for marked lanes violation.

Hussey said it had been raining and when the operator hit the brakes, he lost control and the vehicle hydroplaned.

Altercations

Some spirited fans at the Cohasset vs. Scituate state lacrosse championship game may have gotten into a minor altercation in the stands, police said. Detail officers reported a fight at just past 6 p.m. Monday (June 11). They also reported the situation was under control and that responding officers could cancel. By the time the officers got into the stands, it had stopped and was over, Chief Hussey said.

Two hours later, policed met with a mother at the school who said her son had been struck at the conclusion of the game during an altercation. The son had the first name of the other student, who was from Scituate, and police identified the student and talked to the parents, Hussey said.

Identity fraud

A walk-in to the police last week reported receiving a suspicious bill from a collection agency seeking more than $2,000 in outstanding phone bills dating back almost 10 years for an account in New York. The person who received the bill had never lived in New York and never had a phone there. The person wrote back to the collection agency about a potential mix-up. Then the agency came back asking for more information. The person is not sure the collection agency is legit and matter has been referred to the detectives, Chief Hussey said.

Motorcyclist injured in 3A crash

Firefighters and paramedics from the Cohasset Fire Department arrived on scene and determined that the man needed immediate transport to a Boston trauma center.

At about 5:24 p.m., Tuesday, June 19, the Cohasset Police Department's Emergency Communications Center received multiple calls reporting a motorcycle crash with injuries on Route 3A at the intersection of Lower King Street.

Police Officers arriving on scene observed that a 74-year-old female from the town of Milton, who was operating a 1992 Volvo sedan, pulled out of Lower King Street, in front of a 49-year-old male from the town of Hull who was operating his 2004 Ducardi motorcycle north bound on Route 3A.

As a result of the female failing to yield to oncoming traffic, the motorcyclist appears to have locked his brakes up and was subsequently thrown over the handlebars of the motorcycle, striking the drivers door of the Volvo with his head and body.

Firefighters and paramedics from the Cohasset Fire Department arrived on scene and determined that the man needed immediate transport to a Boston trauma center. Boston Medflight was notified by the fire department and the male was airlifted to the Boston Medical Center. He has been hospitalized with traumatic injuries which have been determined to be non-life threatening.

The female operator of the Volvo was issued a motor vehicle citation for failing to yield for oncoming traffic. The male operator of the motorcycle was wearing a full-face helmet and protective leather clothing, which limited his injuries. The motorcycle was towed from the scene, and the Volvo was driven away. Traffic on Route 3A was disrupted for approximately one hour while to accident was investigated by the Cohasset Police Department.

DiNero's denied additional parking

Split vote keeps Hull St. parking restriction in place

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"If the neighbors think it's helping then I think we should keep it the way it is."
— Selectman Ted Carr

In a split vote on Monday night, the Board of Selectman denied the creation of any new legal parking spaces on Hull Street for use by DiNero's Restaurant. Abutters attending the meeting were influential in showing the board what they see as a growing number of issues from traffic, parking, litter and noise.

The owner of the DiNero's, Frank Plotner, wrote to the Town Manager Bill Griffin to seek relief from a parking ban imposed on Hull Street from Grace Drive to the restaurant parking lot. He requested three additional spaces be authorized "to help with any overflow" from the restaurant's parking area.

Griffin had Police Chief James Hussey out to look at the area to see if three spots were feasible. In 2005, Hussey recommended the parking restrictions be placed on Hull Street due to cars parking over the fog line, blocking the travel lane and hindering the sight line of cars exiting Grace Drive. In his letter he states "a space of about 25 feet of overgrown bushes/weeds has been cut back" creating space for two vehicles without blocking the travel lane.

"If this section was kept clear of the overgrowth, two off-street parking spaces could be created," Hussey wrote. Griffin said that the Chief did not recommend or oppose the parking spaces; he indicated only that two spots were possible.

"All we're doing is legitimizing something that's happening anyway," said Selectmen Chairman Gary Vanderweil, "I think engineering-wise, it's alright.

The neighbors seemed to be more concerned with the safety aspects of the parking. They attested that often on the restaurants' busy nights cars are parked on both sides of the street and visibility coming out of a private driveway and Grace Drive is limited.

Jim Reichardt of 3 Grace Drive, who has been vocal in the past concerning issues with DiNero's, questioned the boundary of his property and town property. The most up-to-date map outlining the road layout is from 1925.

"The road has been re-done, straightened out four or five times in my lifetime," said Reichardt. He also argued the parking spaces would hinder his sight line if exiting from his rear driveway.

Reichardt was also concerned at the way the overgrowth on Hull Street, which sits on town property, was cut back in essence making room for the additional parking spaces. Griffin addressed the issue with the manager of DiNero's earlier this year and requested the business refrain from removing or altering the vegetation on town property.

Other residents cited continuing problems in conjunction with the restaurant: cars coming into their driveway, litter from the complimentary mints and ashtrays being dumped on their lawns.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer made a motion to approve the two additional legal spots on Hull Street, "this does not feel bad to me," he said.

Selectman Paul Carlson felt he was not prepared to approve the parking spaces. He said he would have liked to see a representative from DiNero's at the meeting to address some of the residents' concerns.

Selectman Ted Carr said he was sympathetic to the neighbors and their situation, "I don't think not approving these parking spaces will be overly detrimental to DiNero's business. If the neighbors think it's helping then I think we should keep it the way it is."

The ultimate vote was 3-2 in favor of keeping the street parking restriction in place. Selectman Fred Koed voted with Carlson and Carr. Vanderweil and Dormitzer were the two votes in favor of additional parking spaces.

DiNero's has a history with parking problems, issues that have been aired previously in front of the Selectmen. In 2002 and 2005, the Selectmen denied DiNero's request for a Kenó license after abutters came out to argue the state lottery game could have a negative impact on the neighborhood and an already tight parking situation.

Rolled

A 2000 Toyota Land Cruiser that had been left in neutral with the emergency brake on rolled slowly down Highland Avenue at about 3:50 p.m. last Friday (June 15) into a parked, gray Jeep. There was no damage to the Toyota and only slight damage to the Jeep, police said.

Medical issue

A reported erratic driver turned out to be a woman who had just left a medical appointment at which she had received drops in her eyes.

She told police she was fine and then the drops kicked in and she was having trouble seeing. She pulled over at Dunkin' Donuts.

Scituate police had notified Cohasset about a report of a vehicle "all over the road on 3A" heading toward Cohasset. The incident occurred Friday (June 15) at about 4:20 p.m.

She sat for a while and was fine, Hussey said.

Underage

A Cohasset youth is facing the charge of a minor transporting liquor after being found in Wheelwright Park with beer in his backpack.

Police responded to a youth complaint at the park last Friday (June 15) at about 9:30 p.m. Chief Hussey said police have had a number of complaints recently about teens in the park after dark with "unwanted activity" and asked neighbors to contact them.

Last Friday two bicycle patrols responded; some teens fled but the officers detained three males and one female. The teens were released to their parents and one of the boys was charged.

Dog hurt

Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy investigated the possibility that a dog on Oak Street was shot with a BB gun.

The dog had been on a run in the backyard for about an hour when its owner noticed two spots of blood on the dog's back.

The resident, who said he could not afford to take the dog to the veterinarian, reported the incident that occurred around noon Saturday (June 15) to police. Murphy followed up with the owner and made arrangements to have the dog examined by a veterinarian at no cost to determine the cause of the injury, Chief Hussey said. The dog "was a little freaked" and would not let the officer who responded near the wounds, Hussey said.

As it turned out the dog had been bitten by another animal, but the vet could not determine what kind of animal, Hussey said.

Cell phone

A cell phone may have caused an accident at 2 a.m. Sunday (June 17) on S. Main Street. Dispatch received a 911 call reporting a serious car accident and when police arrived the operator, a 22-year-old Hull man, was sitting on the ground and the 1995 Nissan was on its roof.

Police said the car was traveling northbound when it ran off the right side of the road, struck a small tree, then its passenger side wheels went up onto a ledge embankment, forcing the car to flip onto its roof. It then slid on its roof across the road into the southbound lane.

In interviewing the driver, police determined no alcohol was involved. He explained he had been on his cell phone at the time of the accident.

He was summonsed on charges of operating to endanger, speeding and operating outside marked lanes.

Hit & run

Police have no witnesses or suspect in an apparent hit and run accident last week. The victim reported that his 2006 Chrysler, which was parked on the southbound side of Ripley Road near the Post Office was struck sometime overnight June 13-14.

The driver's side mirror was smashed and there was a crease and dent on the driver's side door.

Police officers looked for evidence at the scene and knocked on doors seeking any witnesses. Anyone with information should contact the police at 781-383-1055.

Not road rage

Police said a reported road rage incident last week turned out to be a son who was following his father to the doctor's office. The incident occurred northbound on Route 3A just past the lights at Beechwood where the lanes narrow from two to one.

Chief Hussey said the son, in an apparent effort to stay behind his father's car, did not merge giving the impression to the caller that it was a road rage situation.

Police talked to the son and flushed out the situation, Hussey said. He was going to the doctor's and did not know where it was, so he was following his father who was planning to show him and keep going, hence the need for two cars.

Masked man

After investigating a report about a man "wearing a gas mask" while returning DVDs to the drop box at Blockbuster, police think the man was in fact wearing a medical mask because he has allergies.

The call came via Scituate police last Friday (June 15) about a man who fled after having just dropped something into the drop box; he was wearing a gas mask, the caller reported.

Cohasset police said a check of Blockbuster showed nothing unusual and the man's family had a Blockbuster account.

Chief Hussey said in this day and age anyone wearing a mask, even a medical one, can cause alarm.

Another bike down

A woman crashed her bicycle while trying to ride across the tracks at North Main Street near the golf club last week.

There have been multiple accidents at this location because of the angle of the tracks. Signs are posted, but that is not enough, Chief Hussey said. The woman involved in this accident was headed toward Hingham; she fell hard, hitting her head and knee, and had to be transported to the hospital. She was wearing a helmet, police said.

"This area needs to be addressed as soon as possible," Hussey said. "We hope that the MBTA can come up with a solution." Hussey said something needs to be done so that bicyclists cross the tracks at a right angle, which is the case, at most grade crossings. At North Main the tracks are not perpendicular to the road.

Blood drive

The Knights of Columbus and the American Red Cross will hold a blood drive from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., Saturday, June 30, at Knights of Columbus Hall, 440 Nantasket Ave., Hull. Nearly 2,000 units of blood are needed each day to help those in need in the local community. It only takes about an hour of time and one small pinch to become a hero to someone in need.

Anyone 17 years of age or older, weighing 110 pounds or more and feeling in good health may be eligible to give blood. For information call 800-448-3543 or visit newenglandblood.org.

DA Keating Joins Partners in Prevention

District Attorney William R. Keating recently announced his affiliation with Partners in Prevention, a program of the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association. The Partners in Prevention program seeks to enhance the health and wellness of youth in Cohasset and throughout the Commonwealth. It does so by providing schools, parents, students, and professionals who work with youth with accurate information on a range of issues in order to promote healthy lifestyles among adolescents.

Among the resources provided by Partners in Prevention is a list of speakers on various topics including substance abuse, eating disorders, drunk driving, sportsmanship and dating violence. In addition, the organization sponsors wellness workshops throughout the year, which inform educators of adolescent health issues.

District Attorney Keating's staff has been working on many of these issues in Norfolk County schools, including Cohasset Public Schools, where high school students recently attended the play "Consent," developed by the Norfolk District Attorney's office to illustrate the problem of sexual assaults associated with alcohol and teen parties.

The DA's programs will be augmented through the resources collected under the Partners in Prevention umbrella. Along with other District Attorneys, Partners in Prevention counts among its members the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Massachusetts Brain Injury Association, Mothers Against Drunk Driving and Partnership for Drug Free America.

Eighth-graders and high school sports

Policy floated to include them in CHS athletics

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"This is a way for us to get younger kids interested in athletics."
— Athletic Director Ron Ford

Cohasset is a small high school but it has plentiful athletic talent. Given that Athletic Director Ron Ford would like to see eighth graders be offered the chance to participate in high school athletics. On Wednesday night, Ford came before the School Committee looking for approval of a grade-eight athletic policy. As a whole the committee had reservations about implementing the policy as it was.

As presented, Ford outlined the sports where eighth graders could participate either on junior varsity or varsity squads. Sports where there was extensive physical contact and helmets were worn (football, ice hockey and boys lacrosse) would not be appropriate for eighth graders, he said. The policy allowed eighth grade participation on varsity teams, which do not have junior varsity programs. Eighth graders had the opportunity to be moved up to varsity in some cases, if parents, coaches and Athletic Director were in agreement.

"This is a way for us to get younger kids interested in athletics," said Ford.

School Committee Member Lucia Flibotte said the policy was like "opening Pandora's box." She was concerned eighth grade participation may discourage the average high school athlete from trying out for the team.

"I feel bad for the junior or senior who will get displaced from a team," she said, "sports should be for everybody" although not everyone could be a star athlete. She feared high school students would simply decide not to try out for a team because they knew there was possibility an eighth grader could displace them.

Adrienne MacCarthy, member of the School Committee, did not have an issue with eighth graders being a part of a junior varsity team, particularly if a team needed to be filled out, but she did not want the policy to "sour some of the opportunities students think they have."

"I am not comfortable with any eighth grader bumping a high school student off a team," MacCarthy said.

Ideas were floated to see how the committee could best change the policy to address their concerns. Middle High-School principal Joel Antolini proposed an adding to the policy "no eighth grader would displace a high school athlete." MacCarthy recommended a separate policy about using eighth graders to fill out teams, who were struggling to make a roster. Chairman Rick Flynn suggested Ford come to the School Committee on a case-by-case basis if a team was looking short on numbers.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh once shared in the committee's concerns, however, in past experience in another school district she found including eighth graders in high school athletics turned out to be very successful.

"I've only seen good as a result of it," Walsh said getting eighth graders involved in athletics early on allowed talented students to develop to their full potential and worked to enhance school spirit and community. Ford agreed, by incorporating eighth graders in the high school program it might prevent students from leaving the district for private schools.

The committee determined more time and thought was needed to come to a consensus on the issue.

"One way or another we need a policy," said Ford. The School Committee will revisit the item at their next meeting on Monday, July 23 meeting.

MIAA enacts more stringent rules

High school athletes will now face more stringent rules regarding the use of illegal substances. For the upcoming academic year, the MIAA has revised its "chemical health rule" in its handbook to extend the period athletes could be subject to chemical health penalties (if found guilty) from the first allowable day in of fall practice (typically the third week in August) through the end of the academic year or final athletic competition of the year, whichever is later.

Athletic Director Ron Ford informed the School Committee of this significant change in the MIAA rules on Wednesday night. Formerly the MIAA athletes were simply subject to penalties if they were found with illegal substances or under the influence during the athlete's sport season.

"Broadening this window from 'in season' to the entire academic year reflects that chemical health of our students is not simply a seasonal concern," reads the MIAA rule change posted on its website. The rule change takes effect on July 1, 2007 and will be in place at least until June 30, 2009 when the MIAA rules are revisited.

The penalties if athletes are found to have used an illegal substance the athlete is suspended from 25 percent of the season's games, on the first offense, the penalty carries over from season to season. On the second offense, the penalty is suspension for 60 percent of games.

"Enforcement of the rule is going to be a major problem," said Ford, who was also disappointed with the timing of the rule change — after school and athletics have finished for the year.

The School Committee voted 4-0 (member Alfred Slanetz was not present) to include this rule change as an addendum to the Student Handbook.

"It promotes zero tolerance at all times, just another deterrent for the students," said School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy.

Cohasset Carillon Recitals to begin

The first program on June 24 will be performed by Tiffany Ng, a student at the University of Rochester in New York.

The 83rd annual series of summer Carillon Recitals will be given on the 57-bell carillon in the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church,, on eight successive Sunday evenings from 6 to 7, beginning June 24 and continuing through Aug. 12. The public is invited to attend, and may bring lawn chairs, blankets and picnic suppers to Cohasset Common or to the church courtyard on Highland Avenue extension. Printed programs will be available in both locations. The concerts will take place rain or shine, and in case of bad weather, people may listen from parked cars. The hour-long concerts are free of charge. After each program the public is invited to tour the tower, view a demonstration of the instrument and play a tune on the bells if they wish.

The first program on June 24 will be performed by Tiffany Ng, a student at the University of Rochester in New York. Ng will play a varied program including arrangements, transcriptions of works by Ravel, Schubert, Beethoven and Hoagy Carmichael, and original carillon compositions by Flor Peeters, Peter Vermeersch, Geert D'hollander, Paul Coleman, Gary White and Emelien Allard.

For more information, call St. Stephen's Church at 781-383-1083; Sally Slade Warner at 978-475-2599; or Mary Kennedy, assistant carillonneur at 781-383-9599.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

HAPPY SUMMER

Happy Summer Cohasset, it is now official. Last weekend was so wonderful here in town with the Relay For Life, Festival on The Common and all of the graduation and end of year parties. Enjoy the summer, take advantage of all those small moments and have safe and happy times for all. Send in news, celebration info and more.

ASP TRIP

A group of teens and adult advisors leave tomorrow morning at 6 am from St. Anthony's parking lot for Virginia with Cohasset Appalachia Service Project. They will be gone for a week helping to build, repair and make the lives of people in the Virginia area a bit better. This group is amazing and the stories that they have when they come home are truly inspiring. Come and say good-bye if you are awake!

RAFFLE RESULTS

The Cohasset Youth Softball and Baseball Association would like to thank all of its players, parents, friends and families for participating in the 2007 Calendar Card Fundraiser. The daily drawings began on June 1st and continue through June 30th with a $1000 prize. So far, many Cohasset residents have won and others from as far away as Indiana! The top three players who sold the most calendar cards and won prizes themselves are first place, Trevor Tedeschi; second place Harrison Martin; and third place Will Schwartz. Trevor sold 55 cards and won $300, Harrison sold $39 and won $200 and Will sold 38 cards and won $100. Thank you to all for making this fundraiser a great success. For daily winning results, check out the website at www.CYBSA.net.

TRANSFER SCHOLAR

Lesley College announces that Deirdre D. Bigley of Cohasset has been selected as a Transfer Scholar. Recipients of the Transfer Scholarship have demonstrated academic excellence at their previous collegiate institutions and displayed a strong commitment to their chosen field of study. Deirdre will begin her study at Lesley in the fall of 2007.

HONORS GRAD

Scott Duncan Faber was awarded a Bachelor of Arts degree from Connecticut College at the 89th commencement ceremony on May 20, 2007. Scott was awarded a degree in Government and History with honors, and graduated Cum Laude.

Congratulations to you and good luck in your future.

LASELL COLLEGE

Michelle Lemaire of Cohasset made Lasell College's spring 2007 dean's list. A member of the Class of 2010, Michelle is majoring in fashion and retail merchandising. This was great news.

COOL RIDE

COURTESY PHOTO

Deer Hill students Emmy McGoldrick, Emma Davis, Carly Gunderson, Charlotte Allard and Allie O'Callaghan stand on the front bumper of Engine No. 1. The girls were the lucky recipients of the "Ride the Fire Truck to School" auction item donated by the Cohasset Fire Department at the recent benefit hosted by the Cohasset Education Foundation.

THAYER HONORS

The following Cohasset students at Thayer Academy were recognized for their hard efforts recently. Christian W. Allard, in grade 7, earned Honors for Academic Achievement and Honors for Effort. Michelle Blanken, in grade 6, earned Honors for Academic Achievement. Claire E. Oswald, in grade 7, earned Honors for Academic Achievement and Honors for Effort. Emma Quigley, in grade 8, earned Honors for Academic Achievement and Honors for Effort. Derek A. Youngman, in grade 8, earned Honors for Academic Achievement and Honors for Effort. Your families are all so proud of your work.

SYRACUSE STANDOUTS

Congratulations go out to James Bertovich, a senior majoring in industrial design and Andrew Jerz, a junior majoring in illustration, at the College of Visual and Performing Arts at Syracuse University. Both Cohasset residents were named to the 2007 Spring Semester dean's list. Super work gentlemen.

LAUNCH PARTY

All adult members, parents of sailors, and friends are invited to the lobster feast and auction to benefit the Sailing Club, which will be held from 6 to 11 p.m., Saturday July 7, at the club, rain or shine. Dinner will be served from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Tickets cost $50 and are available by phoning Joyce Driscoll at 781-383-0122 or Claudia McKeon at 781-383-6125.

Donations for auction items are welcome. To donate call Jim Porter at 781-383-2029.

That is it for this week. Get me all of your news and information no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

HOLLY HILL

Films on the Farm series to begin June 27

Holly Hill Farm, 236 Jerusalem Road, will present Films on the Farm, a series of films about food and agriculture screened outside on the side of the Tomato Barn. Get a sitter, bring a picnic and lawn chairs and come check out these award winning films. Donations accepted to benefit Friends of Holly Hill Farm. Screenings begin at 8 p.m. There will be some concession stands available, including a visit from Nona's ice cream truck.

June 27: "The Future of Food" – There is a revolution happening in the farm fields and on the dinner tables of America, a revolution that is transforming the very nature of the food people eat. This documentary explores the truth behind the unlabeled, patented, genetically engineered foods that have quietly filled grocery store shelves for the past decade. It also examines the complex web of market and political forces that are changing what people eat as multi-national corporations seek to control the world's food system. Directed by Deborah Koons Garcia.

July 25: "King Corn" – In "King Corn," Ian Cheney and Curt Ellis, best friends from college on the West Coast, move to the heartland to learn where food comes from. With the help of skeptical neighbors, genetically-modified seeds, nitrogen fertilizers and powerful herbicides, they plan to grow a bumper crop of America's most productive, most subsidized grain on one acre of Iowa soil. But when they try to follow their pile of corn into the food system, what they find raises troubling questions about how people eat and farm. Directed by Aaron Woolf.

Aug. 22 double feature: "Beyond Organic: The Vision of Fairview Gardens" – "Beyond Organic" tells the story of Fairview Gardens and its long battle to survive in the face of rapid suburban development. It explores the efforts of Michael Ableman and his staff to diversify the farm, open it to educational programs for thousands of people – especially schoolchildren – and defend it against angry neighbors, hostile public officials and developers eager to re-zone the land for condominiums. Produced by PBS film maker John de Graaf and narrated by Meryl Streep.

"My Father's Garden" – An emotionally charged documentary about the use and misuse of technology on the American farm. In less than 50 years, the face of agriculture has been transformed by synthetic chemicals that have had a serious impact on the environment and on the health of farm families. This film tells the story of two farmers, different in all details, yet united by their common goal of producing healthy food. One of the farmers is the father of the filmmaker. Herbert Smith was a hero of his age: dedicated, innovative, a champion of the new miracle sprays of the 50s. His fate is the heart of this film. The other, Fred Kirschenmann of North Dakota, is a hero for our age. Faced with a shattered economy and the devastating environmental effects of conventional chemical farming, Kirschenmann steered his land through the transition to organic farming. Twenty years later, the Kirschenmann farm is a thriving testament to ingenuity, hard work and an understanding of nature. Directed by Miranda Smith, premiered at Sundance.

Beekeeping workshop is July 21

Friends of Holly Hill Farm, based at Holly Hill Farm, 236 Jerusalem Road, is hosting a beekeeping workshop at 3 p.m., on Saturday July 21. The Basics of Beekeeping workshop for adults and families is open to anyone age 8 and older. Kids must be accompanied by an adult.

Cost is $18 for adults, $8 for children; or $15 adults, $5 kids, for members of Friends of Holly Hill Farm Inc. All proceeds will benefit Friends of Holly Hill Farm. Register in advance by email to hollyhillfarmer@yahoo.com or call 781-383-1455. The workshop is sponsored by Friends of Holly Hill Farm Inc., the non-profit branch of the farm.

"I am very pleased to be here at Linden Ponds. I enjoy living here. There is nothing not to like."

—Mary Murphy, moved from Scituate

Like many, Mary Murphy had lived in her Scituate house for a long time before moving to Florida. But being away from friends and family was bothersome to Mary. After taking a closer look at Linden Ponds, she decided it might be the best of both worlds. "I get to do everything here, and I am close to my daughter who lives in Scituate. I certainly didn't want another house to try to keep up with," says Mary.

TODAY'S MORTGAGE MARKET

by Jim Sweeney

Keeping the Home Equity Loan vs One Mortgage

The strategy of purchasing a home with two mortgages to avoid PMI or using the low prime rate to finance large home improvements has resulted in many large balance home equity loans. For many homeowners, the increase in the prime rate signals a time to reevaluate the strategy that once worked so well. As the monthly payment on your Home Equity Loan increases, when does it make sense to consolidate the mortgages? This is a frequent question of my clients, who have low 1st Mortgage rates and higher Equity Loan rates.

One thing to consider is what the average rate on your total mortgage balances is and compare it to the rate of a new mortgage. The figures for a 1st mortgage of $100,000 at 5.5% and a Home Equity Loan of $200,000 at 8.00% work like this. 100 X 5.5 = 550 & 200 X 8.0 = 1600. Next: 550 + 1600 = 2150/300 equals an average mortgage rate of 7.166% which could be reduced to 6.5% with a new no closing cost mortgage or to as low as 5.75%.

There are a few other considerations to keep in mind. One of them is that the Home Equity Loan may have interest only payments and a standard mortgage will have a principal and interest payment so the lower rate might not mean a large monthly payment reduction. The amount of the 1st mortgage balance in relation to the Home Equity Loan balance and current rates could change my advice for each situation. It only takes a few moments to calculate the figures and I will be glad to help you through the process over the phone.

Providing comfort to African children

Knitters at Cohasset shop create 700 dolls so far

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Her pictures showed the children holding the dolls high in the air, some cradling them like an infant, and others clutching them close.

At six-inches tall, the hundreds of colorful, knitted dolls that have taken up temporary residence at The Creative Stitch on King St (3A), don't seem like they could make an impact halfway around the world. But, each one of them will offer a piece of comfort and joy to the recipients: kids in Africa whose families have been affected by AIDS.

The "duduza," or comfort, dolls are made from yarn scraps and filled with polyester stuffing, so there is little or no cost. The pattern is simple making it a good beginner project and an easy one for the experienced. The knitting of the duduza dolls is part of a grassroots effort in support of a Vermont-based organization, CHABHA (Children Affected by HIV/AIDS).

CHABHA is a non-profit organization founded in 2002, whose mission is to raise awareness in the US about the plight of children in Africa and to support community-based projects in Namibia, South Africa and Rwanda. They have two requirements when choosing projects to provide funding to, says CHABHA board member Jane Davis. First, the projects need to aid children and families affected by the HIV/AIDS virus. Second, the initiatives need to be started in the African countries and run by the people who live there.

Davis recently returned from a trip to Rwanda and South Africa where she and CHABHA founder, Susanna Grannis, distributed four suitcases full of dolls to HIV/AIDS affected children. Most of the children she encountered have been orphaned by HIV/AIDS. Many of them suffered from the disease themselves. She met with the Friday morning knitting class at The Creative Stitch to share her experience, photos and insight. The informal discussion let local knitters who have contributed to the project know how much their effort means.

Despite the hardships the children face on daily basis, Davis said there is "still so much hope and so much joy" in the children. Upon receiving the dolls, some of the children would immediately bring them close to their heart.

"They can't eat a doll but they still need comfort," she said. She explained how in their short lives the children have seen more than their share of suffering, many living through the Rwandan genocide while others have lost their parents to AIDS.

Her pictures showed the children holding the dolls high in the air, some cradling them like an infant, and others clutching them close. Some knitters were able to pick out their own handmade dolls in the pictures making their efforts come full circle.

On this trip, the dolls were distributed to CHABHA supported organizations in both Rwanda and South African. The Rwandan organizations, Agape (or "love"), AJESOV (an acronym for Association of Volunteer Youth Helping Orphans Affected), hold weekly meetings with hundreds of kids. They gather each weekend to provide support and learn traditional songs and dance. Both organizations strive to provide for education, health care and food for struggling children.

Another Rwandan organization, Amahoro (or "peace"), was started by eight young people in their late teens. The founders has been orphaned by genocide and realized there were more kids, even younger than themselves, heading households. CHABHA gave them a stock of dolls to distribute during Amohoro's regular home visits.

"The whole idea of comfort is so appealing," said Davis, "[on a prior trip to Africa] I saw one toy in two weeks."

The duduza doll initiative has grown tremendously in the last year. On their last visit, CHABHA representatives arrived with 215 dolls and were confronted with a thousand children who each wanted one of their own. They vowed to return with more dolls.

Here in Cohasset, interest and participation in the making of the duduza dolls has spanned generations. Grandmothers, parents and high school students have contributed to the project. No one can resist the "cuteness" of the small, brightly colored dolls. Each doll is given a distinct personality, thanks for the creativity of the knitter.

"The dolls are infectious," said Staci Gilbert, a member of the Friday morning knitting class.

Kristen Ross, owner of the Creative Stitch, has over 700 dolls currently in boxes, baskets and bags in her store. She will continue to collect the dolls until she's told there is no longer a need.

Knitters who would like to participate in this grassroots effort can pick up a pattern and instructions at The Creative Stitch located at 152 King St. Instructions are also available www.creativestitchonline.com.

For more information on CHABHA, visit www.chabha.org

Cohasset Village vision comes into focus facilities as some of the positive aspects of the district. Challenges included customer parking, poor visibility from Route 3A (lack of signage) and limited traffic flow in the village.

The issues with parking were discussed at length. Jennings' team totaled up a 571 parking spaces in the downtown area, 272 were public and 299 were deemed private spaces. Jon Ford, a civil engineer from Morris Beacon Design working with Jennings, wanted to know about the quality of parking in the village. Members of the audience said there was not enough parking and it was not easy to get in and out of spaces.

"In order to add more spaces the most reasonable solution is on the one acre of town land" that runs alongside the train tracks behind the Red Lion Inn and Teen Center, said Jennings. To create a parking area, the piece of land consisting largely of ledge would necessitate blasting and cost about $600,000. The result would be between 40 to 50 additional spaces.

State-deemed "affordable units" are not found in the village district, however, it seemed all agreed the apartments there were as affordable as Cohasset gets.

"It wouldn't be inappropriate for the town to see the village as an affordable place to live," said Peter Brown, Chairman of the Economic Development Committee. Tom Callahan, Chairman of the Housing Partnership Committee, said his committee was not obsessing over the 40B unit count in the village, instead they wanted to look at a "Cohasset definition of affordable" by seeking out moderate priced housing.

"I'd like to see the village take a step up to the next level of charm. People come from all over, Cohasset is a destination spot."
— Darilynn Evans, owner of Darilynn's

Wayne Sawchuk, owner of 35-39 South Main St., said in order to have the needed housing units in the village, the town needs to allow new construction and make renovations easier. He stressed a change in the 40,000-square-foot requirement in the village zoning bylaws prohibits adding multi-family dwellings in the downtown business district on lots less than that size needs to be proposed by the fall Town Meeting.

Keeping the charming character of the village is a top priority for Jennings and his team, one that goes hand in hand with maintaining a viable business district.

"I'd like to see the village take a step up to the next level of charm. People come from all over, Cohasset is a destination spot," said Darilynn Evans, owner of the gift store Darilynn's. She suggested something be done to unify the area, whether it be planters or banners, "it shouldn't be only up to the merchants."

Westcott proposed a village merchant organization could be formed to address issues like Evans and create a unifying look for the village.

Many property owners discussed specific plans for their property in the next few years, most included a residential element. Sawchuk briefly described his plans as having "two fronts," one facing South Main Street and the other facing the town parking lot. His plans include second and third floor housing with commercial space on the first floor. A proposed walkway connecting the town lot and the main street was just what the village needs, said Jennings.

For those properties on Ripley Road, near the train, Epiphany Design owner also suggested sprucing up the rear of the buildings to create a pleasant view for commuters. Others in attendance suggested groups of property owners get together to discuss possible improvements in an area that would affect positively the individual properties and the village as a whole.

"Through this process current ideas can be advanced forward and new ideas can come forward," said Jennings, who hopes the public involvement with the project will continue through out the summer.

In conjunction with this initiative, the town, with the help of Concord Square, is seeking a Priority Development Fund grant from the Department of Housing and Community Development. If awarded, the grant funds would allow the town to seek the services of architectural design firm. The retention of an architectural firm would enable the production of high quality, design guidelines and provide original renderings of the village. An architect will be able to make recommendations for specific design guidelines, setbacks and rooflines in the village. The town has heard favorable reviews for the application and expects to hear back on the grant award in the near future.

Jennings and his team will give the Planning Board periodic updates over the next month as they research and have new information. Another large public meeting will be scheduled during the week of July 23.

Neighbors rocked by look of new guardrail determined to be in a historic district and the MBTA were directed to use dark colored fence or other fixtures so that they would not visually detract from the historic setting. The MBTA was subsequently permitted to use the Corten steel guardrails.

Although Armstrong did not live in her current home on Rocky Lane when the Section 106 hearings took place, she says many of her neighbors participated. Now, they are asking "what was the point of the hearings if the guardrails were not going to be aesthetically pleasing?"

"We feel we've been let down by the town and the MBTA," says Armstrong.

Part of the problem, in Armstrong's eyes, is the juxtaposition of the modern materials utilized for the bridge and the more "antique" looking guardrail.

"The structure of the bridge is quite modern. There's no unity, no cohesiveness between the two materials," explains Armstrong. While the entrance to Rocky Lane abuts the historic district, the lane itself and bridge construction were not subject to the same historic district requirements.

The bridge was built with gray concrete and black fencing and railing creating a "non-harmonious result," as Tom Gruber, Greenbush liaison, stated in his letter to representatives at Army Corps of Engineers and the Massachusetts Historical Commission (it was under the authority of these agencies that resulted in the use of Corten steel in historic districts) concerning the issue.

"In this suburban area we have a bridge with black fencing and railings connecting to a rust-orange Corten guardrail on either side of the bridge," wrote Gruber, "the residents have all objected strongly to the color of the Corten guard rail as not fitting aesthetically with the black fencing and bridge railing as well as the neighborhood setting."

"We have this huge guardrail — it's bigger than what you see on the highway," says Armstrong, who also humorously notes the abundance of five road signs on the short bridge to quiet Rocky Lane, "there are three stop signs and two signs that warn you a stop sign is ahead!"

The issue is currently at a high pitch because the Corten guardrails were placed incorrectly and will need to be moved to make room for a sidewalk. As the MBTA construction begins to wrap up with service beginning in the fall, the residents and the town see this as an opportunity as a one-time chance to correct the problem.

"The Greenbush Project has informed us that since the use of the Corten guardrail in historic areas was a project-wide decision, they are unwilling to make the change to another style on a case-by-case basis," states Town Manager Bill Griffin's letter to State Representative Garrett Bradley on the issue. However, the town is waiting to hear back from the Massachusetts Historical Commission and the Army Corps.

Armstrong and the other residents would like to see the guardrails replaced (ideally) with guardrails constructed from heavy wood timbers. If that's not possible, "black guardrails to match everything on the bridge."

"We've really dealt with a lot, everybody [on Rocky Lane] is on the same page," says Armstrong.

thank you!

As the school year comes to a close, the Cohasset Education Foundation would like to thank everyone in the community for their extraordinary support for our kids, our town, our future!

As of June 2007, the CEF has raised over $410,000 in contributions and pledges. Your contributions to the Project Fund have made five grant awards possible during the 2006-2007 school year:

- $25,000 for the Osgood Computer Lab (K-2)
- $7,000 for the Safari Montage Video System (K-12)
- $7,000 for a Promethean White Board (3-5)
- $2,700 for the Center for Student Coastal Research and Environmental Research Projects (9-12)
- $37,500 partnered with the Cohasset PSO to complete the Middle School Engineering Lab (6-8).

The CEF currently has raised over $165,000 for its endowment fund, which will ensure the long term health and support of the Cohasset schools.

None of this initial or continued success would be possible without the support of the local community. For more information about the CEF and how you can become involved, please visit our web site at www.cohasseteducation.org. and thank you!

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Where you live

Have you ever wondered why the brick on Marshfield High School does not match? We think about that every time we take Route 3A from the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square and pass by MHS on our way to our Marshfield headquarters on Enterprise Drive on production days.

We are not sure what the thinking was in Marshfield when that town added onto its high school and decided not to match the brick. There could be some valid reasons such as cost and availability of the old brick. But, sadly, the two parts of the high school – old and new – do not match, leaving passersby like us wondering why.

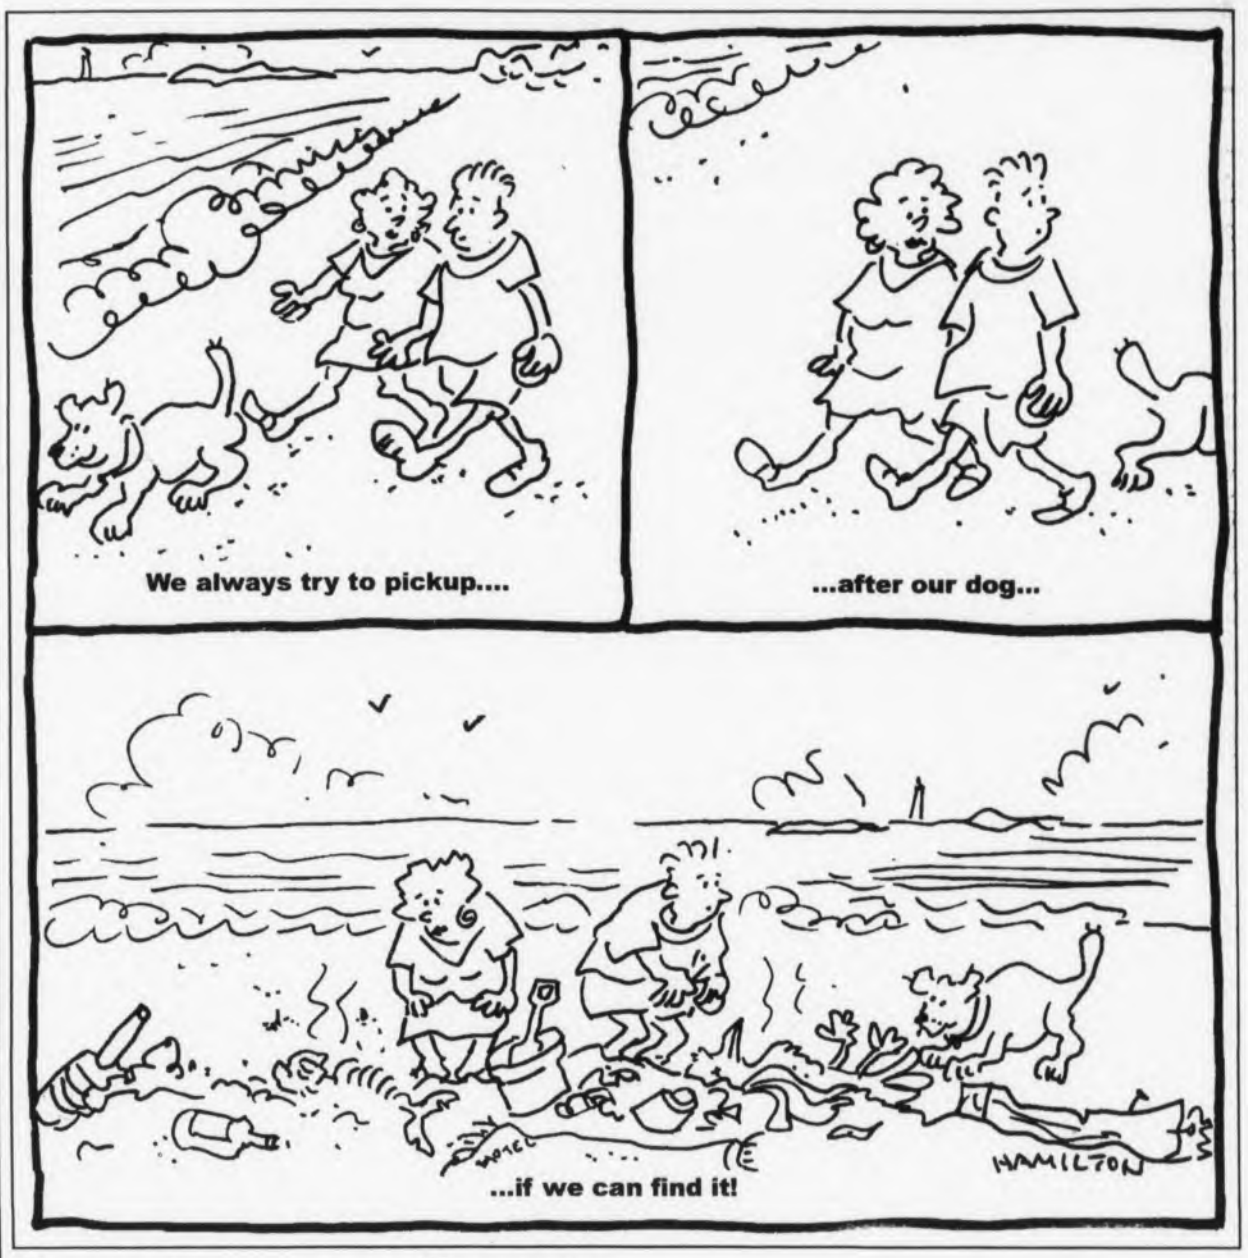
Here in Cohasset on Rocky Lane a guardrail has been installed on the new bridge that just does not "fit."

Rocky Lane residents realized this early on and are taking steps to make sure their voices are heard and the guardrail is changed before it becomes a permanent part of the landscape.

Although the old English proverb "A man's home is his castle" has nothing to do with property values and neighborhoods – if it were coined today, it could have that interpretation.

There is little in life that is as valuable as one's home and neighborhood. We all want safe places to live and raise our families. Where and how we live is part of our value system and the heart of the "American dream." That is why we care so much when something interferes with that security and serenity. And yes, "looks" matter. Cohasset would not be the place that it is if no one cared about appearances.

On Rocky Lane, a balance needed to be struck between aesthetics and safety. No one is arguing about the need for the guardrail but no one wants to live with an "eyesore". The rust-orange steel guardrails have become just that and are a blot on the North Main Street landscape.



Part of the problem, the neighbors explain, is the juxtaposition of the modern materials used for the bridge – gray concrete and black fencing — and the "antique-looking" guardrail.

The good news is there could be a window of opportunity here to make things right. The rust-orange guardrails were placed incorrectly and have to be moved to make room for a sidewalk.

The MBTA has said the Corten guardrails were a project-wide decision and is unwilling to make a change, according to Town Manager Bill Griffin, who has written to state Rep. Garrett Bradley on the issue. The town is also waiting to hear back from the Massachusetts Historical Commission and the Army Corps of Engineers.

We hope the issue can be resolved and "quieter" guardrails installed that do not look out-of-place.

Otherwise, passersby will be scratching their heads for years to come and wondering "why did they do that?"

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Many to thank for spectacular Arts Festival!

TO THE EDITOR:

What a wonderful Arts Festival weekend! On behalf of the South Shore Art Center, we'd like to thank the many South Shore residents and businesses who supported our 52nd annual Arts Festival.

Thanks to our Gold Sponsors: Abbott Homes and BMW Gallery Norwell; Silver Sponsors: Dean & Hamilton Realtors and Image Resolutions; Bronze Sponsors Tanglewood, The Hingham Group and South Shore Music Circus; KidsTent Sponsors: Adrian Morris Salon and the Local Cultural Councils of Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth; and many other businesses, including Artifacts, Atlantic Bagel, Bose Corporation, Boston Private Bank & Trust, Building #19 Foundation, Cohasset Collision Center, Cohasset Harbor Marina, Coldwell Banker, Conway Insurance Agency, Goodwin Graphics, Graham Waste Services, Hassan Sign Company, Hingham Institution for Savings, L.P. Carpenter Interiors, members of the SSAC Board of Advisors and Directors, Pilgrim Bank, Shaw Glass Company, Inc., Smith Print, Sovereign Bank and Westongraphics.

We are grateful for the support of the Plymouth County Development Council, the local cultural councils of Abington, Braintree, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland, and, our friends at the Cohasset Cultural Council who understand the importance of the arts in shaping a community. The cultural councils are all local agencies supported by the Mass Cultural Council, a state agency.

A very special debt of gratitude is owed to the neighbors of the Common who are inconvenienced by the traffic and the crowds and to all at the Town Hall, DPW and Police and Fire Department who help to make our job a bit easier. Our volunteers are fabulous and truly hold things together during the weekend and we very much appreciate their being a part of the Arts Festival.

Our exhibiting artists and artisans consistently regard the Arts Festival as their favorite show—nice people, supportive customers, and a most beautiful setting. The Art Center relies on the Arts Festival as its major fundraiser each year and we sincerely appreciate being able to host the event on the Common.

Stay tuned for triathlon updates

TO THE EDITOR:

On Sunday morning of July 8th, Cohasset will welcome more than 900 athletes, volunteers, and spectators to the 1st annual Cohasset Sprint Triathlon. This event is particularly important because 100 percent of the proceeds will go directly to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation. As Event Director of the race, I have been overwelmed by the incredible support from the town and triathletes across the Boston metro area. It's obvious that Cohasset and the charity we support are a big draw!

Please be on the lookout in the next edition or two of the Mariner, as you will see specific details about the course, the parking, and road closures during the race. For additional information about the race or if you are interested in volunteering please see the event website at: www.cohassettri.com

Thank you in advance for your support!

Event Director

Former Police Chief named Veterans Agent

Cohasset veterans can be rest assured they have a place to go when in need of assistance. This week, Town Manager Bill Griffin announced the appointment of former Police Chief Robert W. Jackson to be the Cohasset's Director of Veteran's Services.

Jackson follows in the footsteps of the late Mary Jeanette Murray, Cohasset's longtime state representative, who served as veteran's agent in 2006. Murray passed away in October at the age of 81.

A decorated Vietnam veteran, Jackson served in the U.S. Navy for over two decades, eventually becoming a commanding officer. He joined the Cohasset police force in 1978 and rose to the rank of Police Chief in 2002. He holds a bachelor of arts degree in political science and a bachelor of science degree in law enforcement.

"I was impressed with Bob's commitment to serve the needs of Cohasset veterans and to be available on an as needed basis to provide them guidance," said Griffin, who also noted Jackson was "well-respected among the veterans in the community."

The annual stipend for the part-time position is $1,600.

Jackson plans to consult with the Scituate veterans' agent to come up to speed on veterans' services issues and will also reach out to the state veterans service department for guidance, Griffin said. In addition, Jackson will attend the first annual V-8 Veterans Summit held in Hingham on Monday, June 25.

In accordance to the Town Manager Act, the Board of Selectmen had 15 days to reject Griffin's appointment, however, the Selectmen unanimously waived that right on Monday night.

GAR Hall site of historic summit

On Monday, June 25 representatives from local veterans organizations will join municipal, state, and federal legislators for the first annual "V-8 Veterans Summit" at GAR Hall, 358 Main St., in Hingham. The summit will run from 6 to 9pm and will include representatives from the eight-town, Plymouth-Norfolk Senatorial District.

The purpose of the summit is to ensure that all veterans service officers and organizations are aware of the services available to returning veterans from the Global War on Terrorism, to discuss what additional services may be needed to better support deployed servicemembers and to enhance communication with elected officials.

Elm St. work not part of Festival

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Revitalization moves on – The old adage of "Be careful what you wish for..." is very true. As we mentioned in previous articles, we are in the process of finishing up the Revitalization project, quickly, we had hoped. However, sometimes things move too fast. Last Thursday at the end of the day we received an email from the contractor that they were scheduled to scrape the old asphalt from Brook and Elm streets on Saturday. What could be worse than having a contractor in Town during the Arts Festival? So, we immediately called the contractor and said no dice. Friday morning during our 6 a.m. morning constitutional walk, we ran into the contractor who said they were going to do the work on that same day, last Friday, June 15. Well, at least Friday was better than Saturday. We told the contractor that they could go ahead as long as they were completed by early afternoon. At 5:30 p.m. they were still at it, finally finishing about 6 p.m. When all was said and done it was a long day for the contractor, but they were pretty much out of the way for the Arts Festival. And, lo and behold this Monday, June 18th both streets were graded and the base coat of asphalt was put into place. What a dramatic change from Friday to Monday! We do appreciate everyone putting up with the dust over the past weekend.

By the way, we don't know if you noticed, but the two new lilac trees we added last year in the brick area at the corner of Main and Elm streets really look spectacular. They bloomed just in time for the Arts Festival. Not a bad touch for the center of the Village.

Forest Avenue sidewalk and paving – Most of the ledge has been removed from the sidewalk areas along Forest Avenue. The major knob of ledge remaining is at the Main Street end of Forest Avenue has yet to be dealt with. Discussions are underway to determine the best way to remove this large knob of stone. Possibly, blasting may be our only choice. We are waiting to hear from the contractor. Grading of the new sidewalk surface has now begun. Coordination meetings are underway with the sidewalk construction contractors as well as the contractors working on street construction to synchronize the various tasks so that this large project can be accomplished as efficiently as possible.

What a difference a day makes! Elm Street in the Village is now paved.

New sidewalk on Border Street.

What could be worse than having a contractor in Town during the Arts Festival? So, we immediately called the contractor and said no dice.

Ledge removed across from Wheelwright Park.

MBTA stuff – CBB continues to work in the vicinity of the station, on King Street and in the Town Parking Lot. They have pretty much removed the ledge that must be removed adjacent to the Teen Center. The next step will be paving this new parking area. At the same time the MBTA will be adding a sidewalk along Pleasant St. at the Pleasant St. edge of the Town Parking Lot. This sidewalk will allow safe passage at the Depot Court / Pleasant Street intersection near the temporary jersey barriers located there now. After the sidewalk is completed, the jersey barriers will be removed.

The MBTA continues to rework the drainage at Lower King Street and the tracks. The MBTA has also added new drainage at the entrance to Woodside Cemetery to eliminate the water that currently puddles there.

We continue to build a "Punch List" of the smaller items that need attention before the MBTA can call the project finished. The MBTA assures us that these items will receive their attention after their "major" items are complete.

Harbor wall – The contractor laid the new asphalt sidewalk between the boat yard and Atlantica on this past Tuesday. As you can see from the photo, it looks quite a bit different than before.

The new fence that will separate the walkway from the harbor is being fabricated and will be installed as soon as possible.

All hail the weekend warrior

TALES FROM THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

Last week I received an email about tryouts for a women's soccer league. My fingers flew to my keyboard: "what time, where, and when are the games?" But a twinge in my right knee reminded me that I only lasted four games this winter before a collision sidelined me for the entire spring season. Before that, it was numerous ankle injuries to which my orthopedic surgeon would shake his head and say, "I don't know how you play soccer, let alone wear high heels with these ankles." (I had to confess I was willing to sacrifice the latter, if it meant I could still play the former.)

Thus, it was with a heavy heart that I changed my reply to, "Thanks, but I'm going to pass." However, it brought to mind a blog posting I'd written a few years ago. Back then, soccer was the one thing that kept me going when times were really tough. So, I'd like to dedicate the following to all my fellow "Weekend Warriors." May we all age gracefully and with a minimal amount of arthroscopic surgery.

Sometimes it feels like life is nothing more than one big ordeal after another, full of unending obstacles, objections and obstructions at every turn. It doesn't matter if it's your biggest client, daycare provider or soon to be ex-boyfriend, nothing good ever follows the question, "Can we talk?" And on days when it seems that everyone wants to "talk," it's all I can do to keep from putting my fingers in my ears, closing my eyes, and saying "nah nah nah nah nah, I can't hear you!" just to keep out the negativity.

Sometimes, when the challenges seem too big and the tasks too arduous, my Inner Self will want to surrender, and that's when I need my Weekend Warrior the most.

Now I have friends who combat negativity by meditating or doing yoga. But that's too much focus on my Inner Self. Instead, when the world is crashing down around me, I call upon my Weekend Warrior — the part of my "self" that chooses to de-stress by battling it out on the soccer field. After all, I'm pretty sure my Inner Self is much too wishy-washy for life's real hurdles. My Weekend Warrior, on the other hand, goes by the mantra, "That which does not kill us makes us stronger." (At least that's what I tell myself whenever I end up in the emergency room.)

To the people who say, "I don't see how you could possibly succeed at this new venture," my Inner Self might respond, "You're right; neither do I," and give up. Yet, my Weekend Warrior is more likely to stick out her tongue and say, "If someone like you could see that, then it would've been done already." To those who tell me, "You can't go it alone," my Inner Self agrees and considers joining the first team that comes along. My Weekend Warrior may also agree, but then she would go out and build her own team.

Sometimes, when the challenges seem too big and the tasks too arduous, my Inner Self will want to surrender, and that's when I need my Weekend Warrior the most. Because it's my Weekend Warrior who straps on the ankle brace, laces up the cleats, and heads out to the soccer field on yet another cold, rainy, Sunday morning. It's my Weekend Warrior who recovers from a sprained ankle by playing goalie instead of my typical field position. And, it's my Weekend Warrior who defends the goal by taking a bodily blow from an attacker head-on, leaving me flat on my back, wondering if the stars I'm seeing may be some indication that perhaps that wasn't my brightest move.

That's when my Inner Self kicks in to lament that the rain has now turned to sleet and that I'm lying in the goose droppings that blanket the field. It's also my Inner Self who thinks, "I'm too old for this," and considers retiring her number.

Fortunately, it's my Weekend Warrior who realizes (now that all feeling is starting to come back to my body) that I'm actually gripping the ball in my frozen fingers, and that it's not in the goal. Because of my Weekend Warrior, I can now crawl to my feet, punt the ball away, and look my attacker right in the eye. And it's definitely my Weekend Warrior who causes me to mutter under my breath, "Just bring it on, baby ... I stopped you once, and I can do it again..."

So, while it's finally time for me to hang up my cleats, I want to salute the rest of the Weekend Warriors out there. Because we know that the strength is not behind the blows we take, but within ourselves each and every time we stand up again, whether it's on the playing field, in the office or in our personal lives.

Diane K. Danielson is a Cohasset resident and the author of the upcoming book "The Savvy Gal's Guide to Online Networking (or What Would Jane Austen Do?)," who one week after officially retiring from soccer has been tearing apart her basement looking for her tennis racquet. Down with trans fats!

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Whenever we go to the Marshfield Fair, the first thing a friend of mine does is make a beeline for the truck where they sell French fried potatoes right out of the bubbling Crisco, calories, cholesterol and all.

I usually turn away at that point because I can't bear to watch what my friend is doing to her shapely tummy.

She also drinks Diet Coke, which I find amusing as well as bemusing. But we won't go into that because she occasionally reads this column and I don't want to get yelled at for giving away her dietary secrets.

I was reminded of our forays into the culinary delights and perils of the Marshfield Fair when I picked up the Herald and the Globe last Sunday to find major feature stories on the evils that could befall diners on junk food.

"Trans fats" being a new one on me, I turned to my trusty scientific dictionary, which, I regret to report, wasn't much help.

The Herald devoted almost a full page to the dangers inherent in a children's menu that contained chicken fingers, thick pan pizza, creamy macaroni and cheese, hamburgers, French fries and sundaes.

That I can understand, having brought up a child whose dietary needs growing up consisted of hamburger, coke and French fries and little else, whether it be in a Burger King or a restaurant where hamburger was called "Salisbury steak" so that they could raise the price on the menu.

The Globe story recounted the problems restaurateurs in the People's Republic of Brookline are having in meeting the terms of a new town ordinance that forbids the use of something called "trans fats" in their cooking after November, 2008.

"Trans fats" being a new one on me, I turned to my trusty scientific dictionary, which, I regret to report, wasn't much help.

"A trans fatty acid (commonly shortened to trans fat) is an unsaturated fatty acid whose molecules contain trans double bonds between carbon atoms, which makes the molecule less kinked compared to those of 'cis fat.'"

Huh? Now I know why I flunked chemistry!

Actually, most trans fats seem to be artificial, made when manufacturers add hydrogen to vegetable oil, turning the liquid oil to solid fats to increase the shelf life and the flavor of the foods, mostly fried and baked, that contain them.

So far, only Big Brother in Brookline has made it a rule that restaurants must not use trans fats or else. But remember how we laughed when the People's Republic banned the use of tobacco in all workplaces. Remember that as you sneak off into the woods to light up a Lucky.

There is legislation awaiting passage in the State Legislature requiring restaurants to put nutrition information, including the use of trans fats in their kitchens, on menus across the state. When that passes, can outright prohibition be far behind?

Me? When the Marshfield Fair rolls around this summer, I may try some of those trans fat-laden — but tasty — French fries myself, just to thumb my nose at Big Brother.

LIBRARY CORNER

Kids! Register for summer reading program

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Visit the library web site: cohassetlibrary.com for full summer details.

Register for summer reading program — Registration will begin Monday, June 25, for the Massachusetts statewide summer reading program for children, "Catch the Beat @ your library."

Library Book Group – Join others for coffee and discussion of Anse Seierstad's book "The Bookseller of Kabul" at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, June 27, in the Meeting Room. All are welcome.

New Books – Although school is out for the summer, it's never too early to start thinking about college applications and exams. The reference collection has these new titles for patrons to use in the library: Princeton Review's "Cracking the GMAT," 2008 edition; Princeton Review's "Cracking the SAT," 2008 edition with CD; Princeton Review's "Cracking the GED"; and Princeton Review's "12 Practice Tests for the AP Exam." Also available is Barron's 27th edition of the "Profiles of American Colleges."

Movie Matinee – The library will offer a free viewing of the movie "Driving Miss Daisy," starring Jessica Tandy and Morgan Freeman, at 11 a.m., on Friday, July 6. Light refreshments will be provided courtesy of the Friends of the Library. Movie site license is sponsored by the Friends of the Library and Cohasset Democratic Town Committee.

Library Database – Looking for suggestions for summer reading? Try logging on to NoveList through the library's Web site. NoveList can help patrons find their next book to read. The database, accessible from a home or office computer as well as in the library, allows patrons to search for favorite authors, award winner lists and reading group discussion guides. Each title's entry has a brief description, full text review when available and author information. Go to cohassetlibrary.org and click on Good Books. Have a Cohasset library card number handy to access this incredible resource.

Author Visit – A visit from author David Hosp will take place at 7 p.m., on Wednesday, July 11. Hosp will appear, courtesy of Buttonwood Books, at the library to talk about his latest book "Innocence," his third legal thriller coming out this summer. Be one of the first to purchase and have the book signed by the author at this event. Light refreshments will be provided courtesy of the Friends of the Library. The event is free.

Book Sale – Going to the beach and need a book to read? Traveling and need a good paperback to bring along? The Book Sale shelf in the Community Room has wonderful summer reading material for a terrific price. Paperbacks and cassette tapes are 25 cents while hardcover, audiobooks, DVDs and CDs are $1. A great bargain for great summer reading.

Raising awareness about 'greenhouse' gases

Join Our Town again Monday when co-hosts Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo sit down with JoAnn Mirise of Sustainable Cohasset to talk about the organization's efforts to increase awareness about greenhouse gases and what can be done to reduce them.

ourtown

Discussion will cover how to reduce fuel consumption and other related topics.

Mirise authors a column on sustainable issues for the Cohasset Mariner. Her most recent column talked about pesticides and lawn care.

Tune in Monday, Tuesday and Thursday at 9p.m., all on Comcast channel 10.

Stay tuned Cohasset and Stay informed!

Treat's Pond could get makeover findings concluded that bacteria concentrations in the pond and at the current discharge point would continue to exceed accepted standards. The salt marsh would likely continue its demise.

The second option would be to install a box culvert at Sandy Cove. This option was more expensive and did not perform as well as the recommend options.

The two most viable options, Larsen said, would be to install a large pipe from Treat's Pond to discharge at either the inner harbor (via Atlantic Avenue) or the outer harbor (via Whitehead Road and Whale Meadow).

"Both options perform very well and will give us the restoration we want," said Larsen. However, the two workable options both had their advantages and disadvantages.

If an underground piping were installed to go out to the outer harbor, there were real estate complications, "we would need easements from private property owners," Larsen said. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he knew of at least one property owner who was adverse to the idea of a pipe under his/her driveway. If the pipe was installed via Atlantic Avenue, the majority of the land needed would be on town property.

But, the pipe into the inner harbor raised environmental concerns. The Harbor Health Committee had serious objections to the path of the pipe, in fact, Chris Evans, member of the Harbor Health Committee, reported the committee had voted unanimously against any additional discharge into the harbor that would add freshwater, stormwater and/or pollution into the harbor, including the option proposed by the Army Corps.

Fresh water, bacteria and nitrates would be added to the already suffering harbor, Evans said. In addition, the committee has found that parts of the inner harbor do not flush with the tide, which would leave the discharge with a considerable residence time.

"The town needs to stop looking at the harbor as a body of water that can be a dumping ground for fresh water," said Karen Quigley, Chairman of the Harbor Health Committee.

However, Larsen said the amount of freshwater and bacteria contributing to the harbor's saltwater system would be minimal. Once restored, Treat's Pond will largely consist of saltwater.

In addition, Quigley said the town should take this opportunity to address some major stormwater issues that plague the area.

"It's important to recognize that the goal here is not only the restoration of Treats, but also a solution to stormwater issues," Quigley said, even though stormwater issues are not within the purview of the Army Corps, the town is dealing with both issues and should be looking for solutions.

Quigley also pointed out that "for fairness" she wondered if members of the Cohasset Yacht Club and nearby residents of the inner harbor had been asked to weigh in on the issue.

"I am concerned we're moving the problem from one area to another," added David Farrag, Chairman of the Conservation Commission.

Some audience members asked if the pipe could be moved further out into the harbor, but Larsen said the cost of extending the pipe would be restrictive.

Concerns were raised as to whether hooking up the homes in Little Harbor onto the town sewer system would decrease the amount of bacteria in Treat's Pond. "I wish we were in 2011 having this conversation" when all Little Harbor homes are expected to be hooked up to town sewer, said one resident. While it may make a small difference, Larsen said it would not be the answer to the marsh's problems, "we're not trying to solve a bacteria problem, we're trying to restore the salt marsh."

By mid-July the Army Corps needs to know if Cohasset is serious about the project, but it's not just a matter of determining which option would best suit town interests, there is a financial commitment on the town's part as well.

Ultimately 35 percent of funding has to the come from non-federal sources, primarily municipal and state funds, said Dormitzer. From current estimates for any of the options that 35 percent could total more than $400,000.

Jason Burtner of Coastal Zone Management, a state agency whose mission is to balance the impacts of human activity with the protection of coastal and marine resources, said some funding resources could be available by grants or by appealing to local legislation. If town funds were to be used, the fall special Town Meeting would need to allocate the amount.

Marty Nee, Chairman of the Stormwater Committee, said this opportunity might be the best offer the town will get. The area in question is one of the more significant flooding areas in town and the town should take advantage of the 65 percent federal match, other options to alleviate flooding will likely be closer to 100 percent town paid, he said, "no solution is the worst solution," Nee said.

Dormitzer suggested the other selectmen walk the route around Treat's Pond to get a better sense of the area and proposals. The Selectmen will continue their discussion on Treat's Pond at their next scheduled meeting on Monday, June 25 at 7p.m.

HEALTH NOTES

Arboviruses passed on to humans

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

For some time now, Massachusetts has had a warning network dedicated to the dissemination of information about arboviruses (short for Arthropod or insect borne viruses), which live in bugs; mosquitoes and ticks, and are passed onto humans through feeding bites. Arboviruses we hear the most about are West Nile (WNV) and Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE). Defense against these viruses take two paths, depending on the activities of the carriers. Protection from tick borne infections is best accomplished through use of protective clothing and personal inspections after suspected exposure. Avoid the outdoors at dusk and dawn; wear long sleeved pants and shirts when in the woods; and use insect repellant.

Mosquito-borne viruses are another matter. Always remove or empty regularly any sources of standing water such as birdbaths, wading pools, old pots or planters that hold water. Generally, spraying to suppress mosquitoes has questionable effectiveness and should be used only after getting conclusive evidence that the virus exists in bird populations where mosquitoes could spread the virus to people nearby. A far better approach, and that used by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health (DPH) is to track the existence of the virus in birds which act as reservoirs for transmission to humans.

Fortunately, the DPH has for some time had a network of health care personnel throughout the state: the Massachusetts Health & Homeland Alert Network (HHAN) provides secure web-based communication and information-sharing for the state. Cities and towns including Cohasset use the HHAN to support emergency and bioterrorism preparedness efforts, including emergency alerts, response planning, educational services, laboratory reporting, and epidemiological investigation and now disease surveillance including arbovirus oversight and reporting.

The first weekly Arbovirus surveillance report arrived at the Board of Health on June 14. The information contained was in two tables. The first table was intended to provide data on the overall incidence of WNV and EEE in birds in Massachusetts. The information is submitted to the Center for Disease Control for comparison and correlation with other states. The report was based on surveillance for the week of, June 3 - June 9 in which birds were tested for WNV; mosquitoes, horses / other mammals and humans were tested for WNV and EEE.

The second table contained data from the ten commonwealth towns reporting and submitting the largest number of birds susceptible to WNV (blue jays, crows, robins). This table was intended to identify the location of clusters of virus positive birds in terms of geography so that if necessary, resources could be allocated to the appropriate area. Of all the 396 birds tested, none tested positive.

This is the information that planners need to prepare for outbreaks of arthropod borne illnesses. For recorded information regarding WNV and EEE, or to report a dead bird, call the MDPH Public Health Information line: 1-866-MASS-WNV (1-866-627-7968) Web Page http://westnile.ashton-web.com/

If you think you may have symptoms of WNV or EEE, see your physician immediately. Be prepared to answer questions about your medical history: The following information is critical for accurate interpretation of test results: Date of onset of disease symptoms, Date of specimen collection, any unusual immunological status of patient (e.g. immunosuppression), travel history, vaccination history (e.g., vaccination against yellow fever, Japanese encephalitis or Central European encephalitis), Disease history (e.g., previous history of viral encephalitis or Dengue fever), brief clinical summary including suspected diagnosis (e.g., encephalitis or meningitis).

Illness from arboviruses is rare, but can be particularly serious, so it's better to be careful about your health if you think you may have been exposed.

If you have any questions, please contact the public Health nurse at the Cohasset Board of Health 781 383-2210.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Senate approves Maritime Trail funding

Massachusetts Senate has approved an amendment, sponsored by Senate Minority Whip Robert Hedlund, restoring funding for the creation and implementation of a trail that connects Hull with other maritime museums from as far north as Amesbury to as far south as Westport.

The amendment received bipartisan support and was adopted on the second day of debate on the proposed fiscal 2008 state budget. The amendment sought to reinstate tourism funding that has been absent since fiscal 2006 and which was neglected in Gov. Deval Patrick's proposed fiscal 08 budget.

The Maritime Trail has been an important project for the town of Hull and Hedlund has fought for funding of the trail, offering amendments, over the last three budgets.

Hedlund said, "We have a rich, coastal, maritime history in New England, especially in the Commonwealth, and the creation of a trail that connects the history and culture of our communities is a smart plan to bring in tourism."

The groundwork and creation of the Maritime Trail has taken nearly six years to be developed. Conceived as a trail similar to Boston's Freedom Trail, the Maritime Trail will link Hull Lifesaving Museum with the Cape Cod Natural History Museum, Cohasset Historical Society and Maritime Museum, Custom House Museum, Essex Shipbuilding Museum, Jones River Landing, Massachusetts Bay Maritime Artisans and Saugus Ironworks.

Lory Newmyer, executive director of the Hull Lifesaving Museum said, "The enthusiasm and leadership of Sen. Robert Hedlund regarding this project has been extraordinary. He has a deep understanding and appreciation of the Commonwealth's broad and varied maritime heritage, and has worked to generate state-wide support for the comprehensive trail that will tell this compelling story."

The Maritime Trail was not included in the Governor's budget, nor in the House Ways and Means Budget. Since the language was included in Senate Ways and Means Budget only, the language will be subject to approval by Conference Committee and if retained, will be included in the final version of the Legislature's budget sent to Gov. Patrick.

The measure will take effect pending a signature by Gov. Patrick upon final approval of the state budget.

Sandy Beach open for summer

Sandy Beach is officially open for the 2007 summer season. Lifeguards will be on duty from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., daily through Labor Day, Sept. 3. Scott and Tucker O'Day relax in their revamped living room. WHDH Channel 7's "Room for Improvement" helped the couple achieve their vision for a "light, casual and relaxed" atmosphere with a contemporary feel. The designers used existing pieces in the O'Days' home and added unique accessories that spiced up the area.

Room change-up

Cohasset homeowners get a 'room for improvement'

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Imagine leaving your house one day and returning to find an entire room of your house completely different. That's exactly what happened to Scott and Tucker O'Day on Tuesday, but they did have some prior notice. They and their home will be featured on WHDH Channel 7's feature segment "Room for Improvement."

The O'Days are used to change. They've moved from Scituate to Norwell to Weymouth before finally settling in Cohasset a year ago. Immediately they went to work on changing their new home on Hill Street, re-doing each room to suit their own style and taste. But when they reached the room that essentially serves as the entrance way to their home, they were stuck.

"You get to the point where you don't trust your own judgment," says Scott. As a result, the room was left largely empty, with only a couch and some paintings as decorations.

"When we walked by, we tried to shield our eyes," says Tucker. The room became lost space in their new home. But it isn't like they didn't make an effort. Tucker had her husband move furniture in and out of the room in an attempt to find the right mix of pieces for the room. Nothing seemed to work.

Tucker says, for her, the room had some major design challenges. For starters, it has an odd shape, narrower in one area and wider in another. A large part of one wall was a picture window and the opposite wall had a red brick fireplace and double-size entry way opening it to the dining room.

"We wanted something that was open, light, casual and relaxed, but with a more contemporary feel."
— Tucker O'Day, homeowner

"I was tired of looking at this room," says Tucker, so she wrote to Channel 7's "Room for Improvement" including the reasons why she needed help and pictures of the troublesome room. To her and her husband's surprise they were chosen to be on the show, "I can't believe we were picked, but it did make my life a lot less stressful" says Scott, who wasn't interested in moving another piece of furniture into or out of the room.

"Room for Improvement" is Channel 7's popular news feature segment that takes ordinary homeowners who are looking to re-design or improve a space in their home or office. The design team will work within the homeowner's budget to help transform a space into an ideal area. Channel 7 provides the professional design service and labor.

Robin Pelissier, owner of the downtown Hingham store Robin's Nest, was the interior designer for the O'Days' revamped living and dining room. She and a design team met with Tucker about a month ago to walk-thru the rooms and discuss what they envisioned.

"We wanted something that was open, light, casual and relaxed, but with a more contemporary feel," says Tucker, "we also wanted something low maintenance." Luckily, Pelissier knew exactly what the O'Days meant, "they spent maybe an hour here at the house —obviously they have a very good eye."

When the day came for the complete makeover to begin, Scott and Tucker had to make themselves scarce while the room was put together. Their return home and reaction to the room will be seen when the segment airs on Channel 7 in the next few weeks.

"We loved it, it's beyond what we expected," says Tucker, "they thought of everything."

The design elements came partially from existing furniture and accessory pieces in the house and some elements were new. The L-shaped couch, which the O'Days nearly gave away for use at a friend's vacation home, became the primary seating area for the living room. Blinds were added to the picture windows in the living and dining rooms, "we're not in a fishbowl anymore," says Scott. A custom rug and fresh paint were added to the room. The old red brick fireplace gained new life with a coating of bright white paint. Pellissier incorporated pillows she found upstairs in to the dining room, put candy from the kitchen in a dish and took some family photos from other parts of the room.

Unique and contemporary accessories added modernity, without forsaking comfort in the space, exactly what the O'Days were looking for in the room.

"Sometimes all you need is a fresh set of eyes," says Tucker, "they really listened to what we had to say."

Despite their happiness with their new living and dining space, they are still ready for more change. They plan to tackle the master bedroom and bath next.

"It's never ending," says Scott, with a hint of a groan.

The O'Days' "Room for Improvement" segment will appear on Channel 7 during the first week of July.

Legion earns 1st win of season

Editor's note: This report was provided by the Cohasset Post 118 coaching staff.

Cohasset Post 118 picked up its first win of the season Monday over Holbrook by a score of 7-4 in American Legion action.

Post 118, which draws from Cohasset and Scituate, got another excellent pitching performance from Brian Hill. Hill pitched a complete game, giving up four runs on eight hits with 11 strikeouts.

Holbrook scored one unearned run in the top of the fourth inning to take the lead, 1-0. In the bottom of the fourth, Justin Whyte led off with a single and advanced to second when Kyle Pinkus reached first on an error. Marcus Joyce also reached first on another error to load the bases.

Whyte scored on a single by Brad Sportack to make the score 1-1. Jeff Simpson reached first on a fielders choice to score Pinkus for a 2-1 lead after four innings. In the bottom of the fifth inning, Ryan Little singled and Coady Morgan reached first on an error. Whyte singled to score Little, and Michael Signorelli followed with a double to plate Morgan. To cap the rally, Pinkus singled to score Whyte and Signorelli also scored on a throwing error to make the score 6-1.

In the top of the sixth, Holbrook picked up three runs, of which two were unearned, to make the score 6-4. In the bottom of the frame, Morgan led off with a single and stole second base. Whyte singled to score Morgan to account for the final score.

The win brought Post 118's record to 1-5 going into Wednesday's game against Braintree, played after the Mariner went to press. The team kicks off a three-game homestand at Scituate High School Friday when it hosts Quincy; first pitch is scheduled for 5:45 p.m. Sunday, West Roxbury comes to SHS for a 4 p.m. game, while Post 118 hosts defending state champion Milton at 5:45 on Monday at SHS.

Following is a recap of the rest of the team's season to date:

Milton 12, Post 118 1

In the opening game of the season, Milton defeated Post 118, 12-1. Joyce made the start on the mound, going five innings and giving up eight runs with seven strikeouts. Joyce pitched well but the fielding and mental errors proved costly.

The offensive highlight for the team was Pat Doonan's double, which scored Whyte from second.

Canton 6, Post 118 2

Post 118's Ryan Ferriter pitched four innings giving up six runs, six hits and striking out four. Sam DeGiacomo shut down Canton in the last two innings, but it wasn't enough. Offensively, in the seventh inning, Hill scored on a double

Girls tennis All-Scholastic team

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Unlike individual league all-star teams, we did not choose our team in deference to event considerations. Instead the only criteria we considered was overall value these athletes had to their respective teams.

In the end; however, the sports staff at Community Newspaper Company (CNC) had to make some tough decisions and we do feel secure that we chose the top public school girls tennis players for this honor.

This is the CNC All-Scholastic girls tennis team comprised of athletes from the following schools: Taunton, Apponequet, Bridgewater-Raynham, Randolph, Avon, Whitman-Hanson, Hanover, Marshfield, Weymouth, Braintree, Plymouth, West Bridgewater, East Bridgewater, Old Rochester, Norwell, Wareham, Scituate, Hingham, Abington, Rockland, Silver Lake, Oliver Ames, Pembroke, Holbrook, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Norton and Mansfield.

Local 9 look to move on in '08

The Cohasset High baseball team expected better.

There's way around that fact after the Skippers finished an unsatisfactory 5-13. In the South Shore League, Cohasset was 2-12. And the team's five wins were against rather weak teams, as only one of them (Sacred Heart) advanced to the state tournament.

"It was very disappointing," said head coach Al Gallotta about his team's season. "Qualifying for the tournament was a very realistic goal and we had all established that thought."

As a whole, the team had many issues and made mistakes that they were unable to overcome. One point that Gallota focused on was his team's poor baserunning throughout the season. The team constantly took themselves out of scoring opportunities with careless baserunning blunders. The Skippers could have used some of those runs because in four games this season, they lost by only one run.

Gallotta also said that the addition of East Bridgewater may have contributed to his team's struggles. Although he felt his team got stronger from the year before, it wasn't enough for the much stronger league.

"With the addition of EB the league became just that much stronger from top to bottom," Gallotta said.

One thing that almost the entire team struggled with was offensive production. The Skippers were never able to truly find their groove, and as a team they hit only .224. Gallotta accompanied this with the fact that five of his returning starters from last year hit significantly worse than last year.

Two juniors, though, established themselves as true varsity players this year, making the jump from the junior varsity team they were on last year. First baseman Kenny Muir was probably the biggest reason Cohasset was able to stay in games early in the season due to his ability to drive in runs. Chris Rose, who played a multitude of positions for Cohasset, was a catalyst for the team. He led the team in batting average and also had a penchant for knocking in runs.

Another junior, Pat Doonan, who was on varsity last year, also had a breakthrough season and really earned a starting position. Also a varsity player from last year and a junior, Kyle Pinkus had a great season leading the team in runs batted in. Muir, Rose, Doonan, and Pinkus will have to all be catalysts next year as seniors for this Cohasset team.

Nick Zappolo, Corbin Faber, Fletcher Smalzel, and John Harrington were the four seniors on the team and were true leaders. Every one of them contributed to the team in their own way. Zappolo, who missed the majority of last year with a leg injury, came back in full swing this year at his shortstop position. Faber once again had a solid season playing a couple positions, but really established himself as a firm second baseman. Smalzel also had another good season as a Skipper over at the hot corner, third base. Harrington finally broke through this season as an overall good starting pitcher. He had two starts and recorded his first win as a Skipper.

"They're a good group of kids. Each had rough spots, but all handled them very well and maturely," said Gallotta about his seniors. "If they came out of the game, they knew why they were and what for."

Gallotta will look to get even more production out of his seniors next spring. With the team only losing four players, the expectations for next year should be just as high, only this time Cohasset will look to answer these expectations.

Local gymnasts shine in season finale

Twelve gymnasts with the South Shore Community Center traveled to Ohrenberger Gymnastics in West Roxbury for their final competition of the season. All of the young ladies performed well.

Top performers in the 11-year age group are as follows:

Abby Concannon of Hingham was first in the all-around and first on beam (8.0) and bars (9.0), third on vault (7.9) and fifth on floor exercise (7.7).

Micaela Durkin was fifth on beam (7.1) and vault (7.7), and sixth on bars (7.2).

Emily Podurgiel of Scituate was sixth in the all-around, fourth on floor (7.8), beam (7.2) and vault (7.85).

Christina Tedeschi finished first on the vault (8.15), while Kelsey McCunney finished third on beam (7.4) and fifth on bars (7.4).

In the 12-year age group:

Amber Silvia won the all-around and took first on floor (8.2), beam (8.3) and bar (8.85), and third on the vault (8.0).

Hingham's Read McNichols was sixth in the all-around, third on beam (7.0), fourth on vault (7.5) and fifth on floor (7.4). Meghan Steeves, also of Hingham, was second on the beam (7.2).

Top performers in the 13-and-up age division include:

Jillian Crawford placed sixth on the balance beam. Juliette Karp was third on floor (7.65) and beam (7.75), and fourth on bars (8.45).

Jessica Davis of Hull took fifth in the all-around, third on the vault (7.95) and fourth on the beam (7.7).

Hingham's Grace Barlow was third in the all-around, second on beam (7.8) and bars (8.75), fourth on the vault (7.8) and sixth on the floor.

last eight matches of her season to lead Cohasset to a 17-1 regular season record and a berth in the Div. 2 South semifinals…Included in that stretch were wins over fellow All-Scholastics Becca Winans (Duxbury) and Ali Lund (Hingham), and straight set wins in the state tournament against good opponents from Fairhaven, Dover-Sherborn and Hopkinton…Won two matches in the state individual tournament before running into eventual sectional champion Susan Bitetti of Norwell…The top player on a Skippers squad that again won a share of the South Shore League title with Norwell…Also plays soccer for CHS

Sally Meehan – Junior
Singles – Cohasset

Like former doubles partner and fellow All-Scholastic Meg Anderson, Meehan stepped up to singles this spring and had a great season…A three-time Mariner All-Scholastic…Was undefeated for the season until a tough three-set loss in the Div. 2 South semifinals against Hopkinton…That was Meehan's first loss in a third set that decided a match, having gone 5-0 in those situations up to that point…Earned a couple strong wins over Hingham that helped hand the Harborwomen their only two regular season losses of the season…Also plays field hockey for CHS

Becca Winans – Junior
First singles – Duxbury

Was among the top singles players in the Patriot League this season, which says a lot considering the talent in the league…Winans' only league losses (four) came against the PL undefeated Katie Prichard of Scituate and Hingham's Ali Lund…Winans' Green Dragons finished behind only these two squads in the PL standings at 7-4…A talented player in several aspects of the game, Winans picked up big wins in a pair of matches against Marshfield and hung in with tough squads from Cohasset and Norwell…The PL All-star still has one more year left to play on the Duxbury courts.

Ali Lund – Sophomore
First singles – Hingham

The Harborwomen welcomed this youngster with open arms after she spent her freshman season playing on a team in Florida…Lund quickly became one of the most feared players in the Patriot League, her lone pair of losses coming in instant-classic matches against Scituate unbeaten Katie Prichard…Lund's strong play at singles helped guide her squad to an undefeated PL title (12-0), edging their rival Sailors for the crown…At 13-2 overall, the Harborwomen drew the No. 6 seed in the Div. 1 South tourney and bested teams from Dennis-Yarmouth and Marshfield to reach the semifinals, where they were edged by Needham, 4-1…Hingham finished the season at 15-3.

Sara Yeransian – Junior
First singles – Mansfield

At the number one spot, Yeransian was on top of her game all season long…Sporting one of the fiercest forehands in the South, Yeransian swung her racquet to the tune of a 15-2 regular season record this season…She was named Hockomock League MVP after compiling a 16-3 overall record, a year after she went 19-1 as a sophomore…She was named captain for her final year at Mansfield and will continue to play tennis year round at the Easton tennis club and in USTA tournaments.

Amelia Mattern – Junior
Second singles – Marshfield

Got through the regular season unscathed compiling a 16-0 record from the No. 2 singles spot…A two-year varsity player for the Lady Rams, Mattern spent each of the last season at third singles before making the jump this spring…And boy did it help Marshfield…Behind the consistent play of Mattern, the Lady Rams won the Atlantic Coast League North Div. title (12-1) in their first season back and earned the No. 3 seed in the Div. 1 South tourney, reaching the quarterfinals before finishing the spring with a 19-2 record…Marshfield breezed through Mansfield before getting edged by fellow South Shore powers Hingham (4-1)…Just a junior, Mattern—an ACL All-star—still has a senior season to look forward to next spring.

Susan Bitetti – Junior
(Capt.)
Singles – Norwell

Three-time South sectional individual champion had another undefeated season for the Clippers, leading the team to a share of the South Shore League crown with Cohasset…Bitetti didn't lose a single set in team match play this year, and breezed through the individual sectional in similar fashion…Only loss of the year came in state individual semifinals to eventual champion Lauren Hollender of Newton South…Plays throughout the year in USTA tournaments and is one of the top-ranked players in New England for her age group…Bitetti comes from a true tennis family: older siblings Sara and Sam were both standouts at NHS as well.

Caseley Brodie-Gifford – Senior
First singles – Old Rochester

Brodie-Gifford, who went undefeated in league play the past two years, quickly cemented her status as the premier singles player in the South Coast Conference by winning her first three matches this season without dropping a single game…Her only two losses were to Dartmouth's highly-touted Amy Lopes in non-league matches…At the MIAA South Sectional tournament, Brodie-Gifford advanced to the third round before falling in straight sets to Bishop Feehan's Darcy Demers…"It's very hard to play against Caseley. She's not a power tennis player, but she gets everything back and plays a very heady game," ORR head coach Bob Hohne said.

Michaela Shoemaker – Junior
Second singles – Old Rochester

Shoemaker overcame most of her opponents this season with solid ground strokes, a reliable service game, and a calm on-court demeanor…A fine student in the classroom, Shoemaker figures to play a key role for Old Rochester next year, possibly at #1 singles as the heir apparent to Brodie-Gifford…The promising junior's most impressive match may have been a dominant 6-0, 6-0 victory over Dighton-Rehoboth's Haley Manchester that helped the Lady Bulldogs rebound from their only league defeat to rival Apponequet.

Alex Dalton – Sophomore
First singles – Oliver Ames

The younger of the two Dalton sisters ensured that the families legacy lived on…In a tough season for the girl tennis team, Dalton was a nearly unbeatable force losing to fellow all-scholastic Sara Yeransian of Mansfield and Stoughton's Nealie Kaplan…She finished the season 15-3 for the struggling Tigers…Dalton will serve as captain of the Tigers next season as just a junior..Alex will continue her playing career this summer at the Weymouth tennis club honing her trade in anticipation of next spring's battles.

Eden Marrano – Freshman
First singles – Pembroke

She was only a freshman this season, but her stellar play thrust her into the spotlight, and boosted the Titans to places unseen before…For the season Marrano was 17-1 at the top singles spot, including big wins over the top players from perennial powers Duxbury, and Hingham…The Titans earned their first ever tournament berth this year, and picked up a win in the state tournament thanks to her efforts, and they also won the Patriot League's Fisher Division…"Having Eden as our #1 has changed the entire organization of our team. Other players can play opponents of their skill level instead of playing people who out match them," head coach Meredith Fogarty said…In the coming years Pembroke, and the rest of the South Shore can expect even more success, and a possible run at an individual title.

Kate O'Connor – Freshman
Singles – Scituate

The Sailors had a few questions in singles due to graduation, but O'Connor ably answered them with big win after big win throughout the season…Perhaps the most memorable among those were two three-set wins against Duxbury in the span of five days, both giving Scituate a 3-2 win over its Patriot League rival…Also recorded impressive straight set wins over opponents from Norwell and league champion Hingham down the stretch…O'Connor capped off her season with a straight set win against Norwell in a Div. 2 South first round match, ultimately won by the Clippers, 3-2…Will team with fellow All-Scholastic Katie Pritchard as the foundation of next year's Sailors squad

Katie Pritchard – Junior
Singles – Scituate

After two seasons of playing second singles, Pritchard stepped into the top spot this season and went undefeated in Patriot League play…Only losses of the season came against fellow All-Scholastic Susan Bitetti of Norwell…Won two matches in the individual South sectional tournament, after winning three and advancing to the quarterfinals as a sophomore…Pritchard recorded a pair of impressive straight set wins against Duxbury to help earn the Sailors a couple 3-2 wins over their PL rivals, while also winning in straight sets twice against Hingham in 3-2 team losses to the league champion Harborwomen

Cohasset junior second singles Sally Meehan went undefeated in regular season play for the Skippers.

Amanda Albuquerque – Sophomore
First singles – Weymouth

It wasn't certain at the beginning of the year if she would be coming out for the team, because of her other tennis commitments…Albuquerque is a member of the Nick Bolliteri tennis academy, and a nationally ranked by the USTA in the under-16 category, as a result of those commitments she was unable to participate in the Individual tournament, where she could have made some noise…She was a big reason for the success of the Wildcats who earned a tournament berth, and then rode a wave of success to the sectional finals…She lost only one match, which she later avenged in the final against Needham…She was a Bay State first team all-star, and won an astounding 16 sets (out of a possible 42) by a score of 6-0.

Doubles

Krista Vreeland / Kaylene O'Brien
First doubles – Hingham

What a difference experience makes…In their second straight season playing together at first doubles, these senior captains breezed through their competition this regular season, going undefeated to help guide Hingham to a Patriot League crown (11-0)…The two-time PL All-stars nailed down two big wins in matches against rival Scituate, edging the Sailors for league supremacy…Both very skilled on the court, Vreeland and O'Brien's consistent play helped the No. 6 seeded Harborwomen reach the semifinals of the Div. 1 South tourney…There, the squad was edged in a 4-1 decision…Their departure from HHS leaves a big void to be filled at doubles next spring.

Caroline Bagby /Ally Niemann
First doubles – Marshfield

These senior captains were tough to beat on the doubles front this spring…Playing with different partners at doubles last season, the pair teamed up this spring and were about as solid a duo as you can get…Both four-year varsity players, Bagby and Niemann complimented each other very well on the court and combined to go undefeated throughout the regular season and qualify for play in the South Doubles tourney…There, the ACL All-Stars reached the second round of play…Bagby and Niemann's consistency on the court led to a season in which the Lady Rams won their first Atlantic Coast League North Div. title (12-1) since rejoining the league this spring…The squad was seeded third in the Div. 1 South tourney (18-1) and reached the quarterfinals…The pair leaves a big void to fill at doubles next spring.

Kyle MacDonald/Lauren Anderson
First doubles – Old Rochester

Undefeated at 19-0 during the regular season, MacDonald and Anderson were a resourceful pairing who used teamwork, strong net play and precise passing shots to overwhelm opponents…Even when they were not at their best, the pairing found a way to emerge victorious…Their most memorable win may have been a three-set dogfight against Fairhaven's Kelly McCann/Allison Furtado that set the stage for the team's SCC championship-clinching win over Seekonk four days later…At the MIAA South Sectionals, MacDonald and Anderson, seeded fourth, advanced all the way to the quarterfinals before succumbing in straight sets to fifth-seeded Amanda Smith and Kathleen Colpoys of Notre Dame.

Allison White and Christina Cady
Second doubles – Old Rochester

Old Rochester's second doubles pairing was nearly as dominant as MacDonald and Anderson, losing just one match and finishing the regular season with an impressive 14-1 mark…The two recent graduates improved with each match and were the darlings of the MIAA South Sectionals, winning all three of their preliminary round matches before falling in the quarterfinals to eventual champs Sandra Hyams and Rachel Bergeron of Needham… "They were the talk of the tournament," Hohne said.

Meg Dempsey/Sam Norton
First doubles – Weymouth

This duo was one of the top doubles pairings in the south this year, and their performance was a big reason for the Wildcats meteoric rise up the local tennis ladder. Dempsey and Norton won their first five matches of the season, including a win over state champion Needham, that duo's only loss of the year…They also had win streaks of five or more two other times during the year…Their efforts earned them second team All-star honors by the Bay State League as they helped Weymouth to a 13-3 regular season record, and four tournament wins before falling to Needham in the finals…At the individual tournament they reached the finals, before falling. Next season this group should be capable of producing even bigger things.

Legion earns 1st win of season

by DeGiacomo to left center. DeGiacomo then scored on a single by Tommy Chase.

Morrisette 2, Post 118 1

Post 118 wasted a great effort from Hill, who went the distance, giving up four hits and striking out eight batters. He had excellent control and did an outstanding job mixing up his pitches. Morrisette scored both runs in the first inning, and one was unearned.

In the sixth inning, Joyce led off with a single and Doonan laid down a great bunt for a hit. Joyce then scored on a single by Whyte. Post 118 had its chances, but stranded nine runners on base. The team had eight hits, but could not get a big hit at the right time.

Stoughton 11, Post 118 7

Stoughton got off to a quick start, scoring one run in the first inning and three more in the second. In the bottom of the second, Kenny Muir led off with a walk for Post 118. Ferriter singled and Brad Sportack walked to load the bases. Jeff Simpson singled to score Muir and Ferriter. Doonan then singled to score Sportack. Chase then walked and Justin Whyte singled to score Simpson and Doonan and Post 118 had the lead at 5-4.

Stoughton scored a pair of runs in the third and fourth innings each to regain the lead, 8-5. In the bottom of the fifth, Simpson and Doonan led off with back-to-back singles. Then Whyte singled to score both Simpson and Doonan to make the score 8-7 after four innings.

Stoughton picked up three more runs in the sixth and the game was called after six innings due to darkness.

Weymouth 4, Post 118 1

DeGiacomo made his first start of the season, going the distance and giving up four runs on five hits with two strikeouts. DeGiacomo gave a strong effort but walks and mental errors proved costly once again.

Post 118 scored its only run in the fifth inning. Signorelli singled to left and moved to third on a single by Robert Dongara. Signorelli scored on a groundball to shortstop by Hill. Defensively, Post 118 turned three double plays in the game.

Sports Notes

CYBSA thanks

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association would like to thank all of its players, parents, friends and families for participating in the 2007 Calendar Card fundraiser. The daily drawings began on June 1 and will end on June 30 with a $1,000 grand prize.

So far, many winners have been from Cohasset and as far away as Indiana. The top three players who sold the most calendar cards and won prizes themselves are (first place) Trevor Tedeschi, (second place) Harrison Martin and (third place) Will Schwartz. Trevor sold 55 cards and won $300, Harrison sold 39 cards and won $200 and Will sold 38 cards and won $100.

The CYBSA would like to thank everyone for making this fundraiser a big success. For daily winning results, check out the organization's web site: CYBSA.net.

Town soccer registration

Registration for Cohasset Town Soccer is now open for the 2007-08 fall/spring season, for kids in grades pre-K through 8th. Register on line at www.cohassetsoccer.com

South Shore Spartans tryouts

The South Shore Spartans boys soccer club will be holding tryouts for the boys U12 team. The tryouts will be open to all boys born Aug. 1, 1995 or later. Positions open are for goalkeepers and field players.

Tryouts will be held Tuesday, June 26 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. and Thursday, June 28 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. All tryouts will take place at the Osborne Field on Main Street in Norwell. Please bring a ball, water and goalie gloves if you are trying out for goalie.

For further information or directions, please contact head coach Douglas Price, (781)264-3453 or via email at southshorespartans@yahoo.com

Summer basketball camps

Cohasset High School varsity basketball coach Dorian Bryant will offer two camps this summer for kids.

The Big Man & Point Guard Perimeter Camp, an intensive four-day camp, will be held July 10 through 13, for youths in grades 7-12. The Ultimate Development Camp is a two-day-a-week camp for five weeks, beginning July 2. Both camps are designed so that the camper receives quality instruction on basketball fundamentals.

Applications are at the Recreation Office at the Cohasset Town Hall or can be downloaded at www.cohasset-basketball.com. Go to Links/AAU Teams & Summer Camps/Cohasset Summer Basketball Camp. The deadline for registration is Wednesday, June 20.

Cohasset Triathlon Fact Sheet

What: 1st Annual Cohasset Triathlon

When: Sunday, July 8, start at 8 a.m.

Where: Start and transition area will be at Sandy Beach

The Swim: The race begins with a 1/4-mile ocean swim off Sandy Beach.

The Bike: A 12-1/2-mile bike will follow the swim. The course will begin at the beach and will head down Atlantic Avenue to Border Street. Riders will continue down Border to Gannett Road. In North Scituate, the course makes a right on Main Street towards the Cohasset Town Common and continues to Route 228. Turn right on Route 228 to Jerusalem Road. The final stretch will take riders onto Jerusalem Road and finally back to the transition area at Sandy Beach.

The Run: A 3.2-mile run that will loop around Little Harbor. Runners will follow Nichols Road to Jerusalem Road and turn left. The course will take the runners around the Common to Beach Street. Runners will follow Beach Street to Atlantic Avenue with the finish just a short distance from the transition area.

How to register: The Triathlon has reached capacity at 720 runners, with a waiting list of over 200 athletes. Sign up early next year!

Volunteers: E-mail billburnett@cohassettri.com for information on how you can help.

Charity bike ride

The Dick Melloni Youth Foundation (DMYF) kicks off the fall season with its annual Foundation Fifty-Five Charity Bicycle Ride to be held Sunday, Sept. 16.

The ride begins at the quaint Onset Harbor Pier in Onset and proceeds through 55-miles of Upper Cape Cod's most beautiful cycling beginning with the Cape Cod Canal. After enjoying the view of Cape Cod Bay from Scussett Beach, riders will proceed toward breathtaking vistas of the Plymouth Harbor and waterfront. Then, on to the Myles Standish State Park for a spectacular roll through the unspoiled State Forest, and back to Onset for post-ride check-in and festivities that include therapeutic massage, prizes, and a grand all-you-can eat pizza party.

Ample parking, clearly marked routes, maps, sag wagons, mobile tech support and first aid are provided. Rest stops have food, water and rest rooms.

Registration is $40 plus $250 in minimum fundraising contributions. All participants registered prior to Aug. 1 that meet the minimum fundraising requirements receive a professional quality cycling jersey with cool sublimated graphics unique to this year's event and a tote bag filled with useful and fun bicycling items. Late registrations are accepted, however, at that time jerseys are available on a first-come, first-served basis.

A full 100 percent of the proceeds from this fundraising event will directly support established DMYF programs for youths, including the "Lids-4-Kids" bicycling helmet safety program, the DMYF Child Literacy Program, and our "CARBS" (Children Always Ride Buckled Safely) Program to promote child car seat safety to name a few.

This is a sanctioned 501-3C charity, and as such all donations are fully tax-deductible. For a registration form or information regarding sponsorship or volunteer opportunities, call Rich or Kim Melloni at 508-295-5035 or email melloni@comcast.net, or visit www.dmyf.org. Riders can register online at www.BikeReg.com or www.Active.com.

Searching for artifacts of original Minot Light

"Many people see the placing of the plaque as the icing on the cake," said Vic Mastone, director of the Massachusetts Board of Underwater Archaeological Resources. "But in reality it was the flour that was thrown in to get the batter started."

Mastone, who had often thought of conducting an archaeological survey of the debris field of the 1851 tragedy, met with the Coast Guard's Atlantic Area Historian, Dr. William Thiesen, and together they began assembling a team that could pull off such an event with benefits that would affect the working lives of dozens of service personnel. The proposed archaeological site visit would serve as a training mission — or, rather, a collection of training exercises — for Coast Guard divers, the buoy tender's crew, and even an anti-terrorism robotics specialist.

The 11 divers, gathered from Maritime Safety and Security Teams (MSSTs) in Boston, New York and San Diego, stood to be the stars of the show. Their mission was to lay out a searchable grid under the guidance of Mastone and Lieutenant (junior grade) Keith Meverden, a primary investigator working for the Coast Guard's Sector Lake Michigan out of Madison, Wisc., and then explore the sea floor for any signs of the lighthouse's remains. The Abbie Burgess' crew played a supporting role, offering an excellent platform from which the divers could operate on the tender's spacious buoy deck.

What was the end value of the exercise to the divers and the tender crew? Should the need ever arise, the divers have now had valuable in-the-water experience laying out a searchable pattern on the sea floor, the methodology of which could theoretically be applied to a search for a lost boat or plane, and the tender crew is now trained in how to support the divers in such an effort.

As Mastone said, "The archaeology is just the fun part. There are much more important things happening here than a search for artifacts."

Monday's dives returned immediate results. Splashing into unseasonably warm 59-degree waters the divers laid their grid, familiarized themselves with the bottom, reported excellent visibility up to 15 feet, and began their search. Magnetometer scans of the area earlier in the spring showed a significant magnetic anomaly southwest of the lighthouse that helped define the original search area.

As the divers ascended from their first plunge, Meverden approached retired Coast Guard Chief Warrant Officer Sandy Schwaab.

"How big would a power cable be for a light like this one?" he asked.

"Oh, about three or four inches in diameter," Schwaab answered.

"Well, we think they've found it."

But the rest of the day's dives proved a bit more frustrating. An iron ladder, bits of an iron grate, and some iron poles raised hopes, but not eyebrows. The big score, the lighthouse's lantern room, still remained undocumented.

Adjusting their field for day two on Tuesday, the divers enjoyed the added "eyes" of MSST Boston's "ROV," or remotely operated vehicle, guided by GM1 Carl Shipley. Intending to send the small, twin-propeller robot to work near the divers, Shipley found that the current near the light was too strong for the device. Instead of fighting it, he let the current take it the way it wanted to, away from the ledge. Serendipitously, his resignation to temporarily submit to the power of the sea led to the most considerable discovery of the week, as the ROV cast its lights on a gathering of suspected tools and other construction materials. The divers marked the site for further exploration later in the week.

Chief Warrant Officer Paul Dilger, commanding officer of the buoy tender Abbie Burgess (right), discusses plans for the first day's operations with dive team leader Lieutenant (junior grade) Keith Wilkins.

On Wednesday morning, dive operations halted for a remembrance ceremony for the two lightkeepers lost in the 1851 storm. Thiesen, Schwaab, Coast Guard Historian Dr. Robert Browning and others spoke briefly before the deck crew of the Abbie Burgess prepared the 5,000 pound "sinker" to which the Foundation for Coast Guard History's plaque was affixed for dropping over the port side. Once the stone was safely in place and ready for its final descent, Chief Warrant Officer Paul Dilger, commanding officer of the tender, offered a brief and final salute.

"Keeper Antoine, Keeper Wilson, your sacrifices have not been forgotten, and they will not be forgotten. May you rest in peace." The Coast Guard personnel saluted as "Taps" was played and the sinker was released into the ocean, ultimately landing squarely between rocks on the sea floor, 31 feet below.

With the ceremony completed, the divers returned to work, and the gathered historians and archaeologists continued their discussions. All agreed that if enough archaeological evidence could be produced from the dives, an extension of the National Register of Historic Places designation for Minot's Lighthouse should be sought to include the debris field. Mastone, too, dreamed of another major possibility, an underwater preserve that could feature an historic trail for divers.

"The plaque sitting on the bottom has me thinking that we could have markers leading recreational divers from the plaque to say an artifact 20 feet away," he said. "From there, they could find the next item of interest, and so on." Should Mastone's office have the chance to create it, the preserve would be the first of its kind in Massachusetts waters.

And the placing of the plaque came with other "firsts" as well. "This is the Coast Guard's first step in recognizing the losses of lighthouse keepers," said Coast Guard Historian Dr. Robert Browning. "I think that we're going to try to do a lot more of these events in the future."

Two of the 11 Coast Guard divers involved with this week's Minot's Light dive embark on their next exploration of the sea floor.

A fitting feat

Relay for Life continues to remember, honor

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

When Cohasset's Alumni Field was built about a dozen years ago, it was envisioned that it would be the scene of many an athletic contest.

However, the high school field — home to the recent CHS Lacrosse state champions — has doubled over the years as the setting for Cohasset's Relay For Life, where teams compete for a common goal: raising money to fight cancer.

In fact Cohasset High lacrosse defenseman, Nick Lieberman, who will be a sophomore in the fall, traded in his cleats for sneakers Friday and Saturday while he became part of another team, "All Ryled Up," that incorporated his grandmother's maiden name, Ryle.

"There is a history of cancer in my family," Nick said, explaining that for him the luminaria ceremony that takes place Friday evening was the most moving. There was a "bunch" of luminaria bags with candles in memory of his grandmother, he said. Nick, who also plays football for the Skippers, was also a volunteer helping with setting up and "taking down" the Relay.

This year's Relay, the 12th annual in Cohasset, was the "best event we have had," said Relay chairman Harry St. Onge. "We had more survivors and more supporters attend," he said. "I have always said there are two parts to the relay. The first is the fund raising and the second is participation and creating awareness about cancer. We were successful on both parts. We raised more money last year but this year's event was special. It is always rewarding when people, who experienced the event for the first time, tell you how much it meant to them."

First-time team "Gems and Jewels" from Scituate is a case in point. The team had 25 registered but more arrived on Friday evening.

"I participated last year as part of a different team," says Allison Crowell. But when her friend Paula Jewell was diagnosed with breast cancer in February, Crowell formed the "Gems and Jewels."

"It was just unbelievable how many people rallied to support us," she said. Crowell explained that Jewell provided the inspiration for the team. However, the team was also dedicated to another friend and young mother who was recently diagnosed with lymphoma.

Crowell explained the team is for friends and family who are the "gems and jewels in our lives." The team received a Bronze Award for raising between $2,500 and $5,000. The team raised upwards of $4,000, Crowell said.

Craig Bleicken was back for his 10th year as a relay volunteer. He said seeing cancer survivors come back provides inspiration.

Last year he recalled when cancer survivor Katie Egan, who was then a Hingham High junior, spoke at the relay. A few years earlier while at Foster Elementary, Katie's school organized the relay team, the "Yellow Polka-dotted Penguins" in her honor. Katie is headed to Boston College this fall.

"Seeing her come back and speak made it all worthwhile," Bleicken said.

St. Onge, the relay chairman, put it best: "We continue to celebrate life and hope for the future."

More than $110,000 for the Relay has been raised so far. The highest money raising team was "Springtime for Shelly" for the adult teams and "Marga-Relay-Ville" for the youth teams. The "Most Enthusiastic" was Notrahs Forget Noone and the "Best Campsite" was Mighty Energizers.

In May 1985, Dr. Gordon Klatt took the first step of his 24-hour walk/jog/run around a Tacoma, Wash. track and raised $27,000 to support the American Cancer Society. Today more than 4,500 Relays, which are sponsored by the American Cancer Society, take place annually across the country, raising upwards of $300 million. Cohasset's Relay draws participants from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate.

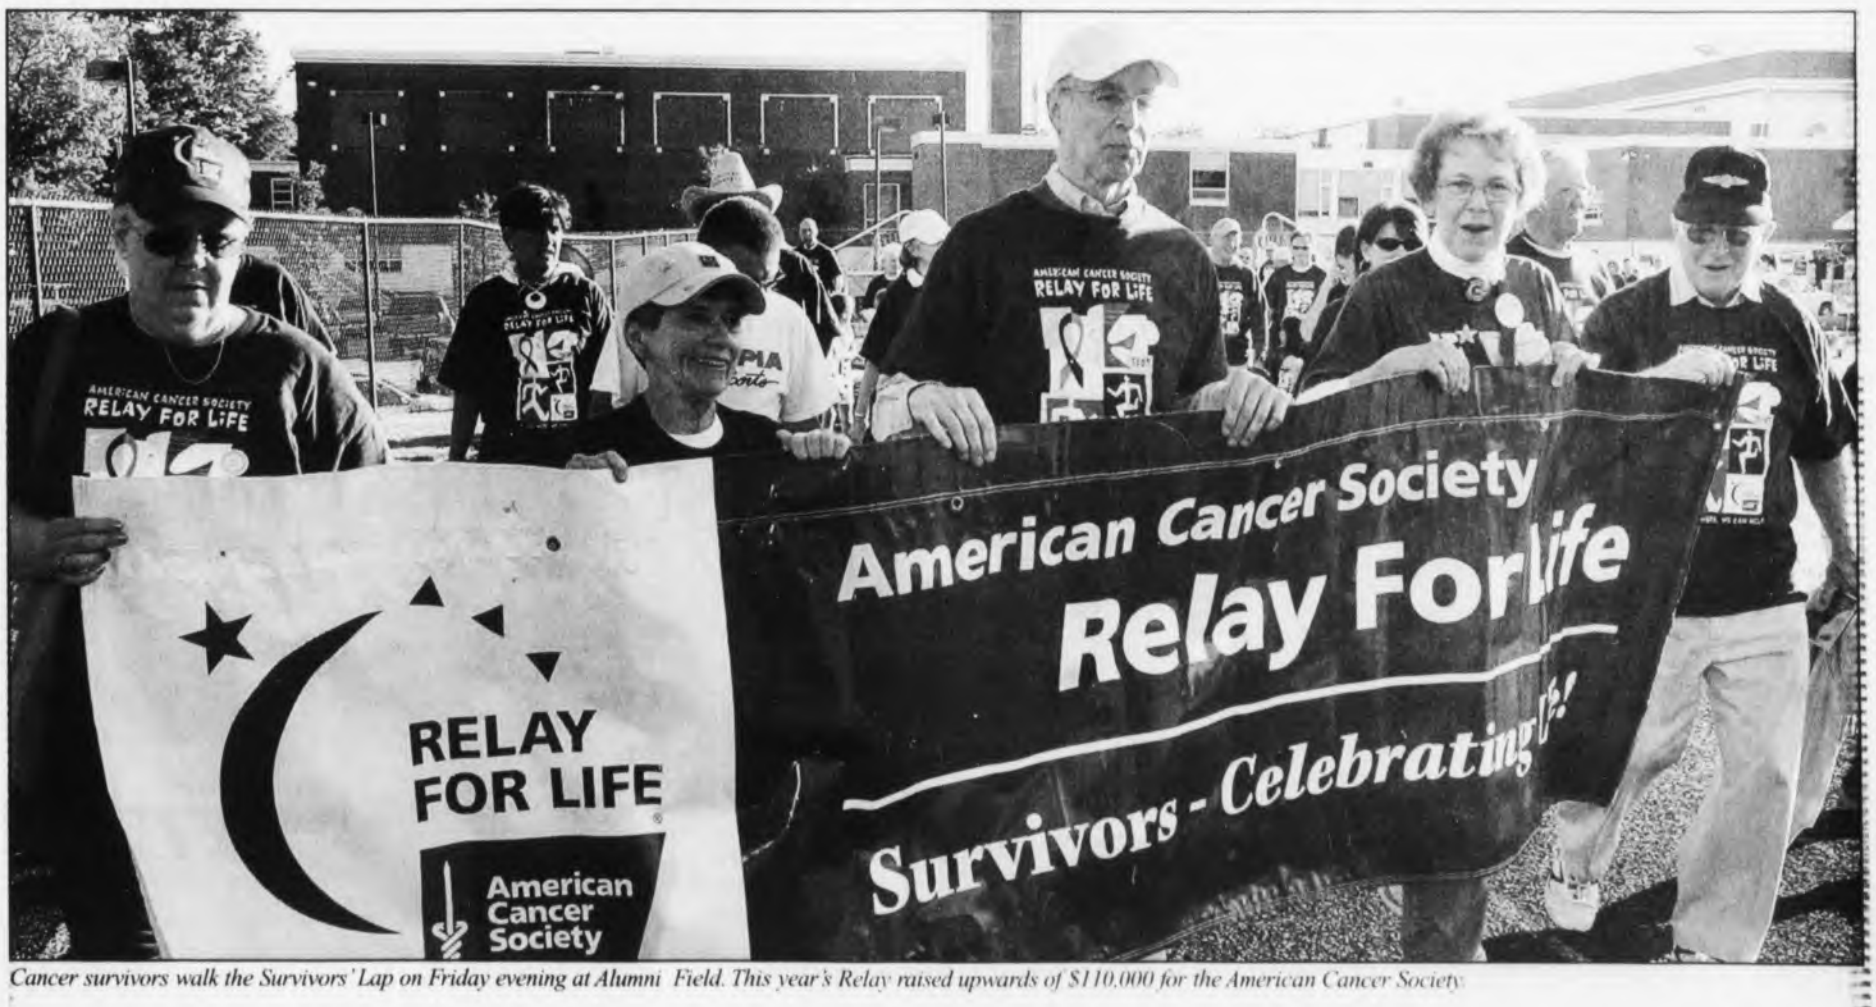
Relay participants light the luminaria at 9 p.m. Friday evening.



Laurie Berlinguet, a five-year breast cancer survivor, watches the opening ceremony Friday evening with her husband Paul and mother-in-law Judy Emery.

Paris: a city of misconceptions

By Emily Dumas
CORRESPONDENT

A few hours after booking my trip to Paris in January, I made a stop at my neighborhood Borders. I stocked up on Fodor's Paris, and grabbed every map off the shelf. I bought a language book and a menu decipherer. I studied the customs, read memoirs of ex-patriots, and was determined to fit in. I thought I knew everything there was to know about being a savvy vacationer in Paris, but I was wrong. While Paris has many nicknames, as an American traveler, I would add another: the City of Misconceptions.

Misconception No. 1: All Parisians hate Americans.

I was a little wary about my trip, after reading in almost every guidebook that the French have little patience with American visitors. They could pick you out of a crowd, seasoned traveler writers claimed, even if you didn't own a single fanny pack. But I found that the French exuded friendliness, and were entirely appreciative as long as I made an attempt at the language. My travel companion was my mother and while she had a few years of rusty high school French under her belt, I could barely utter a terribly pronounced "Bonjour" without blushing. But I found as long as I could freely use the basics — "si'il vous plait (please), "merci" (thank you), "Bonjour" (hello) and "au revoir" (goodbye) — the French couldn't help but smile. Even when my mother one time asked for a dress instead of a jug of tap water, our waiter couldn't have been more polite.

One of the many streetside cafes, perfect for a quick croissant or a salade nicoise.

No. 2: The Mona Lisa is overrated. Get in and get out, but only if you can survive throngs of Japanese tourists.

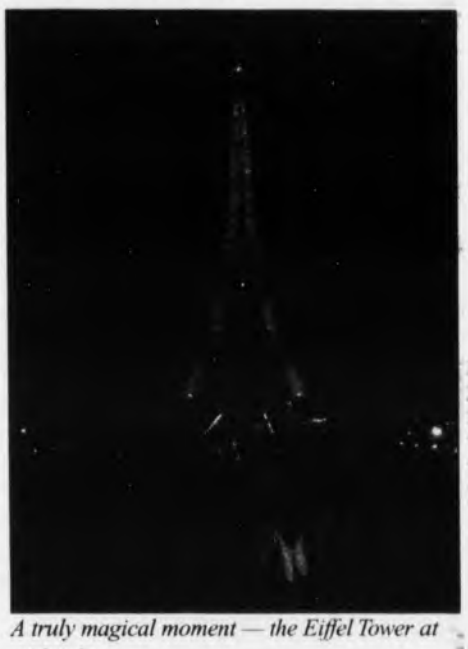
My mother and I decided that while we didn't want to spend an eternity in the Louvre, if we had come back to the States without a glimpse at Da Vinci's most famous work, my father might disown us. Since the Lourve is open on Wednesdays until 9:45 pm, the best strategy is to go late. For the record the Mona Lisa is breathtaking and bigger than my guidebooks inferred. At such a late hour, there were no large tour groups or even cameras flashing, as photography was forbidden. I was able to get five feet away from the Plexi-glass enclosed masterpiece, lost in her dreamy stare. It was a moment I would never forget.

No. 3: The French like to dress up therefore shorts and sneakers are taboo.

Weeks before our trip, my mother and I spent long hours thinking up the right outfits and trying to find the correct shoes to bring to ensure that we would exude Parisian chic. While the French like to look nice, they have no problem with sneakers or jeans. What we did notice was that French women always wear nice shoes. Whether it was a 20-something or octogenarian, their shoes were leather, heeled, and fabulous.

No. 4: Stick to an agenda, use your Zagat, or else you will waste precious sightseeing time.

By the third day, Mom and I were ready to burn our Zagat dining guide. For us, Paris was all about being spontaneous. While we did thoroughly enjoy our five-course meals at the Zagat-rated restaurants, some of our best meals were at small streetside cafes.



The French can eat forever. They believe in the quality of the dining, not the quantity. Portions are small but no one ever goes hungry. If you don't ask for l'addition (the check), the waiter will not bring it. Thus we usually spent two or more hours eating just one course and enjoying a single carafe of wine. Mom and I would talk, eat, and observe the hustle and bustle that is quintessential Paris.

One night at a café, an Italian man, by himself, started a conversation with us. He was tri-lingual and a traveling businessman who spent his year traveling between Milan, Paris, and New York. Our conversation was peppered with English, French and Italian and it was at this point, as we successfully navigated this language triathlon, that we felt truly European.

No. 5 The Eiffel Tower is a must see, but the area is choked with sightseers.

I spent the last fleeting moments of my 24th birthday in front of the Eiffel Tower.

My mother's Uncle Tom, who was also vacationing in the city, had just taken us out to dinner. When we told him we wanted to see the famous landmark, he begged us not to go, suggesting that the area was dark and could be dangerous at night for two women travelers. So we promised him we would head back to the hotel and bid him adieu. But like wicked and conspiring children, my mother and I just looked at each other. "We're doing it," we said and bordered the train to the Trocodero, the plaza toted as the best place to see the tower from afar. As we exited the Metro, and rounded the corner, the lighted Tour Eiffel arose from the midnight darkness. For that one moment, Paris existed only for my mother and me.

A truly magical moment — the Eiffel Tower at midnight.

OBITUARY

John T. Day Jr.

Attorney in real estate conveyance field

John T. Day Jr., 55, of Hingham, died suddenly June 12, 2007.

Born in Boston, he was the son of Margaret (O'Connor) Day of Cohasset and the late John T. Day. He had been a Hingham resident for 18 years.

Mr. Day was a graduate of Boston College High School, Boston College and Suffolk Law School. He was an attorney in the real estate conveyance field in the Greater Metro Boston area, and was a member of the Massachusetts Bar Association.

His focus and passion were his family, and Mr. Day was a loving husband, father, son, brother, uncle and friend. He enjoyed being involved with his children in their various activities, and either coached or assisted with their soccer, basketball and hockey leagues. He enjoyed tennis, running, sailing and anything to do with the water. He took great pride in his family name. He was named after his Dad, who was also an attorney, and he in turn gave his name to one of his sons.

Mr. Day was gentle, happy, generous with his time and resources, warm and had a silly sense of humor. He enjoyed socializing and entertaining friends. He was a fan of Boston sports teams, including the Red Sox, Patriots and Boston College football.

He leaves his wife, Kathleen A. (Madden) Day; his children, John T. Day III, Patrick Madden Day and Colleen O'Connor Day, all of Hingham; his mother; his sisters, Carron Day of Florida and Janet DeCourcey of Hingham; and his brothers, William J. Day of Louisiana, Thomas Day of North Reading and Michael P. Day of Andover.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Paul Church in Hingham. Interment in St. Paul's Cemetery, Hingham. Arrangements were handled by Pyne Keohane Funeral Home, Hingham.

Memorial donations may be made to Boston College High School Scholarship Fund, 150 Morrissey Blvd., Boston, MA 02125.

Annette Pollack, producer of Annette's Comedy Asylum, with Frank Santorelli.

Big show, big names, big laughs

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Boston television legend Rex Trailer and Frank Santorelli from HBO's just-wrapped "The Sopranos" will join South Shore comics Annette Pollack and Matt McArthur of Braintree and "America's Funniest Mom" finalist Christine Hurley of Plymouth on Friday evening for "Comedy Night" at the Hong Kong City Restaurant and Roseland function hall in Taunton.

"This is the biggest show of the year, with the biggest names," explained Pollack last week by telephone. "We've done shows in the upstairs function rooms at Roseland, but this time we're in the ballroom. Roseland is a quite historic venue. Many years ago, people like Glenn Miller and Frank Sinatra headlined at the old Roseland."

Pollack, a certified public accountant by day, has performed and booked comedy under her "Annette's Comedy Asylum" banner since 1993 when she began appearing regularly at Jimbo's Steak & Fin Restaurant in Braintree.

"I would never have believed it if someone told me back then that I would still be playing Jimbo's almost 15 years after my first appearance there. My approach is to book based on what will work best for each gig," says Pollack who recently presented a night of comedy — also featuring Trailer and Santorelli — at Phillips Old Colony House in Dorchester. "In Taunton, the wonderful and wonderfully funny Harrison Stebbins will host the show for me."

Matt Mcarthur

Rex Trailer

And some familiar faces will share the microphone.

"People will recognize Frank Santorelli immediately. He played the bartender at the Bada Bing on the 'The Sopranos' and he has done a lot of other television. We also have Rex Trailer who hosted 'Boom Town' on WBZ-TV in Boston for 20 years. Rex doesn't do stand-up, but he will sing and play the guitar. Matt McArthur is a very bright young comic who, like me, is from Braintree and Christine Hurley is just hysterical. It's going to be a great show."

Pollack has been making audiences laugh for almost 15 years now, but there was a time when she thought a calculator, not a comedian, would be her closest colleague.

"I used to go the old Ding Ho Comedy Club in Cambridge back in the early 1980s and enjoy guys like Jimmy Tingle, Steven Wright, Steve Sweeney, and my personal favorite, Don Gavin. Back then, I had no idea that I would ever do comedy. My dad was my best friend and he made a living as a pianist for 60 years, however, and I think may have gotten the entertainment gene from him."

Her late father may have been her inspiration, but Pollack's mentor was another local comic.

"When I started thinking that maybe I was funny, I turned to George MacDonald, a good friend, and asked him how I could pursue a career in comedy. He suggested I take a course at the Cambridge Center for Adult Education. I took a workshop on stand-up comedy, but at first I was just terrible. If I start something, however, I stick with it, so I didn't give up. I took more classes and kept writing and editing my material. One lesson I learned early on was that people at comedy clubs have the attention span of gnats."

With featured roles in films like "Celtic Pride" and on television shows like "Just Shoot Me," not to mention commercials on her resume, some might suggest that Pollack leave the South Shore behind for show business. She's hearing none of it.

"I have a house and two dogs. The dogs are my life, so I wouldn't even consider going on the road full-time," says Pollack whose comedy is based on her observations and her own life "My nephew, Jon Pollack, is a television producer in Los Angeles and has worked on shows like 'Spin City' 'Joey', and 'Father of the Pride', but I'm happy right where I am."

"Comedy Night," with Frank Santorelli, Rex Trailer, Christine Hurley, Harrison Stebbins, Matt McArthur, and Annette Pollack, is set for Friday, June 22 at Hong Kong City and Roseland function hall, 174 Broadway (Route 138) in Taunton. For tickets and information, call 508-822-2888 or 781-843-4833. Annette Pollack will next appear at Jimbo's Steak & Fin, 405 Franklin St., Braintree on July 13. Remembering 'RFK'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

The 2008 Presidential primaries are still months away, but already you can't turn on C-Span or CNN without seeing the current crop of Democratic and Republican candidates. Some are more slick than others, but all seem programmed and on script at all times.

In "RFK" — a stirring one-man show about the late Robert F. Kennedy now at Boston's Stuart Street Playhouse — we are reminded that politicians weren't always this way. Robert F. Kennedy — one of the two younger brothers of President John F. Kennedy and himself a candidate for the 1968 Democratic Presidential nomination — was different. He was passionate, idealistic and headstrong and those traits were clear to all who admired him and those who did not.

Written and performed by Jack Holmes, "RFK" is the story of Robert F. Kennedy's last four years. As the play opens, it is the day in 1964 when President Lyndon B. Johnson called the then 35-year-old Kennedy to tell him he would not be Johnson's choice for running mate that year. The news does not really surprise Kennedy, because he had a very strained relationship with the Texan who was his brother's vice president. Kennedy soon resigns as Attorney General. If LBJ doesn't want him on his ticket, then he isn't going to stay in Johnson's cabinet.

As RFK once said, "Life has a way of forcing changes on us." At the outset we see a Bobby Kennedy still grieving the loss of his assassinated brother, still at odds with the man who replaced JFK in the White House, and unsure of where he himself should go next.

Jack Holmes portrays the late Robert F. Kennedy in "RFK" playing at Boston's Stuart Street Playhouse through July 1.

Where he went next was head-on into a race for the Senate in New York, where, despite having been raised in the state, he was labeled a carpetbagger. The Kennedys after all were from Massachusetts and some believed they should stay right here. Kennedy is a skillful campaigner, however, not to mention scrappy, and he is eventually elected to the United States Senate from New York.

There he joins brother, Teddy, who had been elected to JFK's Senate seat in 1962. We learn, they pass notes to each other during Senate hearings and that while Teddy may be younger in age, he has seniority in the senate, and is perhaps better-suited to the job.

Admirers of our longtime senior senator will enjoy that he is presented here as a loving brother and a man of great humor. Also included here are Jacqueline Bouvier, whom RFK meets when his brother brings her to Hyannisport for the first time, his sisters Eunice, Pat, Rosemary, and Jean, and, of course, his parents Ambassador Joseph P. and Rose Kennedy. Holmes also has tender, telling passages relating RFK's love for Ethel Skakel, his wife and mother to his 11 children. There are passing references to RFK's love for the opposite sex and rumors about his relationship with Marilyn Monroe, but it is clear that RFK's real passion was for Ethel.

With his wife's unswerving support and the love and devotion of their ever-growing family, RFK was able to pursue his dream of making a difference for America. His opposition to the war in Vietnam, his strong leadership in the civil rights movement, and his advocacy for equal justice for all, resonate today as much as they did in the 1960s.

Whether he is taking on organized crime in Senate hearings, interrupting his own campaign rally to bring news of the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., delivering a stirring speech against apartheid in South Africa, or simply looking after a member of his own family, RFK - often described as the most ruthless of the Kennedys — is shown here to be more than just a powerful man. He is shown to be a man of powerful, deeply held convictions.

Holmes is clearly a well-researched Kennedy-ophile. He's also a fairly good likeness for the slenderest of the second generation Kennedy men, although the hair he familiarly runs his fingers through is definitely too long. Holmes has also done a good job on that familiar, famous accent. All that said, while Holmes suggests Bobby Kennedy, he falls just short of ever really becoming the character. In addition, like all one-character shows this one has to cover a lot of territory in a through a single performer. Some of the text works very well and seems very naturalistic, and some it seems a bit contrived.

Despite some awkward script transitions from misty memories to strongly worded diatribes, Holmes ultimately does a wonderful job providing a clear look at a very complex man. Director Seth Greenleaf keeps Holmes in frequent motion and makes good use of Neil Patel's simple, but evocative set which serves as everything from RFK's office to a television studio and his Hickory Hill home. David Weiner's lighting design adds mood to the proceedings.

"RFK" is at the Stuart Street Playhouse, 200 Stuart St., Boston, for a limited run. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 1-800-447-7400 or go online at stuartstreetplayhouse.com

The middle necklace and bracelet set has an assortment of gemstones including ruby, tourmaline, sapphire and apatite. On the right is a three-stranded ruby zoisite and amethyst necklace.

Village shop offers jewelry, art

Epiphany Designs opens on Ripley Road

Finding the right piece of jewelry for that special occasion, whether it's a gift or otherwise, can be a trying process. Locating a unique painting or photo for a prominent wall in your home — a piece you can be proud to display — can take searching. For both situations, Faith Waltman, owner of the Village's newest store Epiphany Designs, hopes her shop can be the solution.

"Since coming to Cohasset I'm very excited and enthused by the business development plan the town has underway."
— Faith Waltman, owner

With an eye for beauty and a keen sense for quality art, Waltman has set up shop at 103 Ripley Road. Her art and artisan gallery has been open merely two weeks, but she's ready to become a village staple.

"I'd like to become a go-to place when people need to get a present for a special event or for themselves."

Purchase of streetlights possible

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When the sun sets on Cohasset, the streets are illuminated by the glow of hundreds of streetlights. The lights are often taken for granted, but the town pays a substantial amount annual cost, over $70,000, to light and maintain the 508 streetlights. However, if the town purchased the streetlights from National Grid there is a potential for significant savings.

At the fall 2006 Town Meeting, voters appropriated $8,000 to hire a consultant to undertake an economic analysis of the proposed town purchase of streetlights. George Woodbury of LightSmart Energy Consulting Services presented his findings to the Selectmen on Monday night.

"Acquisition will result in immediate savings," said Woodbury. If the town purchased all the streetlights, the town's annual payment for street lighting service would be reduced by approximately $32,360 per year, from $71,030 to $38,670, his research indicated. Once the street light purchase is paid off, the savings will increase over time.

The initial purchase price is around $57,000, which could be financed through appropriation, bonding (short-term or long-term lease) or cash reserves. The savings generated from the switch in ownership would recover this cost in just over 26 months.

Woodbury cautioned the Selectmen to

Smoking ban at Sandy Beach?

See readers' responses, page 12

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Smoking is no longer in vogue. No longer do hostesses ask "smoking or non" when trying to get a table at a Massachusetts restaurant. In Massachusetts, smoking has been banned in all workplaces, including restaurants, since 2004. A national movement to further eradicate smoking from public places is well underway. The new frontier is beaches.

A letter received on May 22 by the Board of Selectmen office strongly suggests that a no smoking ban be put in place at Sandy Beach. The anonymous letter is simply signed "Friends of the Beach." It seems the letter was spurred on by a May 13 Boston Globe article about a Windham, New Hampshire beach considering banning smoking on their town beach. After the article appeared in the Boston Globe, Windham selectmen voted to approve the smoking ban on the beach.

Many beaches in Southern California have already adopted the smoking ban and towns peppered throughout New England are following suit.

...among the reasons listed to ban smoking are: the litter produced from cigarette butts, the stench of tobacco smoke, and exposure of second-hand smoke to young children who frequent the beach.

"It's way past time that Cohasset took immediate steps to do what's right and protect the health and beauty of our citizens and natural resources," states the anonymous letter. The letter refers to smokers as "nicotine addicted polluters" and lists among the reasons to ban smoking is the litter produced from cigarette butts, the stench of tobacco smoke, and exposure of second-hand smoke to young children who frequent the beach.

Currently, there is no by-law in place

TODAY'S MORTGAGE MARKET
by Jim Sweeney

Can you Improve your Credit Score?
Yes, you can take steps to improve your credit score and No, it usually doesn't happen quickly. It also shouldn't be expensive and a local mortgage professional will be just as helpful as a "credit repair" company costing hundreds of dollars. If you are thinking of buying your 1st home in the near future and want to raise your credit score, or if a higher score is needed to obtain a lower rate refinance of a current mortgage, my first advice is to plan ahead at least 60 and preferably 90 days or more. The more time you have the more positive the possible results.
My next advice is to do a little research. Visit the "learn" section of MyFico®.com and the consumer resource section of the FDIC website at fdic.gov. You can obtain a free credit report without purchasing additional services at annualcreditreport.com but these reports will not contain your credit scores.
My final advice is, although there are many things you can do for yourself, a mortgage professional can save you time and is an excellent resource when seeking guidance in this area. They also have access to credit analyzing software able to ask "what if" questions to determine the effect of different actions on your credit score and can provide you with written recommendations to follow.
Liberty Mortgage offers these services to its clients with 3 and 6 month follow up reports and personal service you won't find on the Internet.
Jim Sweeney can be reached at LIBERTY MORTGAGE CORP., 720 Washington Street, Hanover, MA 02339; and is available to answer questions on this topic or any home financing issues. He can be reached at (781) 829-6700. (Next week: Are Advertisements of 1% mortgages for real?)

Police investigating overnight burglary

Cohasset Police Department Criminal Investigation Division detectives are investigating an overnight burglary that resulted in the larceny of electronic equipment from a residence on Beechwood Street in Cohasset. Preliminary investigation revealed that the house was burglarized between 11:30 p.m., June 19, and 8:15 a.m., June 20. The point of entry is believed to be an unsecured door leading into the kitchen of the victim's residence. The residence was entered while the victim was sleeping.

Detectives believe that this incident is consistent with a series of other similar overnight burglaries that have occurred across the South Shore over the course of the past five months. Cohasset detectives are working with detectives from the other affected communities and are pooling evidence in an attempt to progress the investigation. Residents are reminded to secure their doors and windows at night and are asked to report any suspicious behavior, unusual noises or suspicious vehicles (moving slowly, driving without lights, etc.) to the police department immediately.

Police Chief James Hussey said most burglaries occur during the daytime when no one is home. "This type is a lot different – because there is more of a chance for the homeowner to confront the intruder."

"...there is more of a chance for the homeowner to confront the intruder."

— Police Chief James Hussey

Hussey said residents should lock first floor doors and windows and report anything unusual, even a dog barking in the middle of the night if that is not the norm. For those without air conditioning Hussey said some hardware stores sell devices that will prevent a window from being opened enough that someone could climb through.

Any information concerning this incident should be provided to the Cohasset Police Department CID at 781-383-1055, ext. 1047 .

Small boat overturns

The Cohasset Emergency Dispatch Center received a report of an overturned boat in the area of the Cunningham Bridge on Atlantic Avenue in Cohasset at approximately 8:25 p.m., Monday, June 25.

Members of the Cohasset Police Department and the Cohasset Fire Department were immediately dispatched to the scene. The first police officers to respond discovered five people in the water, most without life jackets, clinging to an overturned skiff, which was approximately 9 feet in length and powered by a very small gas engine.

Rescuers from the police and fire departments were able to pull all of the people from the water, which included two teenaged girls, two men, and a 12-year-old boy. One of the men was transported by Cohasset Fire Department ambulance to the South Shore Hospital for observation. The others were treated on scene for minor injuries and assisted home.

As a result of a preliminary inquiry, Cohasset Police Officers were able to determine that the people on board the skiff are renting a summer home in the area of Atlantic Avenue. These people, who were unfamiliar with the turbulent water and currents in the vicinity of Cunningham Bridge and Little Harbor, attempted to negotiate a ride through rapid whitewater in a borrowed vessel that appeared to be too small and underpowered for the conditions which they were faced with, resulting in the skiff becoming flooded and overturned.

"In this situation, the people had no idea of the waterways around them and thought they would take a little boat trip," Police Chief James Hussey said. "They were totally clueless of the tidal problems under the bridge, got caught up and the boat flipped."

The Cohasset Police have notified the Massachusetts Environmental Police Department and the Cohasset Harbormaster. These agencies will be reviewing the circumstances surrounding this incident.

POLICE BEAT

Police calls, crashes climb as summer starts

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

There was a spate of motor vehicle crashes over the past 1-1/2 weeks.

• At just past 11 a.m. on Monday (June 18), a 1994 Toyota was waiting to make a left into the parking lot at the 160 block of King Street when a 2005 Nissan, which was also headed south, rear-ended it. As it turned out the driver of the Toyota, who was a 23-year-old Weymouth man, did not have a license and will be summonsed to court for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle. The driver of the Nissan was cited for failure to use care when stopping. The Nissan had to be towed.

• A truck carrying loam rolled onto its side on Whitehead Road last Thursday (June 21). Police and fire responded and when they arrived the driver of the PA Landers truck was lying on the ground complaining of pain in his leg. OSHA was contacted as was the DEP and Board of Health. There was some leakage of hydraulic fluid but it was small enough not to be of major concern, Chief Hussey said. A landscaping crew at the site contained the spill immediately. Apparently the truck was dumping screened loam and may have been parked at an angle so when the dump body was raised it flipped onto its passenger side. The truck driver was taken to the hospital to be checked out, Chief Hussey said. OSHA is investigating and will determine if the truck was overloaded.

• Last Thursday (June 20) at just before 6 p.m. police said a 2005 Toyota was heading east on Pond Street through the green light at Route 3A when a 1998 Jeep traveling west did not yield as it attempted to turn left onto Route 3A and hit the Toyota. The operator of the Jeep was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic. Both cars were "hit pretty solid" and had to be towed from the scene, Chief Hussey said. One of the operators was treated at the scene and the other was transported home. No one was taken to the hospital.

• The driver of a 2002 Dodge was cited for failure to yield and use caution after it backed up into a 1999 Ford. The Dodge was backing out of one of the angled spaces along South Main Street on the French Memories side in the Village when it hit the passenger side of the Ford that was traveling on S. Main. The mishap occurred last Friday (June 22) at 11:36 a.m.

• A man was charged with drunk driving following an accident at about 3:30 a.m. on Saturday (June 23) on Route 3A near Whitney Woods. When police arrived a Ford Escort with a man in the front seat was off the road and had struck a stonewall. After speaking to the operator and making other observations, officers determined he was operating under the influence of alcohol and arrested him. He was charged with OUI (second offense) and marked lanes violation. The 23-year-old Hingham man was transported to the hospital with injuries that were not life threatening, police said.

Houses egged

Police received two reports of houses being egged last week but in both cases the victims did not want to see an officer and just wanted the incidents logged. Chief Hussey said the incidents could be something to do with an ongoing dispute between kids. The houses were on different streets (Church Street and Bates Lane), which are in the same neighborhood. "We assume if it gets to the next level, the homeowners will want to get us more involved," he said.

Outdoor furniture

Outdoor furniture including chairs, a bench and a table have gone missing from the former Henry's Root Beer stand in two separate incidents on June 17 and 18, police said. "The table and chairs went one day and the bench the next," Chief Hussey said. The incidents are under investigation.

Phone threats

Police are investigating two telephone threat complaints – which are unrelated.

In the first instance a resident answered the phone at 2:40 a.m. on June 18 and the male voice on the other end said "Who is this?" The resident replied, "you called here, so who are you?"

Apparently the caller then made a threat. The resident was advised of steps that can be taken through Verizon's unlawful call center. The number the caller used was private and did not show up on caller ID.

In an unrelated incident, police spoke to a youth and his father about the youth making harassing phone calls to another teen that he knew. On Sunday, the mother of the victim talked to police who went to the offending youth's house and sat down with the teen and his father who assured police that the behavior would not be repeated.

Stolen cell phone

Police are investigating a stolen cell phone that the thief apparently has used to make calls. The girl whose cell phone is missing was not sure were she "lost it" and thought it was in her father's car. Her father had been out of town for several days. When he returned, they called her cell phone number and a person answered it and said he would return it by bringing it to the school. It has not been returned. Since the phone went missing, the girl has received a bill with charges for downloads and calls that she did not make, Chief Hussey said.

Protective custody

Police took an 18-year-old Scituate teen into protective custody following a complaint about a loud house party on Church Street on Monday (June 18) at about 11 p.m. Chief Hussey said a neighbor came into the station to complain about the party and officers went to the house and initially could not make contact with the homeowners. However, the officers saw a young man outside and determined he had been drinking. Hussey said the teen told police he was heading home and started walking toward a vehicle so police took him into protective custody.

Officers did eventually make contact with the homeowner who had returned home to find that the son had some friends over and sent them home.

The Scituate teen had no alcohol in his possession but because of the state he was in, he was taken into custody, Hussey said.

Intoxicated man

An intoxicated man who is known to local police as having alcohol problems "slept it off" at the station after being reported as harassing customers at Stop & Shop on Tuesday (June 19). Chief Hussey said police received a call from the manager. The man, who lives in Scituate and is in his 60s, was apparently lying on the bench and would talk incoherently to people as they walked by.

Truck window

A walk-in to the police station on Wednesday (June 20) reported the rear window to his truck had been smashed with a can of ginger ale that exploded and spewed all over the inside of the vehicle. The truck owner told police he believed his girlfriend's ex-boyfriend was responsible. Police are investigating.

Hingham resident tapped by GateHouse

By Jon Chesto
JCHESTO@LEDGER.COM

GateHouse Media's New England division has tapped a former top executive at one of its biggest rivals to be its new chief operating officer.

Rick Daniels of Hingham, a former president and general manager of The Boston Globe, started meeting with GateHouse managers on Friday and will begin his job on a full-time basis on July 16. He will report to Kirk Davis, the CEO of GateHouse Media New England.

Daniels, 50, joins at a time when GateHouse has been growing steadily in the region. The company first entered New England a year ago with its acquisition of two media companies that included The Patriot Ledger, The Enterprise and the Community Newspaper Co. group of papers that includes the Hingham Journal. Fairport, N.Y.-based GateHouse has since acquired dailies in Taunton, Fall River, Norwich, Conn., and several weeklies in the region.

Davis said Daniels will provide valuable management experience and knowledge of the local market as the company looks to strengthen the coordination among its nine dailies and more than 100 weeklies in New England and expand its multimedia products on the Internet.

"I've had the pleasure of knowing Rick for a few years," Davis said. "We've developed a good professional rapport. It was in that setting that I realized that we share many common beliefs about what needs to be happening in the media. ...He has a great style about him, a great perspective on the business."

Daniels replaces Greg Rush, the former chief operating officer for GateHouse Media New England who left the company earlier this month. Daniels will work out of GateHouse New England's headquarters in Needham.

Rick Daniels of Hingham is chief operating officer of GateHouse.

"He has a great style about him, a great perspective on the business."
— Kirk Davis, CEO of GateHouse

Daniels worked at the Globe or for a Globe affiliate since 1983, when he joined the paper after three years at a major consulting firm. He steadily rose to a top executive level where he helped oversee several expansion projects for the paper while it was under its previous owners, Affiliated Publications, and its current parent, The New York Times Co.

During his time with the Globe, Daniels helped the paper launch the boston.com Web site, enter the direct mail business, invest in the company that owns the Boston Red Sox and a majority stake of New England Sports Network, and buy a minority stake in the Boston Metro.

Davis said Daniels' experience in those ventures will be invaluable for helping GateHouse develop new ways to grow revenue.

"He'll be helpful in strengthening the foundation of the company so we can grow more effectively and capitalize on new opportunities," Davis said. "He's a big thinker and he'll see directions that we can go in that will provide new avenues for growth."

Daniels was president and general manager of the Globe from early 2001 to January 2006. At that time he became president of Boston Globe Media, which includes the local media investments that are affiliated with the Globe.

Daniels left that job in August, and has since been working as a consultant and a guest instructor at Northeastern University.

Daniels said he's looking forward to working with a company that focuses on local news and advertising. He said the Globe has tried to become locally oriented, but it faces a challenge because most of the GateHouse papers are more firmly entrenched in their respective communities.

"It's very difficult without the kind of assets on the ground that GateHouse has," Daniels said.

He said he's also impressed with GateHouse's commitment to expanding its online and video products.

"All of us in the media have to have a fluency in multi-media," Daniels said. "If I didn't see that enthusiasm expand into every branch of the media that the business needs, I don't think I would have been particularly interested in the job. ... I have not been this excited about anything professionally for a long time."

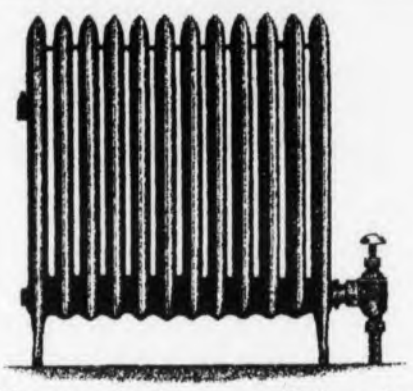
Selectmen support suspension of 'unfriendly 40B'

The Board of Selectmen has put its weight behind a grassroots effort to suspend the state law 40B as it applies to comprehensive permits not supported by the town, or as they are commonly referred to as "unfriendly 40B" projects. The selectmen recently received a letter from Walpole's Board of Selectmen urging them to write to their legislative delegation seeking support for the moratorium on 40B.



Cohasset's selectmen voted unanimously to get behind the effort. As a result the selectmen wrote to Senator Robert Hedlund and Representative Garrett Bradley last week.

"The Board truly understands the need for affordable housing for all citizens; however it has now become widely recognized that the law is simply not being applied as fully intended across the Commonwealth," stated the letter. They cited the strain large 40B developments could have on town services, including schools, public safety and other local services. Selectmen made clear they were not seeking to eliminate Chapter 40B completely, instead a suspension of projects not supported by the town.

The Housing Partnership Committee is actively pursuing possible locations for smaller affordable housing projects, these projects would likely be under local initiative program (LIPs), which are often referred to as "friendly 40B" projects.

Under Chapter 40B, a state law, a town's zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards are vulnerable to 40-B projects. Cohasset currently has 76 units (or 2.8 percent) of affordable housing.

It is unlikely that any change or suspension of the 40B regulations would retroactively apply to an already town permitted project, said Town Manager Bill Griffin.

Central air conditioning for homes with hot water or steam radiator heat.

If a home doesn't have forced air heat, installing ductwork for central air conditioning can mean major remodeling and expense. But a Unique Indoor Comfort® system doesn't require large metal ductwork, or major remodeling.

Cool air is delivered through small 2" flexible tubing that can easily be weaved through walls and ceilings, around studs and other obstacles. All that's visible are small, round outlets in every room. What's more, Unique Indoor Comfort® offers Lennox high efficiency air conditioning.

Proven in thousands of homes, easy to install Unique Indoor Comfort® is the central air conditioning solution for the older home.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

STAY COOL

Hi Cohasset. Here is hoping that today is in fact, cooler than the last few days. I know that I for one, as continue to do some recovering from surgery complications was way too hot. I hope that anyone out there who has issues with the heat was able to stay cool somehow and if you needed any help, it came your way.

For those of you who were upset that your news was not here over the last several weeks, please know that I do feel bad but due to some issues, was a bit under the weather. I know it sometimes makes people feel better to yell or send an email to reprimand but better yet would be to resend the item and I will get it in, I promise. Thank you to all who did understand.

I want to send out a very Happy Fourth of July message to all next week. Stay safe, enjoy parades, fireworks and cookouts and most of all, have fun.

ASP RETURNS

Cohasset ASP will be arriving home on Sunday either late afternoon or early evening and it would be great to have many join us at St. Anthony's parking lot to welcome them home. If you would to know around what time, send me an email on Sunday around 3 or so and I will try to give you a time: aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com

TEAM SPIRIT

On Sunday, Cohasset's 12-year-old Williamsport Team beat Hingham American 9 to 5 to win its first game of the Williamsport Tournament. On Monday night, the team took on Stoughton and beat them 10-0 after 5 by slaughter rule. The next game is Saturday, June 30 in Stoughton at noon. Come out and support the team! Team spirit is so great.

PRE-PROM DVDS

Senior Parents who are interested in purchasing a DVD or Video of the 2007 CHS Pre Prom Reception from May 25th can do so by calling Shaun Galvin at 781-424-2197, or by email at shaun_galvin@yahoo.com. The cost is $20 each and you can also send your request by mail with a check for $20 per DVD or Video to: Shaun Galvin 573 Broad Street Unit 326 Cohasset, MA 02025.

DERBY STANDOUT

Deven Koswick from here in Cohasset has been named to the Headmaster's List First Honors at Derby Academy. A qualifying student who has achieved and A-(90) or better in all academic subjects has qualified for this. Her classmates voted her this year to the Student Council for grade 7. The council gives a student leadership opportunities to improve life at Derby for students and teachers alike. Deven also received coaches' awards in lacrosse. This award is in recognition of an athlete's contribution to a team's success as demonstrated through significant efforts benefiting all who partook: selflessness, skill, thoughtfulness, daily endeavor, attitude and a genuine love of the game. Deven also served as Captain of the Basketball Team this past winter. Great year, Deven. Your family and friends are so proud of you.

MALI INTERN

Sarah Noble, a member of the class of 2008 at Connecticut College, is spending the summer interning for the Coalition des Ong Africines en Faveur des Enfants (CONAFE/CANGOC) in Bamako, Mali. Sarah, a 2004 graduate of Cohasset High School, is the daughter of Howie and Stephanie Noble of Cohasset. She interns through Connecticut College's Toor Cummings Center for International Studies and the Liberal Arts, a highly selective, academically rigorous program that was created to give students the opportunity to internationalize any major. To complete the program, students must acquire foreign language oral proficiency; complete an overseas internship in their discipline and in the foreign language of the chosen country and present a capstone senior integrative project. This was very interesting news Sarah, you should be very proud of yourself as I am sure your family is. Great job.

PSYCHOLOGY INTERN

Ashley Faber, a member of the class of 2008 at Connecticut College, is spending the summer interning for the Boston University Department of Psychology. Ashley, a 2004 graduate of Cohasset High School, is the daughter of Stephen and Lesley Faber of Cohasset. She interns through Connecticut College's Certificate Program in Community Action and Public Policy (PICA). Congratulations on this wonderful news Ashley.

HIGH HONORS

Hats off for Daniel Sullivan, a post-graduate student at New Hampton School in New Hampton, N.H.! Daniel, who is the son of Michael and Mary Sullivan of Cohasset, has been placed on the high honor roll for the spring term. Daniel also participated in varsity golf this term.

That is all the news for this week. Send it all in to me next week by Tuesday at 5.

ENGAGEMENT

Kelly-Marie O'Donnell and Daniel Ruane

O'Donnell – Ruane

Kevin and Donna O'Donnell of Cohasset announce the engagement of their daughter, Kelly-Marie O'Donnell to Daniel Ruane, son of Frank and Susan Ruane of Brielle, N.J.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Cohasset High School and the University of Vermont. She is currently employed as a sales representative for Lorillard Corporation in Stowe, Vermont.

Her fiancé graduated from Manasquan High School in New Jersey and the University of Vermont. He is currently employed as a golf pro for Stowe Country Club in Vermont.

An Oct. 2007 wedding is planned in Cohasset.

Our World Museum to host summer activities

David Hosp to discuss his new book at library

Paul Pratt Memorial Library and Buttonwood Books will welcome Cohasset resident David Hosp at 7 p.m., on Wednesday, July 11, at Paul Pratt Library, 35 Ripley Road. Hosp will discuss his new book, "Innocence," a new legal thriller inspired by the author's own experience as an attorney for the "Innocence Project."

With "Innocence," Hosp returns to Boston and lawyer Scott Finn, the protagonist from his first book, "Dark Harbor." Finn has left the high brow Boston legal community and has hung his shingle as a solo practitioner. The differences between billing the company's time and being a rainmaker responsible for the daily expenses and staff are enormous. When the bottom line is your own, there is less time for benevolent gestures. An attorney from his old firm, who does pro bono work for the Innocence Project, approaches Finn. He is asked to litigate an appeal on a 15-year-old case. Finn wrestles with his conscience and his wallet, but events happen that shake his world. He becomes invested and things happen when Finn is on board. "Innocence" is certain to be the talked about thriller of the summer – hard hitting, well written, great characters.

Hosp is a lawyer and a partner in the trial department at Goodwin Procter LLP, one of Boston's oldest and largest law firms. He is a graduate of Dartmouth College and George Washington University Law School.

Refreshments will be served at this free event. Anyone unable to attend who would like to order a personalized and/or signed copy, can call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 or order online at buttonwoodbooks.com.

Beekeeping workshop July 21 at Holly Hill

Police launch poster campaign with local merchants

menting programs sponsored by Operation Lifesaver, an international organization devoted to education about train and grade crossing safety.

This week, the police department began a new phase — a community poster campaign involving local businesses. Officers dropped posters off with merchants and requested they be hung up in storefront windows.

"It's a community effort. It can't just be the police. It has to involve the schools, the merchants and the community-at-large," says Sergeant Bill Quigley, "the more information we can get out to residents, the better off we'll be."

Residents should take the time to read the informational poster as they shop in the Village or stop for a cup of coffee.

"We can't stress enough that the town now has live tracks," says Quigley, "drivers need to really pay attention and take a strong look both ways when crossing the tracks."

Live tracks mean drivers and pedestrians need to get used to grade crossing. Cohasset's grade crossings are located on North Main Street, lower King Street, Sohier Street, Beechwood Street and Pond Street. Safety measures include leaving at least 15 feet between the hood of their car and the track. Trains are typically three feet wider than the tracks. Cars should never try to go around lowered gates, or try to drive under the gates as they drop to a lowered position.

Important to note is for safety reasons, as not all grade crossing warning systems are operational, train horns will be sounded as the train approaches street crossings throughout the summer. Flagmen will be employed at grade crossings to stop roadway traffic until the warning systems are thoroughly tested and placed in operation. The establishment of a quiet zone for the entire Greenbush line is currently in the works.

Dispatch Supervisor Thomas Wigmore chats with retired Police Chief Brian Noonan, who was working a detail in the Village on Wednesday. Wigmore was distributing train safety posters to local businesses, including French Memories, shown at left.

In the meantime, Quigley suggests drivers and those traversing the road should turn down their car radios or ipods when approaching the tracks so they can hear the horns of an approaching train.

The test trains serve a dual purpose. First, to properly test the railroad signal system to ensure it is fully operational and second, to train the crews that will be operating the trains. The trains will begin running at a relatively slow pace (10 miles per hours) then ramp up to a more standard speed of 60 miles per hours towards September, says Quigley.

"The poster campaign is just more education to alert residents to the fact [the train] is coming very shortly and they need to take proper caution and not take unnecessary risks," says Police Chief James Hussey.

The MBTA and all five Greenbush towns have embraced the Operation Lifesaver program. During the school year, Officer Lisa Matos who was specially trained by Operation Lifesaver visited every school classroom to talk to them about train safety. Each presentation was designed to be age-appropriate.

In addition to educational outreach, Cohasset Police have adopted a tough zero tolerance policy for individuals who are found trespassing or walking on the tracks, says Hussey.

"This is matter of life being saved and we want to make sure it's clearly understood that's it very dangerous," to linger on the tracks, he says, "we are going to seek criminal complaints against anyone we find trespassing on the MBTA right of way."

Residents are encouraged residents to call the non-emergency police line if they see person(s) on the track not wearing orange emergency vests signifying they are MBTA-related personnel.

Operation Lifesaver is a non-profit, international continuing public education program first established in 1972 to end collisions, deaths and injuries at places where roadways cross train tracks, and on railroad rights-of-way. Operation Lifesaver programs are sponsored cooperatively by federal, state, and local government agencies; highway safety organizations, and the nation's railroads.

Triathlon ready to roll

Safety plan is being put in place

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The first annual Cohasset Triathlon is gearing up for a big splash — and it won't just be the 720 athletes hitting the water. Race day is Sunday, July 8 and event director Bill Burnett couldn't be more excited about how the triathlon has come together.

"Never did I imagine the Triathlon being where it is today," said Burnett at the Board of Selectmen meeting on Monday night. With hundreds of athletes, scores of volunteers, generous sponsors and a deserving charity, Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF), the Triathlon is set to be everything Burnett could have hoped for nine months ago when he approached the Selectmen about the Cohasset Triathlon.

"Everything is coming together," said Burnett. An integral part of the event is ensuring the safety of both athletes and residents. In that spirit, Burnett along with Police Chief James Hussey, police Sergeant Bill Quigley, Fire Chief Robert Silvia and EMS coordinator John Dockray came before the Selectmen to discuss the safety plan drafted for the Triathlon.

"We have a safe plan designed to keep residents and athletes as safe as possible," said Hussey. The plan calls for 15 detail officers to assist with traffic with some handling multiple locations during the three-leg race. Two motorcycle officers will patrol the course.

Paramedics and fire officials will be standing by at Sandy Beach. The Fire Department has made arrangements to have three ambulances available in the event of an emergency. One will be stationed at Sandy Beach, one will travel the route and another will be left at the Fire Station on Elm Street.

"We want people out there in their lawn chairs cheering on the athletes."
— Bill Burnett, event director

"We don't want to strip resources of the Town of Cohasset for the race," said Silvia, but he believes the plan strikes a balance between providing for the town and ensuring the safety of race participants, "I think we'll be more than adequately prepared for all instances."

Two thousand water bottles have been donated by O Water to fend off athlete dehydration. Water stops will be set up throughout the course. The railroad tracks on North Main Street, which have been the site of a few bicycle accidents, will have rubber mat placed over them to prevent bicycle tires from getting stuck in the track.

The triathlon racecourse, portions of which are spread throughout Cohasset and parts of Hingham and Scituate, may inconvenience residents during the morning hours. Atlantic Avenue from Beach Street to Jerusalem Road will be closed from 7:45a.m. to approximately 11:30a.m. Sandy Beach will still be open to the public, but can only be accessed before 7:45a.m. Residents of the portion of Atlantic Avenue will be accommodated, with the help of the detail officers, if they need to get in or out of their homes during the race.

Burnett has sent out more than 75 mailings to Sandy Beach area households, "we're trying to be proactive, but some people are going to be inconvenienced."

In addition, residents should be aware parking in the Village from Dependable Cleaners to the Cohasset Hardware building will be blocked off from 8a.m. to 11:30a.m. Having cars backing out into the street with the athletes racing would create a dangerous situation, Hussey said.

Despite the minor inconveniences, Burnett hopes that many residents in the Sandy Beach area and throughout Cohasset will be part of one of the most important pieces of a successful race — spectators, "we want people out there in their lawn chairs cheering on the athletes."

Twenty percent of the Triathlon's athletes hail from Cohasset, others are from around the greater Boston area, and some are coming from as far as California, Texas and even Germany. There is an even split of male and female athletes.

Burnett's idea for a Cohasset Triathlon started when he first moved to Cohasset, "I knew the town would make a perfect venue for a multi-sport event." He mulled over the idea for the last couple of ideas and decided to "take the plunge this year." With challenging hills, scenic streets and a pristine beach, Burnett knew the Cohasset Triathlon had the possibility to be an attractive locale. His registration numbers are an indication he was right.

All net proceeds from the race, including athlete's sponsorships, will be donated to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation. Burnett predicts the ultimate donation to be around $50,000.

"It sounds like a win-win event," said Selectmen Chairman Gary Vanderweil.

Light House at Minot's Ledge,

Erected by Government at a cost of $39,000. First lighted Jan. 1, 1850.
DESTROYED IN THE GREAT GALE OF APRIL 15, 16, 17, 1851,
By which two of the keepers, Joseph Wilson and Joseph Antonio, lost their lives.

From the Archives is a weekly feature provided by Cohasset Historical Society.

Did you know that divers currently search the depths of the ocean just off Cohasset shore for the famed First Minot's Light?

Pictured above, the lighthouse was originally built on steel pile legs cemented into the ledge below. Letters from the Historical Society's archives from Captain William H. Swift of the Army Corps of Engineers to Captain John Wilson indicate that Swift was concerned with the safety of the lighthouse.

On at least four occasions, one as early as 1849, Swift inquired about the structure and how it was faring through the icy, stormy winter. Swift's fears were not unfounded, for only a month after his last letter, the lighthouse did indeed collapse, and with it took the lives of the two assistant lightkeepers.

You can see these letters for yourself! Stop by the newly opened Captain John Wilson House at 4 Elm Street where these letters are on display. The Wilson House is open Tuesday through Friday from 1 to 4:30 pm and on Saturday from 10 am to 2 pm.

BOSTON UNIVERSITY

says Waltman. With a selection of handcrafted jewelry, color-filled paintings by local artists and photography that captures New England's coastal beauty, Waltman offers a bit of every taste and style.

Epiphany Designs' basic philosophy is to provide a high quality product in an affordable range of prices. Five artisans, including Waltman, handcraft the distinctive collection of jewelry she displays in the store. By cutting out a "middle-man" and buying her materials in bulk to get discounts, Waltman says she is able to keep her products affordable.

However, she does not skimp on materials. Waltman only uses genuine gemstones, never glass or imitation. For the crystals that make their way into many of her creations, she only uses Swarovski.

"In my designs the range is from simple and classic to pieces that are a little more forward, a little more modern and a little more adventurous," says Whitman. Her pieces vary from chunky necklaces that will complement a summer dress to elaborate bridal pieces complete with freshwater pearls and crystals.

Among her trademark pieces are the "Anytime, any place and with anything," or Triple-A, bracelets which are designed to be worn exactly as the moniker implies. They are suitable for any occasion, whether it's a t-shirt or a cocktail dress. Each one has a different combination of multi-colored gems. They are delicate and refined, but not too fussy, Waltman says.

In addition the jewelry displayed in the shop, Waltman loves working with customers to customize a piece of jewelry — "they come in, we sit down with my design boards and play," she says with a smile. If customers are interested, she will teach them how to make their own jewelry. Waltman will also repair vintage (or otherwise) jewelry.

Epiphany Designs highlights other local jewelry artisans as well. The funky and colorful necklaces designed by Hullonian Paula Campbell are on display. While Debby Brams' individually handcrafted clay beads result in one-of-a-kind pieces. Lauren Waltman designs jewelry with young, casual, busy women in mind.

On the wall surrounding the jewelry cases is the artwork of local artists and photographers. Each piece is hand chosen by Waltman and she's proud to say, "by and large the artist featured here are well known." She typically will rotate the artists and offerings on a seasonal basis and hopes to have gallery nights periodically. The offerings range in mediums from canvas oil paintings to hand-painted vases to stained glass panes.

Peggy Roth Major from Scituate captures the beauty of the ocean and beach in many of her photos. One of Waltman's bestsellers is Major's photo "Rainbow Wave." The handcrafted stained glass pieces by Laurence E. McInnis hang in the window to capture the light — and perhaps they eye of passers-by. J. Marshall Dyke's rainbow abstracts beg to be a focal point in someone's living room.

Epiphany Designs got its start in Hull, but Waltman hopes to make a home amid the "supportive business community" of Cohasset village.

Faith Waltman holds her AAA bracelet line, which stands for Anytime, Anywhere and with Anything, from jeans to cocktail dresses. Some of the gemstones include ruby, amethyst, sapphire, tanzanite, garnet, labradorite, kyanite, and iolite.

"Since coming to Cohasset I'm very excited and enthused by the business development plan the town has underway," says Waltman, who attended the public kick-off meeting with the village consultant, Concord Square Development Company, along with two dozen other village merchants and property owners last week. She plans to do her part to make her store inviting and aesthetically pleasing. Part of her efforts, she says, will be making the back of her store as "lovely as the front of the store."

With the Greenbush train just steps from her rear exit, "so close I could hand a sandwich to a passenger," she hopes to capitalize on the daily commuter exposure the back of her store will get when the train begins regular service in the fall.

"Right now it is everyone's tacky backyard," says Waltman. Her backyard plans include an Epiphany Designs sign, with a spotlight, potted plants, a wrought iron table with an umbrella and a window box.

"We could go a long way in making it a nice place," says Waltman. It seems she's well on her way.

Launch Party is July 7

The Cohasset Sailing Club is a non-profit organization that exists to serve the citizens of Cohasset. For information on any of the following events visit cohassetsailingclub.com/.

Summer Launch Party – All adult members, parents of sailors, and friends are invited to the lobster feast and auction to benefit the club, which will be held from 6 to 11 p.m., Saturday July 7, at the Sailing Club, rain or shine. Dinner will be served from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Tickets cost $50 and are available by phoning Joyce Driscoll at 781-383-0122 or Claudia McKeon at 781-383-6125.

Donations for auction items are welcome. To donate call Jim Porter at 781-383-2029.

Instruction – Cohasset Sailing Club offers instruction in two categories: Junior, for youths ages 10 to 16 years old and Adult, for people age 17 and over. Training takes place on its fleet of nine 15-foot Capri 14, four Club 420s, and two lasers. The learning process includes a combination of classroom instruction and sailing. Adult training courses meet for 3 hours each Saturday morning for shore class and water training.

Dock Spaces – The club has limited dock spaces available for individuals who would like to tie up their dinghies. They can accommodate boats up to 12 feet in length and up to 5 feet in beam. No aluminum skiffs are allowed.

Free Sailing – The club offers the use of its fleet for free sailing to any member who has the necessary sailing knowledge. Free sailing is available from 5 to 8 p.m., Monday through Friday and from 1:30 to 8 p.m. weekends.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Open for discussion

The more the public knows, the better.

The state's Open Meeting Law was established to make sure citizens had access to all town government meetings. Beyond just allowing residents to sit in the same room as elected officials and listen to their discussion, the law was also intended to make sure decisions were discussed and made in a public setting. In other words, members of a board of selectmen couldn't call each other on the phone or send out e-mail the night before a big meeting and iron everything out so once they got to the board room they were ready to vote.

Last week, the State Administration and Regulatory Oversight Committee heard testimony from opponents to a number of bills that would increase fines and penalties for those who violated the state's Open Meeting Law.

If passed, penalties could include a $1,000 fine to a government body for not abiding by the law and $500 for each member who attended the meeting.

Imagine that; the Open Meeting Law would actually have some teeth.

Right now it's a joke, and many town boards and officials across the state don't really pay much attention to what they're required to do by law. And why should they? If they're found in violation of the law, the harshest of penalties has been a slap on the wrist from the local District Attorney's office and in some rare cases town officials are forced to read an apology during a meeting.

Big deal.

More needs to be done to make sure government officials are conducting business above board. In this age of e-mail, text messaging and instant messaging, the growing fear is that town government is being conducted in a vacuum.

Conducting the town's business comes with the responsibility of spending taxpayers' hard-earned money and keeping the public adequately and appropriately informed.

There are some town officials who might argue that they know best and the public doesn't need to know everything that's going on behind the scenes. But the intent of the Open Meeting Law is to make sure the process is out in the open.

We have not found this in Cohasset but in some towns executive sessions have been more of an excuse for officials to kick the press and the public out of the room so they can get down to real business. There are seven specific exemptions listed under the current Open Meeting Law. "Pending litigation" and "possible litigation" are popular phrases thrown out there as a reason to go into executive session, since practically anything could lead to a lawsuit.

We don't think the intent of the Open Meeting Law was to give town officials an excuse to end a meeting by kicking everyone out and closing the doors.

The Massachusetts Association of School Committees and the groups that represent municipal government aren't going to like having a law on the books that actually holds them accountable to the Open Meeting Law, but the public deserves to know what's going on.

The Open Meeting Law also covers rules and regulations governing the posting of meetings and the recording of minutes from meetings. While issues relating to posting of meeting times and places are few and far between, there is a real inconsistency across the board in how meeting minutes are managed. Some boards do a better job than others, and some are not holding up their end of the bargain when it comes to maintaining these crucial public records.

The Open Meeting Law has a lot of legs to it, and it can be confusing. We shouldn't assume every new town official, or even every veteran town official, knows every aspect of the law. Education is the key here, and making sure there are workshops and information packets distributed on a regular basis would help keep town officials from accidentally violating the Open Meeting Law.

But stricter penalties and hefty fines would go a long way toward preventing further abuses of the law and ensuring that the process is indeed conducted in a public setting.

Some training for the Cohasset Triathalon don't mind the chilly water

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Cor-ten steel guardrails

TO THE EDITOR:

Critics of the Cor-Ten guardrails should keep in mind the maxim: "Be careful what you wish for; you might get it"! Wishing for and working for an alternative might result in zinc coated metal that eventually rusts, especially where damaged, or in painted metal that in time badly needs painting that always is tardily done, or in wood that will reveal its own problems in time. There is no alternative as satisfactory in the long term as CorTen, which weathers to an attractive rusty chocolate brown, never needs painting or maintenance, and blends well with almost everything, but especially with nature.

Unfortunately in a society bent on instant gratification, it looks terrible for a while. But patience is rewarded, that is why it is so well liked by those familiar with its ultimate attractiveness; and its practicality, despite its somewhat elevated cost and initial ugliness.

A good example of thoughtful architectural design and tasteful exploitation of natural features is the famous and well loved five mile Recreation Path in Stowe, Vermont, which crisscrosses several times a roughly parallel small river. All of the footbridges are of Cor Ten, which complements beautifully the abundant greenery, flowering shrubs, the babbling brook, the occasional pasture etc. It is widely used in outdoor sculpture, as well as in bridges and other exposed steelwork.

Fortunately, it is unlikely that the State will change its well-considered specifications. There were good reasons for not choosing one of the less expensive alternatives.

HEALTH NOTES

Change on local and planetary scale

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

If you Google the phrase "shift happens video," you'll be taken to a wake up call about the future. A nine-minute presentation thrusts you into the reality of change on our planet, no more than in the area of health. Only this week in Massachusetts, every person is now officially required to have medical care insurance; an issue for a future Health Notes. Every day we see more evidence of change. This week we learn that long-term diagnosis and treatment of Lyme disease is in question; that extended periods of treatment with antibiotics may prove harmful. Change is everywhere. There is even a center for studying health system change to inform policy makers about how local and national changes in the financing and delivery of health care affect people. They do research and analysis to develop policy decisions, to improve the health of the American public. Also, the CDC lists five changes, which represent threats to health in America.

- Emerging infectious diseases (SARS, monkeypox, pandemic influenza)
- Terrorism
- Environmental threats (hurricanes, wildfires, toxic chemical spills)
- Lifestyle choices (tobacco use, poor nutrition, lack of physical fitness)
- Aging population

Habits change too slowly. We can all do things to respond to these threats to keep us healthy. For example, changes in the way infectious diseases are transmitted are forcing new procedures for insuring against contagion. We learn from recent news that biotic resistant Staphylococcus is more prevalent outside of the hospital environment. Thus, the need to be more careful about personal contact, i.e. good hygiene, like washing our hands. And antibacterial soap is no longer strongly recommended by doctors as before because it may promote resistance in bacteria. Instead the use of antibacterial wipes has been cited as preferable in many situations.

Terrorism is no longer something that happens elsewhere. Every day we hear of someone who has succumbed to the tensions of modern society and its supercharged pace of living. We must be aware that such tensions may be causing individuals near us to act irrationally and we should be prepared to take action if we observe cues which signal aberrant behavior. It's hard to be specific about such things, but if you see a neighbor or acquaintance change habits, it may be appropriate to discuss it with a friend you trust. Many of life's tragedies have been preceded by changes in behavior of the participants.

Even here in environmentally sensitive Cohasset, we have contamination troubles. Obvious threats are from polluted water, but the use of some common garden pesticides has been associated with nerve damage in humans. We should read the labels and ask our land care specialists about their knowledge of the stuff they put on our lawns and gardens. And perhaps be less casual about the disposition of the things we throw away.

And our lifestyle: diet, the temptation to eat and too much, to walk too little. Is now a good time to think about making some changes?

Advice to the elderly: Keep your perspective and take the right pills in the right order. As folks get older, their needs and attitudes change. For example, they have a greater assortment of pills and periodic activities to slow aging. The use of calendar boxes to store pills is an aid to health care, which has benefits to anyone taking more than two pills daily.

Changes in our society and the world are going on at an ever-increasing rate. Many are adapting and many are not; a cause for tensions all by itself. No easy answers exist but it's helpful to recognize and accept the fact that the pace is and will be accelerating everywhere from now on.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Hull using Black Rock Beach

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Black Rock Beach goings on — We have had quite a few calls at Town Hall regarding the work currently underway at Black Rock Beach. This is a Town of Hull project and has absolutely nothing to do with the Town of Cohasset. Hull did get a permit from the Cohasset Conservation Commission to do the work in the beach area.

The Town of Hull received a grant to rebuild a seawall at the base of Green Hill from the same pool of State funds that helped Cohasset rebuild its seawalls. (Green Hill in Hull is the large residential hill just north of Black Rock Beach.) The only way for Hull to access this work site is from Black Rock Beach at low tide. This is why using the Black Rock Beach area is so essential. To give you an idea of the scale of this project they will be installing 10,000 tons of stone to rebuild the seawall to protect the homes on Green Hill. That's a lot of stone!

On Wednesday, June 27th we attended a meeting with the Hull DPW, the contractor, and the project-engineering consultant to see if we could get a few changes to lessen the Cohasset impacts. They agreed to several additional measures that should make the project less intrusive and safer for Cohasset. The equipment and porta-potty, shown in the photos, which are stored near the corner of Jerusalem Road and Forest Avenue will be moved to a visually less intrusive area of the beach. Based on the tides they will need to make trips with large trucks along the beach back and forth to the construction site. When they are moving equipment they will have the pathway marked with cones to alert beachgoers to the dangers. The cones will be removed at night. The construction personnel will alert beach goers when material will be moved across the beach. However, it would be best if Cohasset residents would use the portion of the beach along Jerusalem Road out of any area of construction, if at all possible.

If you have any questions or concerns, we suggest you call Marc Fournier, Director Hull Department of Public Works at 781-925-0900.

Rocky Beach – Green Hill: The porta-potty and equipment will be moved to a less intrusive area of the beach.

Sidewalk grading on Forest Avenue is making good progress.

Greenbush – The MBTA has told us that we are about to see the start of a lot of activity on the tracks. On or about July 9th they will begin track grinding. This is a very interesting process. You may remember that, early on, we talked about how short lengths of rail were welded into longer strings of rail. These "strings" were then laid on the railroad ties and welded together. However, there is no assurance that these welded joints are really smooth. So, the MBTA will be driving special purpose machines called track grinders along the tracks. These grinders will grind the surface of the rail to a consistent smoothness from one end to the other. If they didn't perform this operation there would still be small uneven places on the rails that would cause vibration aboard the rail cars as well as additional noise for the abutters who happen to be close to any uneven spots.

Another little known fact is that after rails have been in use for extensive periods of time, the normal wear and tear of service tends to make them become uneven. The MBTA and most railroads have internal standards regarding the smoothness of their rails and will periodically regrind their rails back to a smooth condition. Likewise, after extensive service, the wheels of the train cars tend to develop flat spots or go out of round. They are also periodically reground back to a smooth condition.

We also understand that the MBTA will be operating regular train equipment on the tracks starting on or about July 19th, as they continue their testing. The equipment you are likely to see will be a diesel electric locomotive and a single passenger car, called a control car. The control car is a very unique car. From the outside it looks just like an ordinary passenger car. But, it has a set of engineers controls duplicated in a special compartment at the end of the car. The reason is that the train will not be turned around between trips. The locomotive will pull the train cars in one direction and push them in the other direction. But if the engineer is confined to the locomotive when it is pushing the train, he (or she) won't be able to have a view of the tracks. The locomotive has been built so that it can be operated from within the locomotive or remotely from the control car. So, when the locomotive operates pushing the train it will be operated from the control car, which will now be at the front of the train.

The new traffic lights have now been installed at the Forest/ King /N. Main streets intersection. For know, the lights are set to blink red in all directions continuing the four way stop we have become used to. (Although, one resident reported to us a driver approaching this intersection from King Street just sailed through the intersection without hitting the brakes — not even a little bit. Please, please take care when driving through a construction zone. One bit of carelessness can be catastrophic.)

Forest Avenue – Last week we talked about the possibility of blasting to remove the last knob of ledge from the Forest Avenue sidewalk area. It now looks like we will be blasting, since according to the experts, this will be the safest way to get rid of this ledge. Before blasting begins, nine homes will need an insurance inspection to document the pre-blasting condition to protect the homeowners. This inspection and documentation is done at the expense of the contractor. By the way, all blasting done in Cohasset is tightly regulated by state law and is done under the control of the Cohasset Fire Department. They issue the blasting permits only after all of the permitting requirements have been satisfied. Further, they usually have Fire Department personnel on site during any blasting.

Grading for the sidewalk continues to make good progress. The areas where the sidewalk will be laid are becoming quite visible as you drive up and down Forest Avenue. The old street surface will be ground and repaved during July and August.

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Who among us hasn't lapsed into muttering a string of four-letter, Anglo-Saxon functional verbs when confronted by a recorded voice...

If I lived in Boston and Tom Menino was running for another term as mayor I'd vote early and often for him, which I'm told is an old Boston tradition. In fact, every time I picked up the telephone and made a call I'd drop another ballot in the box for Tom.

I was reading the other day where he has banned the use of voicemail among the underlings in his administration if they want to keep their jobs long enough to attain pensionhood. I can even forgive Tommy a mumble or two if he sticks to his guns.

Who among us hasn't lapsed into muttering a string of four-letter, Anglo-Saxon functional verbs when confronted by a recorded voice instructing: "If you know the person's extension number . . ." or "Press one for English, press two for . . ."

Tommy, the Globe told me last week, was converted from the robotic to the human side when he called his Office of Business Services and had to sit there and wait while a recorded voice went through a long list of options available to him.

"That was the end of it," said the mayor.

Thereafter, he said, when he runs into the same recorded instructions, "I'll leave them a message saying, 'You're obviously not a part of the Menino Administration. Why don't you call me back and tell me who you're working for.'"

I hope whoever winds up running to be the first mayor of Braintree is reading this and thinking of the number of readers of voting age who may be doing it too while nodding their heads in agreement. But I digress . . .

I'm no rookie when it comes to telephones. I go back to the days when you picked up the phone and an operator asked you: "Number, please?" I can remember dialing VIctor for Braintree, GRanite for Quincy and EDgewater for Weymouth.

What a joy it was to make a phone call and know that a real person would answer it and maybe exchange a few pleasantries with you before putting you through to another real person, the one you wanted to talk to in the first place.

Now that I have reached an age when I can remember a "number please" girl, I have been relieved of any duties involving our phone. As a result, we have one of those wireless gadgets you can carry anywhere as long as you don't get too far from the house.

The buttons are on the inside of the instrument. When one end is held to my ear, the other end is not long enough to reach my mouth so I am constantly shouting into it. If I press it too close to my cheek, it frequently hangs up on me.

This is the situation when I make my weekly call to the drug store to renew some prescriptions. The automatic recorder requires me to take the phone from my ear and push the buttons for the numbers of the 'scripts and the pickup time.

If I'm not careful, I'll press the wrong button or, worse, I'll hang up on myself. Don't laugh. I've done it quite a few times, turning what used to be a two-minute request into a 20 minute struggle with my own telephone.

If Tom Menino ever tires of being mayor, I hope he opens a drug store.

Smiles, everyone, smiles

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

Remember that a horn is for warning other drivers of your approach, not for expressing displeasure with their audacity in merging onto the highway between you and the car you're pushing.

The Massachusetts population continues to drop as jobs migrate elsewhere, housing costs remain high, and roaming packs of border collies take their toll. The problem is apparently so serious that within a decade the state's economy may depend primarily on tourism rather than Megabucks ticket sales. Meanwhile New Englanders in general and Bostonians in particular have a reputation for being cold and snobbish, which isn't going to help us win the heart and mind of Joe Redstate from Backwater USA, is it? So I've put together a list of changes we need to make to show the world that Massachusetts is a friendly place, especially if you already have friends here and play decent tennis.

On the Road — I'm sure we could all stand another lesson in safe, courteous driving. My tip for the week is to follow the car in front of you close enough to make efficient use of space on the road, but not so close that you are actually pushing the car forward at your preferred speed. Although native Bay Staters have learned to see this practice for the gas-saving opportunity that it is, it tends to make newcomers nervous. Grandmother types, mostly. If you must tail gate always use the "three second rule": when a car pulls out into the passing lane ahead of you, at least three seconds should elapse before you attempt to crawl up its tailpipe, high beams a-flashing. Another rule of thumb is that as you weave in and out of traffic you should signal your intent to change lanes no later than one second after you begin to lurch sideways.

Remember that a horn is for warning other drivers of your approach, not for expressing displeasure with their audacity in merging onto the highway between you and the car you're pushing. That is what your middle finger is for.

Having grown up here, you and I know where we're going of course, but for the benefit of out-of-staters we should make it our goal to translate all road signs into intelligible English by the time North Koreans land on Mars. It would also be nice to add name signs indicating which road you're currently driving on. I hear that when you get lost, determining where you are can be quite helpful.

In the Schools — The Revolutionary War was fun, and important to those of us who lived through it, sure. But Massachusetts schools should not devote more class time to the Boston Tea Party than, say, math. I think that has been a mistake. Five people died during the Boston Massacre, okay? Five. And they were probably months away from contracting typhoid anyway. Let's move on.

Local Dialect —I think it would help dispel the idea that we're mired in the last century if we stopped calling drinking fountains "bubblers," carbonated beverages "tonics," and Ted Kennedy "Senator."

Biting Insects — This may be a dumb question, but is there a good reason we haven't eradicated mosquitoes yet? Are we afraid they may be an integral part of some ecosystem? Because I'd be happy to hang a bat feeder on my deck if it meant I could eat barbecued chicken that didn't taste like DEET.

Understanding Other Sports — For the sake of our future we need to knuckle under and try to get into the minds of NASCAR fans. A Prilosec commercial that's been airing a lot recently shows a fortyish woman camped out on the infield of a race-track high-fiving her husband as cars go by, as if it's not the 800th time they've gone by like that. What makes this woman tick, besides Prilosec? Car racing fans can't all be lobotomized. I'm convinced there's something important here that we're missing.

I get the same feeling from cricket highlights. The goal of the bowler (pitcher) is to knock down the wicket, and the goal of the batsman is to defend the wicket while dressed as the Michelin Man. That defense seems to consist of bunting the ball over and over for about a week. Each time the ball dribbles away from the batsman in no particular direction the crowd goes "oooooooooo", while all the women on Prilosec high-five their husbands. I can understand why South Africans and Indians might have been motivated to play cricket a century ago when the British were threatening them with guns, but now? Why not play something fun and healthy, like flaming street hockey? The point is, if we're ever going to make foreigners feel accepted here we need to know why they are so weird.

I don't need a Harvard MBA to know that local economies always cycle up and down, and that the Massachusetts whaling industry is due for a major rebound. Until then though, let's show visitors and new residents the better angels of our nature. Befriend one today. She just might turn out to have a terrific net game.

John Lengyel is a North Shore native. In 1999 he was amazed to discover that not only did people live on the South Shore, but they had organized themselves into towns and even a few country clubs. He's been subsisting on JJ's ice cream sandwiches ever since.

Should smoking be banned at Sandy Beach?

Role model

I do think that smoking should be banned, mostly because of the "role model" issue.

— Mimi White

Unenforceable

Us reformed tobacco smokers are often the most strongly opposed to smoking in public places, and the most realistically aware of the health effects of second-hand as well as first-hand smoke. But the public places we concern ourselves with are either enclosed or open space where crowding might subject non-smokers to other people's smoke. But to ban it on a wide-open space like Sandy Beach is a needless interference with personal choice to harm oneself with smoking while having no significant effect on others, besides being unenforceable. And unenforceable rules encourage disrespect for all rules.

— R. Murray Campbell

Filthy habit

At about 10 years old, I was walking barefoot on the sidewalk in Brant Rock and stepped on a smoldering cigarette. It hurt like *#&@. I have never smoked a cigarette and think it is a filthy, self-destructive habit. We all subsidize lung disease medical costs of smokers. The fewer places people can smoke; the better. I also agree with those who think the Rocky Lane guardrail is ugly and out of character with the local surroundings.

— Joe McElroy

A stretch

Maybe a designated smoking area, but trying to ban smoking in a public outdoor setting, I think, is a stretch. Sitting next to a person that smokes, even outside, can be annoying but it is a "public" beach. What next banning over weight people in Speedo's

— Roger Hill

'Down wind'

Smoking on the beach can be annoying, but unlike a restaurant, you can move and get away from it if it's blowing at you. I doubt that banning it would be enforceable. Who would do that? Let's just ask that smokers be considerate of others "down wind" and dispose of the remains responsibly.

— Marsha Silvia

Outdoors

FULL DISCLOSURE: I am 61, smoked for many years, do not smoke any more.] I don't see the sustainable argument for not letting people smoke on the beach. It's the outdoors. You can — and should — police the litter problem, but the second-hand smoke issue does not exist in the open air environment, and to ban smoking for the reason that it models undesirable adult behavior — well then, why not ban people being jerks? Or rude? Or any number of other unpleasant things?

— Agnes McCann

Ban it

I think smoking on and sandy beach should be banned. Smoking adults and teenagers are not setting a good example for the children on the beach.

Also, non-smokers are taking in second-hand smoke. Smokers are free to smoke in areas where they are not exposing others to smoke. It is not necessary to allow smoking in family-orientated areas.

I think banning smoking on Sandy Beach is feasible because the beach smokers are a minority and their arguments would not stand up to the large amount of non-smokers and parents with young children.

— Fiona McBride

Human conscience

There are many reasons why I think smoking on Sandy Beach should be banned. For those of us with respiratory problems it causes discomfort and we are forced to move. Children see smoking and it can influence their future choices related to tobacco. The butts left behind pollute the beach and can be consumed by birds and dogs. I hate to impose yet another rule but I think this is a health and environmental problem that needs to be addressed. Enforcing this ban should be based on the human conscience.

Thank you for asking.

— Betsy Connolly

Offensive

I truly shrink from curtailing the personal rights of others in what is becoming an increasingly regulated society. Yet is it a "right" to blow smelly smoke around a crystalline environment and bury butts in the sand?

Although it can be said that secondhand smoke is less a threat on the beach than it is in the Red Lion or Atlantica, I can inhale smoke from that lady's cigarette 50 yards to windward if the breeze is just right. I should not be forced to do that. And there is something especially offensive about looking out at Minot's light across pristine blue water and smelling a stale Philip Morris at the same time.

People struggle for years to quit the habit. I know that I did. So let's not penalize those who have won the battle. If smokers want to light up at the beach, let them do it in their own cars — with the windows rolled up.

But feasible? Who knows? I question that such a rule could ever be enforced.

— Nancy Garrison

Too much

To ban would necessitate creating another town law, which someone would have to enforce. It certainly would stretch the duties of lifeguards. Too, too much.

— Margy Charles

Mandatory

I say smoking on the beach should be mandatory, then we can have races to see what kills you first: skin cancer or lung cancer.

— Lance Norris

Family friendly

I'm all for banning smoking on Sandy Beach — would make for a more family friendly environment.

— Motoko T. Deane

Move upwind

I doubt if you can ban outdoor smoking any more successfully than you can ban halitosis. Just move upwind. They'll get the idea eventually.

— John Hartshorne

Policy OK

I would suggest a "policy" not a law, in effect during the hours the lifeguards are on duty (similar to the dog policy).

—Rick Shea

Six-pack abs

For six months I've worked to maintain my six-pack abs and golden skin undertones so that I could be smokin' on Sandy Beach come July, and now some prudes want to take away my right to be hot? You'll have to pry the Coppertone out of my cold, dead hands you flabby-bunned oppressors!

— John Lengyel

Not feasible

Regarding the feasibility of No Smoking Sandy Beach: It would be great but I'm afraid it wouldn't be feasible, especially since so much of the smoking and debris accumulation occurs in the evening when the beach is unmanned and not subject to constant monitoring.

— Tana Carlson

Extinguish!

I would love to see all butts on cigs extinguished! Especially since finding several butts/filters in the sand, in the parking lot and in trashcans! Since smokers on Sandy have not been responsible in disposing of their butts, banning butts should be acted upon. A big question — who/how to impose this restriction?

— Mary Cirafice

Health issue

I believe that smoking should be banned on Sandy Beach. As has been widely publicized, secondary smoke is a major contributor to many health diseases. The causal effects have been deemed to be even more intense than earlier anticipated and more harmful to children. Children are in frequent numbers at the beach and their proximity to secondary smoke — often to those who are not even related to these children — is a major health issue. They appear to be more at risk than adults and putting their health at risk during a time of recreation seems ludicrous.

However, even more important in my mind for eliminating smoking on the beach is the litter that such a habit causes. I have read that smoking is now the number one issue in causing litter, particularly the cigarette butts which are "flicked" indiscriminately after the smoker is finished. I pickup anywhere from 10-20 cigarette butts from my driveway each week. I find that smokers have a general disregard for others around them, and I would be hesitant to put the beauty and safety of Sandy Beach on smokers who have a demonstrated a general disregard for others.

— Roger Crafts

for Cohasset's public outdoor spaces, except if associated with an eating establishment, says Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik.

However, Sandy Beach is not a public space. The beach is privately owned and maintained by the Sandy Beach Association. The adjacent parking lot is owned and maintained by the Town. The Trustees of Sandy Beach would need to vote to implement a smoking ban on the beach. Separately, or in conjunction, the town could vote to ban smoking in the parking lot area as well. It's unclear whether the issue would have to go to Town Meeting or if it could be made by the Board of Selectmen.

"Personally, I would be in favor of a smoke-free beach," said Robin Lawrence, President of the Sandy Beach Association, in a phone interview, "the only issue would be enforcement of the regulation." Lifeguards are hired to ensure the safety of all beachgoers and enforcing a "no smoking" policy could detract from their primary responsibility, Lawrence said.

"Certainly it's a nuisance thing, especially if you're downwind" from a smoker, Lawrence said. But, whether or not it's a health issue is still up in the air.

"I don't know of any data available that has studied outdoor second hand smoke," said Godzik, but said there could possibly be a risk. He suggested Sandy Beach could follow what some other towns have implemented and designate a small area as a "smoking area" on the beach.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on one roll call and local senators' votes on three roll calls from the week of June 18-22.

ALLOW CITIES AND TOWNS TO JOIN STATE HEALTH INSURANCE PLAN (H 4110)

House 149-1, approved and sent to the Senate a bill allowing cities and towns to enroll their local employees in the Group Insurance Commission (GIC) - the state-operated group insurance plan. Supporters said that the bill would give local employees more plans and better coverage from which to choose. They noted that the switch to the GIC would save money for many cities and towns through reduced administrative costs and lower cost plans negotiated by the state which has increased purchasing power. The lone opponent offered no arguments. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill allowing cities and towns to enroll their local employees in the state-operated group insurance plan. A "No" vote is against allowing it).

BAN INTERNET HUNTING (S 2273)

Senate 34-0, approved and sent to the House a bill banning "Internet hunting" - the practice of using a mouse click on a home computer to kill confined animals on a distant game ranch. Trophy mounts of the animal are often prepared and shipped to the customer. The measure imposes up to a 2.5 year prison sentence and/or $2,500 fine on violators. Supporters said that the bill was filed at the request of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and noted that 22 states have already outlawed this controversial and inhumane Internet practice. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

TAX CREDITS FOR MAKING FILMS IN MASSACHUSETTS (H 4084)

Senate 31-3, approved a bill removing the $700 million per film cap on tax credits that the state gives movie production companies which make films on location in Massachusetts. A law approved in November 2005 provides tax credits and other incentives to these companies but also includes a $700 million cap on the credits. Supporters said that the tax credits and other incentives have generated million of dollars in revenue for local businesses and state tax coffers. They argued that unless the cap is lifted, Massachusetts will continue to lose millions of dollars in business, jobs and taxes to Connecticut, Rhode Island and other states that offer more tax credits and incentives than the Bay State. Some opponents said that the state should not offer tax credits to a wealthy, private entertainment industry while education, human service programs and local aid are still severely underfunded. Others said that the tax credits are simply another example of "corporate welfare" that helps a narrow business sector and urged the House to approve more broad-based tax relief for small businesses. The House has approved a different version of the proposal and the Senate version now goes to the House for consideration. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill lifting the $700 million cap on tax credits for film companies. A "No" vote is against the bill).

TAX INCENTIVES FOR SMALL BUSINESSES (S 2275)

Senate 5-29, rejected a new proposal providing tax credits for small businesses that have annual sales of less than $5 million and create at least five jobs in a year. The measure was proposed to replace the bill offering increased tax credits to movie production companies that make films on location in Massachusetts. Supporters of the new proposal offering tax credits for job creation said that it would create long-term jobs across the state instead of one-time, short-term jobs on a movie set primarily in the Boston area. They argued that the state should help Main Street instead of Hollywood Boulevard. Opponents of the new proposal said that it is irresponsible to replace the proven movie production tax credit with an unproven but well-intentioned job creation measure. They argued that the new proposal should be considered on its own merits in the future when more information is available on its costs and how many jobs it would create. (A "Yes" vote is for the new proposal providing tax credits for small businesses that create jobs. A "No" vote is against the new proposal and favors the bill providing increased tax credits to movie production companies that make films on location in Massachusetts).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

LAID OFF TEACHERS AND TEACHER EVALUATIONS (H 392) - The Education Committee held a hearing on bills requiring that hiring preference for teaching positions be given to teachers who were laid off as a result of budget cuts (H 392) and requiring the state Department of Education to establish a program that would allow pupils and parents to evaluate local teachers (H 517).

REQUIRE THAT NEW HOMES BE HANDICAPPED ACCESSIBLE (S 745) - The Housing Committee is considering a proposal requiring that all newly constructed houses include a flat entrance to accommodate the use of a wheelchair, scooter or other device that helps a person with mobility problems. The measure also mandates that the kitchen, bathroom, living room, laundry room and at least two bedrooms be located on the first floor. The measure is sponsored by private citizen Brian Coppola.

PROPERTY TAX HIKES AND REDUCTIONS (S 1702) - The Revenue Committee heard testimony on legislation sponsored by Citizens For Limited Taxation (CLT) limiting cities and towns to one override election per year and allowing an underride election in all communities. Override elections are on proposals that would raise property taxes while underride elections are on measures that would reduce them.

Peter Trovato, director of the Massachusetts Soldiers Legacy Fund, speaks to attendees at the V-8 Veterans Summit on Monday at the GAR Hall on Main Street in Hingham.

Attacking ways to help veterans

By Ryan Bray
RBRAY@CNC.COM

They came from all over the South Shore, some from Scituate, others from Hingham, Cohasset, Hull and other towns within the congressional district.

Some came to discuss increased medical services for veterans through the United States Office of Veterans Affairs, while still others came to discuss how to best serve active soldiers who will soon return home from military duty.

But for whatever reason the 30 to 40 veterans agents and veteran group representatives came out to the Hingham GAR Hall for the first annual V-8 Veterans Summit Monday, they all shared a common goal of reaching out to one another.

The summit brought representatives from veterans organizations in Scituate, Hull, Hingham, Cohasset, Weymouth, Marshfield, Duxbury and Norwell together for the first time in an open setting to discuss a regional approach to improve veterans services throughout the district. In attendance from Cohasset were Veterans Agent Robert Jackson, Tom Wigmore and Barry Butman of the Sons of the American Legion, Deirdre Wigmore of the American Legion Women's Auxiliary, Legion Commander Steve Wigmore and Joe McElroy of the Disabled American Vets (DAV) Chapter #65.

Conley Ford, commander of the American Legion Post #144 in Scituate and the principle organizer of the summit, cited Monday's summit as a jumping off point toward tackling veterans issues regionally across town lines.

"We hope we can create a roadmap so that veterans can find help when they need it," Ford said.

Ford said he was inspired to pull together the summit after attending a recent fundraiser with representatives from different veterans groups across the district. After noticing the lack of interaction between members of the different groups, he organized the summit with the help of Hingham/Hull Veterans Agent Mike Cunningham and Major Bill Ramsey of Hingham.

Veterans and representatives from the Blue Star Mothers and various American Legion and VFW posts met with local veterans agents and state representatives to discuss numerous veterans related issues, among them how to provide better care to veterans through the Office of Veterans Affairs to how to accommodate future veterans who will return home after service.

Marshfield Veterans Agent Dick Martin raised issue with services administered through the VA, saying its broad scope often times excludes many veterans who are in need of extended medical care. He said transportation for veterans has also proven to be an issue.

"The VA covers veterans' transportation needs if they're 100 percent disabled, but if they're not, what do we do?" Martin asked.

Hingham resident Jim Claypoole, a veteran who helped form the Hingham Veterans Council, talked about the council's independent efforts to raise money and help aid veterans outside of the funding allocated for veterans services through the town. He recommended that other municipalities work to enact similar councils to help take care of their local veterans' needs, including transportation.

"We approach our issues horizontally," Claypoole said. "We fund ourselves and are able to take action on our own without waiting around to be told what to do."

Others in attendance Monday discussed the need to be proactive in serving the needs of tomorrow's veterans, an issue veterans acknowledged as having been a problem in the past.

"We had a horrible time with how we treated our returning Vietnam veterans," said Reverend Gerry Hickey, chaplain of the American Legion Post # 144 in Scituate. "It's a black spot in our history. We need to do a better job of reaching out."

"We need to go out and get the vets," said George Earle, commander of the American Legion Post in Marshfield. "We can't just wait for them to come to us.' Earle suggested that towns form subcommittees to address their specific veterans issues.

Marybeth O'Sullivan, an outreach advisor for Veterans Upward Bound at UMass Boston, said the issue of supporting veterans also extends to female vets, less than half of which are registered to receive federal and state benefits.

"We're coming right out to the communities and asking 'Do you know a female vet,'" O'Sullivan said. "We need your help, because we just aren't seeing the numbers. Our veterans are going to need the services we can help provide, but we can't get to them."

Veterans also addressed the issue of job security for vets in the reserve who are called out to active duty. Jim Borowski, ombudsman for the Massachusetts Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve (ESGR), said he'd like to see more done to protect the jobs of those veterans who are forced to leave work for service for extended periods of time.

"A lot of things can happen in 12 months," Borowski said. "Too often people leave work to serve, only to find the door closed on them when they return home."

Norwell Veterans Agent Dick Caldwell agreed, saying the issue of job security can often be of particular concern for small business owners.

"Not only do they risk losing their businesses, but they're fined for the work they don't finish before serving," Caldwell said. "What do we do for them?"

Veterans, organizers and state officials left the summit with hopes that the issues brought forth can be addressed further to better represent current and future veterans. State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, said while state officials have been proactive in drafting legislation such as the Welcome Home Bill to better aid veterans, the summit showed that there is still more that can be done on a local level.

"I thought it was wise for them to put this together," Bradley said following the summit. "We're trying to pass what we think is helpful legislation, but I think what we saw here tonight was a disconnect among the municipalities. We'll continue to work on it.

"The conflict that is ongoing is going to be ongoing for some time, and these issues discussed here tonight need to be addressed," said State Sen. Bob Hedlund, R-Weymouth.

Maura McGowan Yanosick, who is president of the Eastern Massachusetts Chapter of the Blue Star Mothers of America, addresses concerns and challenges facing families of troops serving in Iraq and Afghanistan.

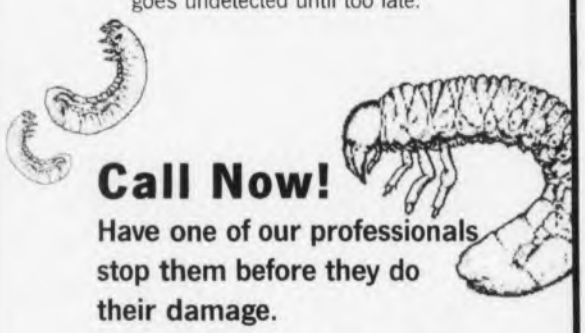
More school security cameras

The School Committee and the Cohasset Teachers Association have reached a memorandum of understanding concerning the use of video surveillance cameras. At their recent meeting on June 20, the committee voted 4-0 (member Alfred Slanetz was not present) to approve the agreement.



"Video surveillance is new to all of us," said Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh. Details of use and access had to be hashed out. The language concerning the use of covert cameras needed to be very clear, said Walsh. She reported the schools were in the process of ordering decals for the doors so students, teachers, parents and the community is aware of the surveillance cameras.

In related news, Walsh recommended the purchase of 12 additional cameras to be installed at all three schools. The cameras would be put in locations where there is currently no video coverage. No additional service or computer systems are required. The School Committee approved the expenditure with a 4-0 vote. The total cost for the 12 cameras is $21,305.

Selectmen support Treat's Pond restoration

No vote on where to place pipe outfall

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Is Treat's Pond historically a salt marsh?

Is discharging more potentially polluted bacteria into the inner harbor the best solution?

Should Cohasset take advantage of a partially federally funded project that may help remediate flooding and stormwater issues?

These are just some of the questions raised by abutters, concerned citizens and the Board of Selectmen at Monday night's continued discussion of what to do with Treat's Pond. Residents presented new information, some of which gave the selectmen pause on a night they were scheduled to make a decision on the Army Corps of Engineers' proposed methods of restoring Treat's Pond.

In the end, the Selectmen determined in a 4-0 vote (Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer recused himself from the discussion and vote) to communicate the town's interest in the project should the federal funds come through in this year's allocation cycle. They did not determine which of the proposed restoration methods would be best for the town.

The Army Corps of Engineers (ACE) is proposing a 65 percent federally funded project designed to restore Treat's Pond to its natural state as a salt marsh. The marsh currently is dominated by phragmites and does not have enough saltwater exchange with the ocean making it a prime place for bacterial growth.

Treat's Pond is located on the ocean side of Atlantic Avenue, just past Whitehead Road, in an area prone to flooding and stormwater problems.

The two ACE recommended options are to install a large pipe from Treat's Pond to discharge at either the inner harbor (via Atlantic Avenue) or the outer harbor (via Whitehead Road and Whale Meadow). Environmental concerns were raised for the inner harbor outfall, while the Whale Meadow route would be difficult due to real estate complications.

Jim Drysdale, a member of the Stormwater Committee, suggested the Selectmen look for alternative methods to restore the pond and address the chronic flooding problems in the area. The purview of the ACE is to solely restore the salt marsh. Although David Larsen, ACE project manager, said last week the project may have some side benefits for flooding and stormwater remediation, it is not their main concern.

A cheaper way to address the "big problem" of flooding might be extending the current pipe which discharges into Sandy Cove, proposed Drysdale. An extension of the pipe may cost roughly $3,000 while the proposed collaboration with the ACE would require close to $400,000 of non-federal funds (a combination of state or municipal funding).

"If restoration of the pond is the objective, we should do a natural restoration with a normal outlet," said Drysdale.

However, Peter Whittemore of 47 Elm Court cast a shadow of doubt that perhaps Treat's Pond has never been a salt marsh.

"In the 1920s it had beautiful black ice and people used to ice skate all winter long," said Whittemore, "I know it didn't go up and down with the tide."

Historical and geological evidence to suggest Treat's Pond was not a saltwater marsh and never had been one is available, he said. He encouraged the Selectmen to look further into the issue by requesting more geological tests.

"Turning a fresh water marsh into a saltwater marsh is like putting swim fins on a rooster and calling it a seagull," he said.

The discussion continued with Charles Humphreys, an attorney representing Peter Roy of 49 Margin St., who found a sense of disconcertment with the project.

"You can't on the one hand clean up the harbor and on the other allow putrefied water from the pond be discharged in it," he said. He also was concerned his client had not been informed of the project until last week when his office found out "by chance." Humphreys said the option bringing the outfall pipe to the inner harbor would use a piece of property owned by Roy.

"It's an absolute violation of due process," said Humphreys, "my client will use every means available to him to fight this proposal."

A former New York congressman and abutter to Treat's Pond, Amo Houghton, advised the Selectmen to decide first and foremost if they want to do the project at all — and soon. Congressman Bill Delahunt, who has supported the project, is under a lot of pressure from other communities requesting federal funding, he said.

Despite the sense of urgency, Karen Quigley, chairman of the Harbor Health Committee, feared the ACE proposals did not address what she sees as heart of the issue, — stormwater pollution.

"We're merely taking stormwater from one area to another. We know more now than we did when the project started" concerning stormwater issues, Quigley said.

But, Selectmen Vice Chairman Ted Carr saw the opportunity as one the Town of Cohasset would be remiss to pass up.

"It's more than the restoration," it's an opportunity we couldn't afford on our own," Carr said and made a motion to communicate interest to Congressman Delahunt for the project.

Selectmen Fred Koed discussed some reservations about dumping more possibly contaminated water into the harbor and said he would like to determine if, in fact, Treat's Pond was historically a saltwater marsh.

"It's a complicated system like Jacob's Meadow," he said and did not want to move the problem from one area to another.

The Selectmen will seek more information from the Army Corps. on Treat's Pond in the upcoming weeks, including how the proposed outfall pipes will look in the proposed areas.

Dormitzer to seek official Ethics Commission ruling

Ralph Dormitzer recused himself from the discussion of Treat's Pond. He said he had received two emails since the initial discussion on Treat's Pond, one anonymous and one signed, accusing him of having a conflict of interest. According to Dormitzer, the grounds of the conflict of interest are he would have financial gain if the Treat's Pond restoration were completed.

"It's a stretch," Dormitzer said in a phone interview. Although Dormitzer resides on Atlantic Avenue, he says he is neither affected by the flooding of Treat's Pond nor a direct abutter to Treat's Pond.

To be on the safe side, he consulted Town Counsel and was advised to recuse himself from the Treat's Pond discussion and vote. He plans to write to the Ethics Commission to get an official ruling on whether he does have conflict of interest violation.

Small class size a priority

A large upcoming first grade class led Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan and Superintendent Denise Walsh to ask the School Committee for some budget juggling. The fall first grade class is 150 students, with the current configuration of six teachers class size would be 25 students. Parent surveys indicated class size was a concern. With an additional teacher (seven classrooms) the class size would be reduced to 21 or 22 students.

Sheehan and Walsh proposed using a portion of the full-day kindergarten tuition, which pays for itself, to provide funding for an additional first-grade teacher. Walsh said this move was an indication of how much the school is reliant on budget offsets, like tuitions, fees and donations. This move would result in some balancing in the budget and it was likely the budget for supplies for the full-day kindergarten program would be decreased.

"The committee needs to be cognizant of the fact we're using that money," said Walsh. Although no vote was taken, the consensus of the committee was an additional first grade teacher would make a significant difference and agreed to fund the teacher's salary using the full kindergarten tuition funds.

—Mary Murphy, moved from Scituate

Like many, Mary Murphy had lived in her Scituate house for a long time before moving to Florida. But being away from friends and family was bothersome to Mary. After taking a closer look at Linden Ponds, she decided it might be the best of both worlds. "I get to do everything here, and I am close to my daughter who lives in Scituate. I certainly didn't want another house to try to keep up with," says Mary.

Avalon issued DEP notice of non-compliance

Water Commission requested audit

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Avalon project has hit another bump in the road to breaking ground.

The Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection has issued a Notice of Non-compliance for the site. The notice comes as a result of a DEP audit performed recently on the Avalon property and outlines certain tests, analysis and reporting that will need to be completed in the next 60 days, or by August 19.

"My reading of it is there are some open questions in the minds of the DEP," said Avalon Vice President of development Scott Dale in a phone interview, "there are answers to their questions and they are going to be found and reported."

The Water Commission requested the audit in the early spring out of their long concern hazardous contamination remained on the site from the prior owners.

"For years the Water Commission has been concerned the owner's consultants did not properly characterize the site and the owners were not properly advised on clean-up measures," said Water Commissioner John McNabb, "I guess we were right."

The notice of non-compliance outlines four areas where the Avalon site was in violation for DEP requirements, including not adequately defining the nature and extent of contamination of the site, especially in terms of seep/surface water and shallow soil.

Avalon was given two options to achieve compliance. Dale said they would pursue the most "expeditious one," which includes a revision of the documents previously submitted to address the DEP's concerns. The other option would be to retract the existing reports and, essentially, start over again.

Webb-Norfolk Conveyor, an airport conveyor belt manufacturer, occupied the site from 1975 to 1995. The DEP's report stated Webb-Norfolk had a "long history of oil and hazardous materials use marked by poor storage and disposal practices," citing several DEP violations over the years.

According to McNabb, the DEP does not review the reports submitted by privatized sites, like Avalon. There is a public process in which the reports are available for review, but the DEP is not involved. The only way the reports are reviewed by DEP is if an audit is requested and performed.

The Water Commission has particular concern that contaminated runoff could end up in Lily Pond, the town's water supply. McNabb said the Commission is not concerned with punitive measures, rather that the site is adequately delineated and cleaned up prior to construction. If that does not happen, there could be mobilization of contaminates on the site that could end up in Lily Pond.

"There are answers to their questions and they are going to be found and reported."
— Scott Dale, Avalon

Several minor clean-ups have been performed on the site, Dale said. Avalon inherited much of the DEP reporting failings outlined in the notice of non-compliance from the former owners, said Dale. He does not believe additional clean-up will be required on the site.

"All [contamination] source areas were identified and remediated," said Dale, "it's a case of being 100 percent sure now and going forward."

The Avalon project was issued a comprehensive permit from the ZBA more than three years ago. It was approved as a 40-B project. Under Chapter 40B, a state law, a town's zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards are vulnerable to 40-B projects.

"The DEP is being very cautious and the Water Commission is being very cautious," said Dale, "we're going to leave no question unanswered and it will create a level of comfort for us too."

Buying streetlights could help the bottom line

take into account a certain amount of "risk" inherent in the proposal. In purchasing the lights, they would also be undertaking the responsibility for maintenance.

"Citizens are going to call you to complain instead of the National Grid if a light is out at the end of their driveway," he said. In his experience with other towns, the savings outweighed the additional burden.

To continue with the purchase, the town needs to outline how it plans to deal with routine maintenance issues. In some towns, they have employed the department of public works tree specialists to change light bulbs and other minor repairs. Other towns have contracted local municipal light companies to perform maintenance; the closest municipal light plant is in Hingham.

Woodbury advocated minimizing lighting where the town could and reducing street light wattage.

"Generally speaking, towns are way overlit," said Woodbury, which leads to glare on the street and for drivers, "if you reduce wattages, people can actually see better." Although Cohasset has fairly new light fixtures that are not as bright as other communities, the town could see even more savings if energy efficient improvements were made to the streetlights.

Fifty-one communities across the Commonwealth have purchased their streetlights. More than a dozen municipalities are in the process. If the selectmen decide to pursue the purchase, Woodbury would see Cohasset through the process, which he said could be completed by December.

The Selectmen did not make a decision but took the proposal under advisement.

Legion fall short in upset bid

Post 118 nearly knocks off Milton

In an exciting back-and-forth game Monday, defending Zone champion Milton defeated Cohasset Post 118 by a score of 9-7.

Sam DeGiacomo went 4 2/3 innings, giving up six runs on eight hits with three strikeouts in a solid outing. Marcus Joyce came in to relieve DeGiacomo and gave up three runs on two hits with one strikeout. Undefeated Milton scored one run in the second and three runs in the third inning to take a 4-0 lead in the game.

In the bottom of the third inning, with two outs, Ryan Little walked and Robert Dongara singled to put runners on first and second. Justin Whyte doubled to score both Little and Dongara to make the score 4-2.

In the bottom of the fourth, Kyle Pinkus led off with a walk and scored on a double by Coady Morgan. Morgan advanced to third base on a ground ball by Tommy Chase. Morgan then scored on a perfectly executed suicide squeeze play by Brad Sportack to tie the score at 4-4 after four.

In the fifth inning, Milton scored two runs to take a 6-4 lead. In the bottom of the frame, Little doubled and Michael Signorelli doubled off the right field fence to score Little to make the score 6-5. In the next inning, Milton scored three runs to make it 9-5.

Pat Doonan led off the bottom of the seventh with a walk and scored on another double by Whyte off the left-center fence to make it 9-6. Signorelli singled and Whyte advanced to

Cohasset 2-0 in Williamsport tourney

The Cohasset Williamsport Little League is off to a 2-0 start in this year's District 8 tournament, thanks to wins over Hingham American and Stoughton National.

Cohasset will take on fellow undefeated Milton National tomorrow (June 30) at noon at Elm Street park in Stoughton. A victory will see Cohasset advance in the winners bracket to play next Friday; a loss will drop the team into the losers bracket, where they would play Monday. The competition is a double-elimination tournament.

For all the latest, log on to the Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association's web site, www.cybsa.net, and look for another story in next week's Mariner.

Cohasset 9,
Hingham American 5

The team kicked off its tournament Sunday against Hingham American with a big come-from-behind win. The veteran Cohasset squad came back from a 4-1 deficit to capture an opening game victory 9-5.

Jamie Timothy pitched 5 2/3 innings, changing speeds and mixing in a few curveballs before giving way to Nick Tangherlini to get the last out. Kyle Healy led the offense with a two-run triple in the fourth and a solo home run in the fifth.

Timothy and Christian Davis added two hits apiece, and Jack Kuppens, Connor Goetz (who will be on the mound tomorrow against Miltion National) and Tangherlini all had extra-base hits. Defensively, Shane Haggerty was a vacuum at shortstop and Conor Dooley made a nice diving catch in right for Cohasset.

Cohasset 10,
Stoughton National 0

The "Williamsport 12" had the bats come alive again Monday night, exploding for 10 runs in a five-inning game stopped due to the slaughter rule. Tangherlini and Goetz each had a homer, and Goetz missed a second by inches. Once again, Healy came up big at the plate as did Danny Barnes.

Pitching in his first game of the tournament, Haggerty was outstanding, throwing only 48 pitches. Even more impressively, 40 of those 48 pitches were strikes. Tough defense from Colin Gideon-Murphy, Timothy, Davis and Dooley supported Haggerty's shutout. Goetz called a great game behind the plate, mixing in Haggerty's curveball debut.

The full roster is as follows: Danny Barnes, Christian Davis, Conor Dooley, Colin Gideon-Murphy, Connor Goetz, Shane Haggerty, Kyle Healy, Jack Kuppens, Connor O'Brien, Michael O'Brien, Nick Tangherlini, Jamie Timothy. Manager: Kevin Dooley. Coach: Pete Timothy.

Youth football clinic

Any boys or girls entering grades 4-8 this fall are invited to take part in the First Annual Cohasset High School Football Youth Clinic. This is a one-day skills clinic that emphasizes fun and will help anyone become a better football player.

Applications can be found in the Recreation Department's summer mailing or they can be obtained at the Sci-Coh football web site, www.scicohfootball.com. If you have any questions, contact CHS head football coach Pete Afanasiw at pafanasiw@cohassetk12.org.

Cohasset's Mark Flibotte (14) had 64 goals and 40 assists this season.

Hard work pays off for Flibotte, Bunstein

Cohasset lax duo named to All-American team

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Ask Cohasset High boys lacrosse coach Stew Curran about Mark Flibotte, and one of the first things the coach will say about his senior-to-be attackman is his unassuming nature.

Rarely was that more apparent than when Curran went to Flibotte's home recently to tell him he had been named an All-American.

As Curran recalled Thursday, Flibotte's immediate response to the news was, "Did you watch that Duke game yesterday?"

"Mark is such a humble kid," Curran said. "A play that [Max] Quinzani made (in the Duke game) was more important to him at that time than any personal award."

Joining Flibotte on the All-American squad was fellow attackman Mike Bunstein, who just graduated from CHS and will play lacrosse for Lasell College in Newton. In four years, Bunstein has gone from a freshman who couldn't make varsity to a 31-goal, 69-assist focal point for a state champion.

Curran offered high praise for Bunstein, comparing his role with the Skippers this season to that of a certain Super Bowl-winning quarterback in Foxboro.

"In a way, he was our Tom Brady on offense," said the coach. "[Attackman Mike] Grimm and Flibotte got a lot of notoriety, but with Bunny, the ball went through his stick and good things always happened."

Curran said the time and effort both boys have put into the sport are major reasons for their success. Both have played for the Black Jacks and Fighting Clams club teams, and are regulars at various summer camps and winter indoor leagues.

The result has been a deadly efficient combination in attack. Flibotte was also a 100-point scorer this spring with 64 goals and 40 assists, and a lot of goals were a result of pinpoint passes from Bunstein.

"Mark is a smart, good athlete, and he works hard. He knows what he needs to work on; he's strong with his right and left hand," Curran said. "Mike had the good sense to get the ball to Mark near the net, because he always knew how to put in the back of the net."

Curran said he has been fielding queries about Flibotte from a number of strong lacrosse programs in the Ivy League and NESCAC, including Brown, Wesleyan and Bowdoin. McGill University in Montreal, host to one of top college lacrosse programs in Canada, has also shown interest, Curran said.

The fact that his players are earning All-American status and

3 Skippers named as Honorable Mentions

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Unlike individual league all-star teams, we did not choose our team in deference to event considerations. Instead the only criteria we considered was overall value these athletes had to their respective teams.

In the end; however, the sports staff at Community Newspaper Company (CNC) had to make some tough decisions and we do feel secure that we chose the top public school boys tennis players for this honor.

This is the CNC All-Scholastic boys tennis team comprised of athletes from the following schools: Taunton, Apponequet, Bridgewater-Raynham, Randolph, Avon, Whitman-Hanson, Hanover, Marshfield, Weymouth, Braintree, Plymouth, West Bridgewater, East Bridgewater, Old Rochester, Norwell, Wareham, Scituate, Hingham, Abington, Rockland, Silver Lake, Oliver Ames, Pembroke, Holbrook, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Norton and Mansfield.

Next week, softball.

Cohasset's Blain Morin was a steady performer at second singles for the Skippers this season. He and the first doubles team of Chris Donze and Ivan Sceery are honorable mentions to this year's CNC All-Scholastic boys tennis team.

Singles

Rich Durham – Senior (Capt.)
Singles – Braintree

Durham was a significant part of a program revival that saw the Wamps in contention for a state tournament berth for most of the season…Best win of the season came on May 14, as he defeated Newton North's Mike Wong in straight sets. Wong was the 7-seed at this year's MIAA South individual tournament…In that competition, Durham won two matches before running into Needham's Gregg Weinman, the Rockets' best player and overall 3-seed in the tournament…Also played tough during team match play against Framingham's Eric Fandel, the South sectional's 6-seed…Coach Mike Pelletier referred to Durham this spring as "arguably the best tennis player the Wamps have ever had."

Alex Chin – Sophomore
First singles – Hingham

Was a force on the courts this spring for the 15-2 Harbormen…A two-year player at singles, Chin is making his second-straight appearance on the All-Scholastic squad after a season in which he registered only one regular season loss at his position…His powerful and consistent play helped the Hingham boys capture an undefeated Patriot League Keenan Div. crown (12-0) and reach the semifinals in the Div. 1 South Sectional tourney, where Hingham was edged by the top seed and eventual state champs, Falmouth, 3-2…The two-time PL All-star also played in the State Individual tourney and reached the quarterfinals before falling to the top seed…Just a sophomore, expect to hear much more from Chin over his next two years at HHS.

Matt Chin – Senior (Capt.)
Second singles – Hingham

Teamed with his younger brother in creating one of the most formidable 1-2 punches on the South Shore tennis scene…Also a two-year starter, Chin also registered just one regular season loss, it coming in the team's lone setback of the spring, a 3-2 edging by Norwell…A two-year Patriot League All-star, Chin's solid play helped the Harbormen go 15-2 this season, reaching the Div. 1 South semifinals for the second-straight year…There, the Hingham boys were edged by unbeaten Falmouth (3-2), the eventual state champs…A force during the regular season, Chin helped the Harbormen capture the PL Keenan Div. crown with an unbeaten 12-0 mark…The captain also played in the State Individual tourney and reached the round of 16 before falling to the fourth seed…Chin leaves big shoes to fill at his position next spring.

Brett Goverman – Senior (Captain)
First singles – Mansfield

Mansfield coach Peter Larsen knows to have a successful season you need a dominating number one, and for the last three years he has had that in Goverman…As only a freshman, Goverman achieved his first all-star nod…He continued the trend by qualifying for the team each additional season…This year armed with a powerful overhand serve and a menacing and much improved backhand, he finished with a 16-3 record... For the Tigers he was more than a great tennis player but also a role model and a great leader who demanded the best from his teammates.

Rob Ankner – Junior
Singles – Norwell

A top-of-the-lineup player on most other teams, Ankner went undefeated at second singles to help lead the Clippers to their second straight Div. 2 South title…Can hit for power from the baseline and play at net with his height and impressive athleticism…Won critical matches in sectional semifinal against Dover-Sherborn and sectional final against Cape Cod Academy, both 3-2 wins for Norwell. The win against D-S came in three sets after Ankner dropped the first was down 0-3 in the second…Also scored a big victory against fellow All-Scholastic Matt Chin of Hingham, the Harborman's only loss of the season…Ankner also plays basketball for NHS

Ryan Sweeney – Senior (Capt.)
Singles – Norwell

2007 was another exemplary season for Sweeney, one of the best players in the program's history…Went undefeated in team match play, and advanced to the quarterfinals of the MIAA South individual tournament before losing a well-contested match to eventual finalist Joe Delinks of Falmouth…Sweeney won a three-set match against Cape Cod Academy to give Norwell a 3-2 win and its second straight Div. 2 South sectional title…Earned the Clippers' lone point in 3-1 state semifinal loss to eventual champion Winchester…Sweeney also won in three sets against Hingham's Alex Chin, the fellow All-Scholastic's only loss of the season

Regis Chang – Junior
First singles – Old Rochester

Frustrated opponents with his unshakeable on-court demeanor, and then wore them down with a relentlessly solid ground game…Finished this season a perfect 15-0 in league play and 21-3 overall including state tournament action…A bright and talented student, Chang should return at #1 singles next season for the Bulldogs and likely will be ranked among the top four or five players in the state…A quiet team leader who let his racket do most of the talking…Loves to travel to the U.S. Open tennis tournament during the summer, not to watch the main draw, but the grittier qualifying matches leading up to it.

Jordan Sattelmair – Senior
Second singles – Old Rochester

Compiled a remarkable 64-4 career record over four seasons and went 16-2 and 19-3 overall including state tourney action…Played some of his very best tennis in his final campaign as a Bulldog, including a huge win over Coyle-Cassidy's highly-touted Corey Sherman that helped the Bulldogs advance to the semis of the MIAA south sectional tourney…Along with Chang was named to the All-SCC first team each of the past two seasons…The Emerson-bound senior, who plans to study communications, dominated opponents with a booming serve and ability to run opponents all over the court with his crisp groundstrokes…His steady play and leadership will be difficult to replace next season.

Chris Marrano – Junior
Singles – Pembroke

Persistence paid off for Pembroke head coach Dave Rix…Last off season he tried to persuade Marrano to join the team but he was unable to...This year he tried again to get the home schooled junior onto the squad, and it worked…All that ensued from there was a 17-3 record from the Titans top singles player, including wins over top players from Duxbury, Hanover and Westwood in the tournament…He was a Patriot League All-Star this season and helped the Titans to the Patriot League's Fisher Division championship, and a second straight tournament berth…Rix cited his positive attitude and work ethic as being one of his best attributes… "He was a huge factor in our success, every time he stepped on the court I knew we had a chance to take a point."

Chris Nelson – Sophomore
Singles – Scituate

Made the move up from third to first singles and submitted a strong season, earning Nelson Patriot League All-Star honors (one of four Sailors to earn the honor)…Picked up key wins against good opponents from Hanover and Duxbury to help lead Scituate back to the Div. 2 state tournament…In the postseason, Nelson cruised past his opponent from Dedham as part of the Sailors' 4-1 win, their first in tournament play in three years…During the regular season, Nelson took then-undefeated Alex Chin of Hingham into the third set before losing…Nelson, who also plays soccer for SHS, won a match in the South individual tournament

Doubles

Teddy Geldmacher/ Stephan Seman – First doubles – Duxbury

This pair was one of the best in the Patriot League this season after getting off to a slow start…Sidelined during the preseason with mononucleosis, Geldmacher, a senior, needed some time to get into the swing of things with Seman, a junior, but it didn't take long for the duo to start shining…Behind the solid performance of this pair, the Dragons racked up a 13-5 regular season record…Four of the five losses came via 3-2 decisions, including two defeats at the hands of Hingham, who edged the Dragons for the PL crown (8-3)…The Dragons qualified for play in the Div. 1 South tourney and bested Natick before falling to eventual finalists, Brookline…The Patriot League All-star doubles team also participated in the State Individual tourney, where they reached the quarterfinal round…There, Geldmacher and Seman were edged by Sharon's top duo…Geldmacher will be lost to graduation, but Seman returns for one more season at DHS.

Trevor Marsden/ John Ripple – First doubles – Hingham

After playing a year together at second doubles, this senior/sophomore duo made the jump to first doubles and it was a virtually seamless transition…The Patriot League All-stars stormed through the regular season, picking up big wins along the way…The Harbormen pair's familiarity with one another on the court was evident in their wins, which included a pair of spirited matches with Duxbury's All-Scholastic duo…Marsden and Ripple also collected a victory against Norwell's top pair in the team's lone loss of the regular season…Consistency on the doubles front helped the Hingham boys capture the Patriot League Keenan Div. crown (12-0) and reach the Div. 1 South team semifinals for the second-straight season…There, Harbormen duo picked up a victory despite the team's 3-2 edging to eventual state champs, Falmouth…The team loses Marsden to graduation, while Ripple still has two more seasons at HHS.

Mike Kramer/Andy Bogaty Seniors – Norwell

The Clippers' senior duo made the move up from second doubles and won a number of key matches en route to the team's second straight Div. 2 South championship…Won competitive matches against Scituate and Westwood in the state tournament; the win against the Sailors' Patriot League all-star duo of Ian Thomson and Andy McCourt was the third of the year for Kramer and Bogaty…Played tough in 4-6, 4-6 loss to Hingham duo Trevor Marsden and John Ripple, also All-Scholastics…Went undefeated in South Shore League play this season…Kramer was also an All-Scholastic for basketball last winter

Jeff Barrett/Aaron Janik First doubles – Old Rochester

Finished this season with a 10-5 mark overall, and a sparkling 8-1 record in league play…Got off to a slow start as a pairing but eventually developed a solid on-court chemistry and were named co-winners of the coach's award for 'Most Improved Player' at season's end…Played some of their most inspiring power tennis at this year's MIAA south sectionals, defeating Barnstable's Bryce Kalzer and John Morgan, 6-1, 6-4... Highlight of the regular season was an impressive two-match run featuring a hard-fought, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3 victory over Apponequet's Eric Card and Ben Hurd and a decisive 6-2, 6-2 win over Tom Hatch and Greg Moraes of Bishop Stang the next day.

third. Then Pinkus and Morgan both walked to bring home Whyte and make the score 9-7. With the bases loaded and two outs, Chase smashed a line drive right at the second baseman to end the game. If the ball goes through, Post 118 would have come away with at least a tie and probably a win with the speedy Morgan on first.

At the halfway point of the season, Cohasset Post 118 is 2-8. After hosting Canton tomorrow (June 29) at 5:45 at Scituate High School, Post 118 kick off a stretch of three games in as many days Sunday when Morrisette comes to SHS for a 5 p.m. game. On Monday, the team travels to Stoughton for a 5:45 contest, followed by another home game Tuesday at 5:45 against Weymouth.

Quincy 10, Post 118 7

Quincy, one of the best teams in the Zone this season, defeated Cohasset last Friday. Joyce went 4 1/3 innings, giving up six hits and striking out two batters. Joyce had an excellent curveball going all night, but eight walks and a number of fielding errors proved too costly.

Quincy got two in the first inning. In the bottom of the first, Doonan singled and scored on a double to deep right-center by Dongara. Then Little doubled to score Dongara. Little moved to third base on a ground ball by Whyte and scored on a wild pitch as Cohasset took the lead, 3-2.

Quincy added two runs in the third and three in the fifth to make the score 7 -3. In the bottom of the fifth, Dongara reached on an error and scored on a double by Whyte to make the score 7-4. Quincy picked up three more runs in the sixth, which ultimately proved to be too much to overcome.

In the bottom of the sixth inning, Chris Barrow reached on a walk and advanced to second on a single by Doonan. Dongara singled to score Barrow and Doonan. Dongara advanced to second base on a passed ball. Little singled and Whyte received an intentional walk to load the bases. Signorelli singled through the hole in shortstop to score Dongara to make the final score 10-7.

Braintree 7, Post 118 4

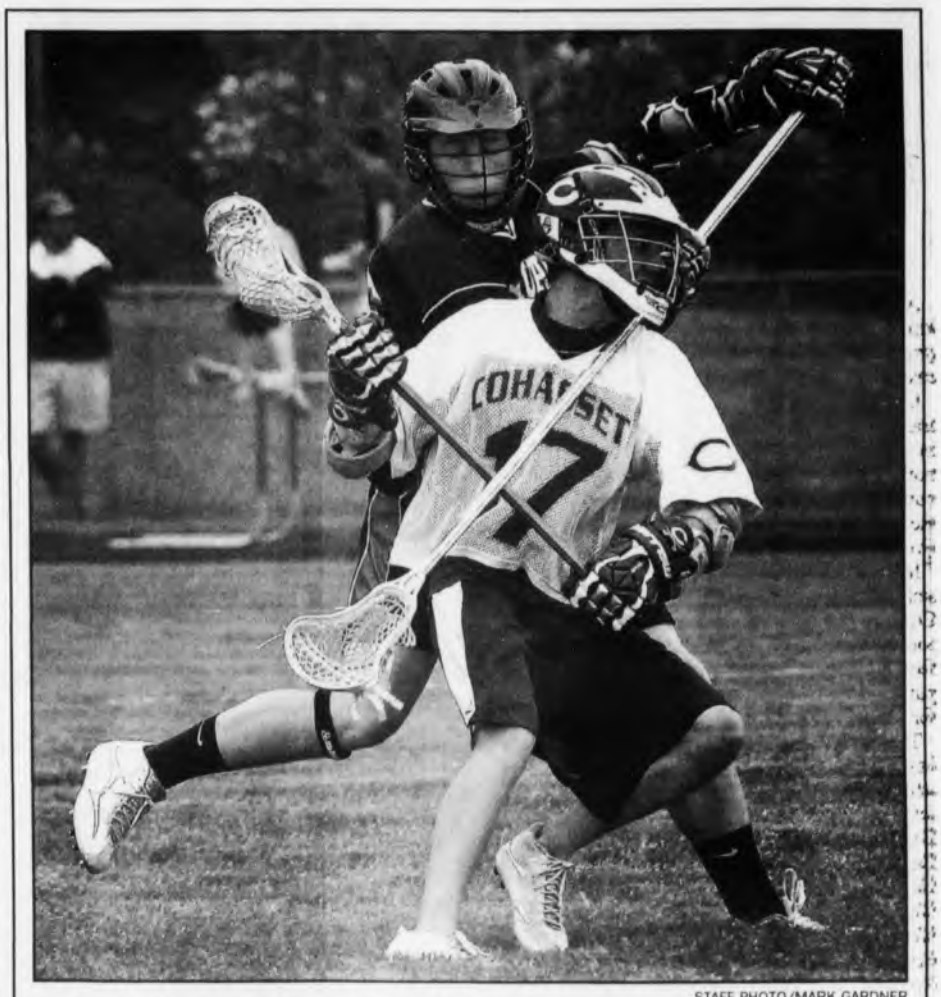
Ryan Ferriter went the distance last Wednesday against Braintree Post 86, giving up seven runs on five hits and five strikeouts in a strong effort.

In the first inning Braintree had back-to-back doubles to take a 1-0 lead. In the top of the second, Signorelli led off with a double to the fence in left field and scored on another double deep to left center by Pinkus to make the score 1-1 after two innings.

Braintree loaded the bases in the bottom of the third on three walks and the number seven batter, Dan Pasquantonio, hit a grand slam deep over the centerfield fence to make the score 6-1 as Braintree netted one run earlier in the inning. In the fourth inning, Jeff Simpson led off with a single and scored on a single by Chase and a fielding error allowed Chase to advance to second. Chase scored on a hard-hit single by Pinkus to make the score 6-3.

In the bottom of the fourth Braintree picked up a solo run to make the score 7-3. Doonan led off the sixth with a walk and advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt by Simpson. Doonan scored on a single by Signorelli to account for the game's final run.

Post 118 9, West Roxbury 4



Post 118 picked up its second win of the season behind another strong performance by Brian Hill, whose record improved to 2-1. Hill pitched a complete game, giving up four runs with six hits and striking out six batters.

In the bottom of the first inning, Doonan led off with a walk and scored on a single by Whyte. Then Signorelli singled and Pinkus walked to load the bases. Whyte scored on a wild pitch to make the score 2-0. Morgan then doubled to score Signorelli and Pinkus to make the score 4-0 after one inning.

DeGiacomo laid down a great bunt hit down the first base line to start things off in the second. DeGiacomo advanced to second on a ground ball, and Dongara singled to put runners on first and third base. DeGiacomo scored on a double steal to make the score 5-0 after two innings.

With two outs in the fourth, Chase tripled down the right field line and Dongara walked to put runners on first and third. Chase scored on another double steal to make the score 6-1 after four innings. West Roxbury scored three runs on four hits in the fifth to pull within two, 6-4.

In the bottom of the sixth inning, Dongara led off with a single and stole second base. He thenscored on a single by Signorelli. Kyle Pinkus doubled to put runners on second and third. Signorelli and Pinkus scored on another double by Morgan to make the final score 9-4.

garnering attention from strong college programs, Curran said, is a testament to their lacrosse upbringing within the town's youth system.

"I wish I could take the credit for it, but it all starts with the youth program," Curran said. "We have a really solid commitment at the youth level. These kids come into the high school program with very good skills."

Don't be surprised if Cohasset has two representatives on next year's All-American team. Flibotte, of course, will be back, as is Grimm, another attackman that Curran felt had an All-American caliber season. Led by those two, the Skippers figure to continue putting up the goals next spring.

Sports Notes

The Cohasset Recreation Commission is accepting registrations for the following summer sports schools and clinics. Each sport program has a separate brochure and registration sheet and all are available in the foyer of Cohasset Town Hall, right outside the recreation office.

Checks for each week-long sports opportunity is generally payable to the individual camp providing the service. For information call (781)383-4109.

Youth Lacrosse Clinic – This one-week clinic, for boys and girls entering grades 3 through 6 in the fall, will take place from 8 to 10 a.m., Monday, July 23 through Friday, July 27, at Milliken Field in Cohasset. While the program is run by the Cohasset Recreation Department, it is open to players from other communities. The Buick brothers will direct the program this year.

Sessions are held rain or shine in all conditions except lightning. Players need full equipment. Participating girls need a stick, goggles and a mouth guard. Participating boys will need a helmet, including a mouthpiece, gloves, arm and shoulder pads and a stick. Players should also take water, juice or sports drink to each day's session. The fee is $85.

Soccer Camp – South Shore Soccer Camp's week-long clinic for children ages 7 to 14 will be held from 9 to 4 p.m., Monday, July 30 through Friday, Aug. 3. The fee is $255 per participant with a $20 discount for the second child. The fee includes a camp shirt for each participant, available the first day of camp. Space is limited; early registration is advised.

Soccer Squirts – South Shore Soccer Camp's week-long Soccer Squirts Clinic for children ages 4 and 5 will run from 8 to 9:30 a.m., Monday, Aug. 1 through Friday, Aug. 5. The fee is $85 per participant and includes a camp shirt and appropriated-size soccer ball for each participant, both available the first day of camp. Space is limited; early registration is advised.

Town soccer registration

Thirteen local students were honored by Community Newspaper Co. as The Best & The Brightest in an award ceremony last week.

The Best & The Brightest is a recognition program designed to spotlight outstanding young adults in communities covered by CNC's local newspapers. Readers were invited to nominate individuals between the ages of 16 and 21 who deserved to be honored, whether for academic achievement, volunteerism, athletic prowess, artistic acumen or the pursuit of excellence in another field. It was sponsored this year by Jordan Hospital.

The 13 winners, chosen by a selection committee of community leaders, were featured in a special section that was published the first week of June.

The winners are: Corey Belaief, of Plymouth; Brittany Bergquist, of Norwell; Austin Breslow, of Cohasset; Emily Felix, of Kingston; Joshua Goldman, of Weymouth; Chris Kasper, of Scituate; Rory McGuire, of Braintree; Timothy O'Mara, of Hanover; Jay Ribeiro, of Wareham; Kelly Ryan, of Hingham; Katelyn Sassorossi, of Pembroke; Lija Treibergs, of Duxbury; and Joshua Warren, of Marshfield.

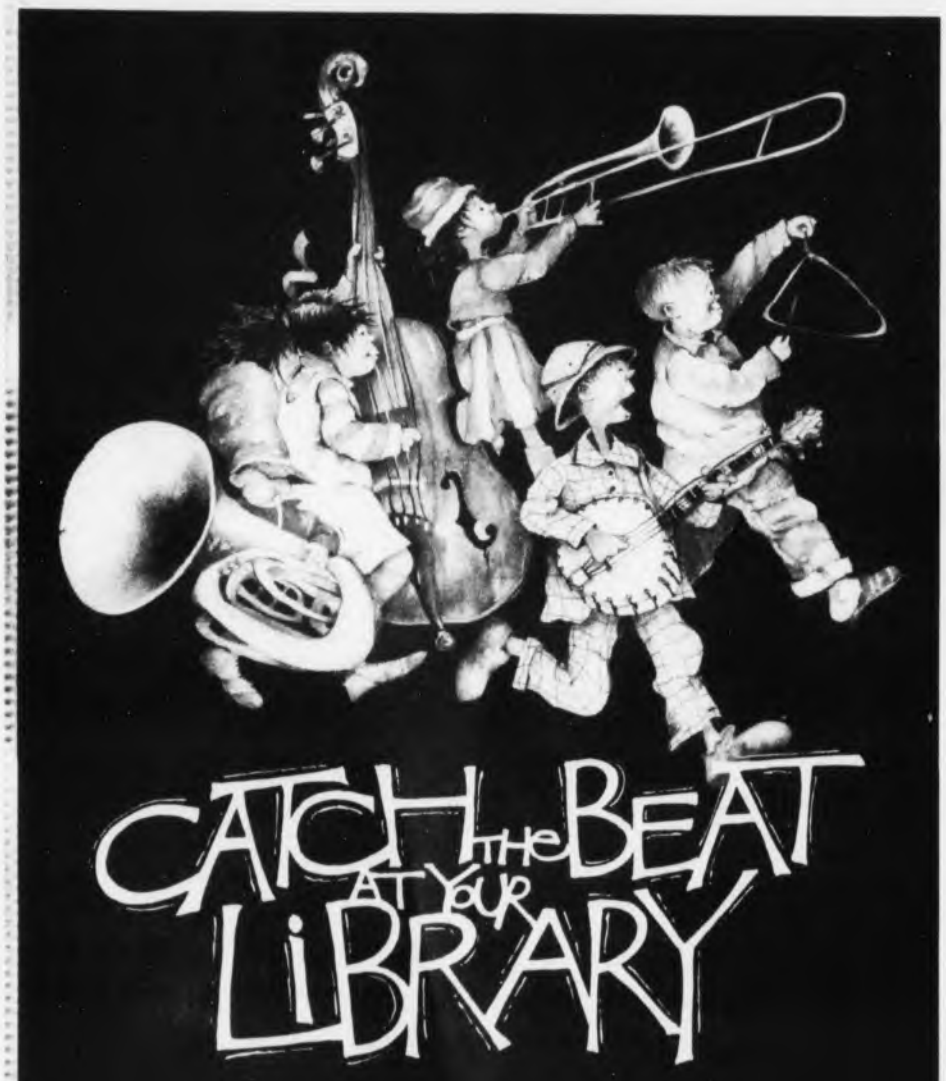
WCVB-TV Meteorologist Mike Wankum was the keynote speaker at the ceremony, held at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell.

He entertained the students, their families and guests with stories of Darwin award winners. As the Darwin Award books explain, "the awards honor people who ensure the long-term survival of the human race by removing themselves from the gene pool in a sublimely idiotic fashion."

While Wankum advised the students to avoid becoming Darwin award winners, he did challenge them to not be afraid to make mistakes.

"You can't experience the mountains if you don't have valleys. I salute you, commend you, and challenge you to think outside the box. Many great adventures start with a mistake. Perfectly planned expeditions are rarely written about.

"Thinking outside the box means you will make mistakes. Reach a little higher and you might fall, but your accomplishments will be so much sweeter," Wankum said.



The students received gifts from CNC and Jordan Hospital and a citation of recognition from the Massachusetts Senate, sent by Senate President Therese Murray.

Charity Golf Tournament July 30 in Cohasset

Norwell Visiting Nurse Association's ninth annual Charity Golf Tournament is set for Monday, July 30 at Cohasset Golf Club, Lamberts Lane in Cohasset. Rain date will be Monday, Aug. 20. This event, which takes place on a private Donald Ross-style course, is the Norwell VNA's biggest fundraiser of the year. All proceeds benefit the association in its ongoing efforts to provide low cost, quality healthcare to South Shore residents.

Registration for the tournament will take place at 11 a.m. with a shotgun start at noon. Tickets for the tournament are $185 per person and include lunch, unlimited use of the practice range and putting area, along with a sit-down dinner prepared by an award-winning chef. Separate, dinner-only reservations are available for $50 per person. The event will also include a raffle and silent auction, featuring a variety of prizes.

Make checks payable to the Friends of the Norwell VNA. For more information call Carey at 781-610-1422 or email jcarey@nvna.org.

Police calls, crashes climb as summer starts

Traffic stop

A Cohasset man was arrested following a traffic stop for speeding on Lamberts Lane on Saturday (June 23). As it turned out, the 51-year-old man, whose car was clocked as traveling at 49 mph, had a suspended license so he was taken into custody.

Junior operator

A junior operator, meaning the teen has had his license less than 6 months, was cited for having a group of teens in the car, a violation of the junior operator law.

The incident occurred while police were investigating a complaint about a large party at Sandy Cove at about 10 p.m. Wednesday (June 20). When officers responded they found two cars on Atlantic Avenue that were parked in somewhat of a haphazard fashion, Chief Hussey said. The officers waited a while and then had the cars towed and notified the registered owners. They also stopped a car with a bunch of teens inside and spoke with the driver, who turned out to be a junior operator. Although there did not appear to be any alcohol involved in the traffic stop, police believe the teens were part of the group that had been at Sandy Cove. They notified the parents of the teens in the car to pick them up and allowed the driver to leave with a citation. Chief Hussey said he urges all parents to make themselves familiar with junior operator driving restrictions.

Bike mishaps

Three riders in the benefit bike ride for Multiple Sclerosis fell when they entered the Sandy Beach parking lot, which was serving as a rest stop for the ride on Saturday. The people organizing the event asked that the far gate be opened for the water stop but the riders apparently did not realize there was a speed bump inside the gate until a few of the first riders went down. One of the participants had to be transported to the hospital and the other two were treated at the scene. Organizers warned subsequent riders about the speed bump, police said.

Underage party

Teens took off when police responded to a complaint about a loud house party on Black Horse Lane. Chief Hussey said this is the second time in recent weeks police have been called to the area about underage drinking. "This time we have a specific location and I will be speaking to the residents of the house," he said. After the call came in at 11:40 p.m. Monday (June 18), officers came across two teens who had run from the house and appeared to be intoxicated. One of the teens was walking on Summer Street toward Border Street and the other was near the woods. One was taken home because his mother was at home and the other was taken to the station where his father picked him up. "Now that we have an address (on Black Horse), I will be speaking to the homeowner," Hussey said.

Missing bike

Police said a bicycle that had been reported stolen was located in the woods behind the Village Deli on Tuesday (June 19) at about 10 a.m. The bike had been reported as missing about three weeks ago. Chief Hussey said it appears that whoever took the bike used it and left it behind the butcher shop. It was in good condition and was returned to its owner.

It's Happening

Blood drive Saturday

The Knights of Columbus and the American Red Cross will hold a blood drive from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., Saturday, June 30, at Knights of Columbus Hall, 440 Nantasket Ave., Hull. Nearly 2,000 units of blood are needed each day to help those in need in the local community.

Anyone 17 years of age or older, weighing 110 pounds or more and feeling in good health may be eligible to give blood. For information call 800-448-3543 or visit newenglandblood.org.

Drift Away to perform

Join Drift Away, with J Place, Joe Micarelli and John Litwin Tuesdays at 8:30 p.m., at the Snug, 114 North St., Hingham. No cover.

The band features a variety of smooth jazz, blues, soul and classic standards from the 40's, 50's, 60's and 70's.

They also perform from 3 to 5 p.m., Saturdays at French Memories Café, 175 South Main St., Cohasset.

Garage dance

There will be a dance at the Garage from 7 to 10 p.m., on Friday, July 20. Students in grades six through eight are welcome. There will be a door charge of $5 per person. Snacks and refreshments will be sold.

This is not a school function.

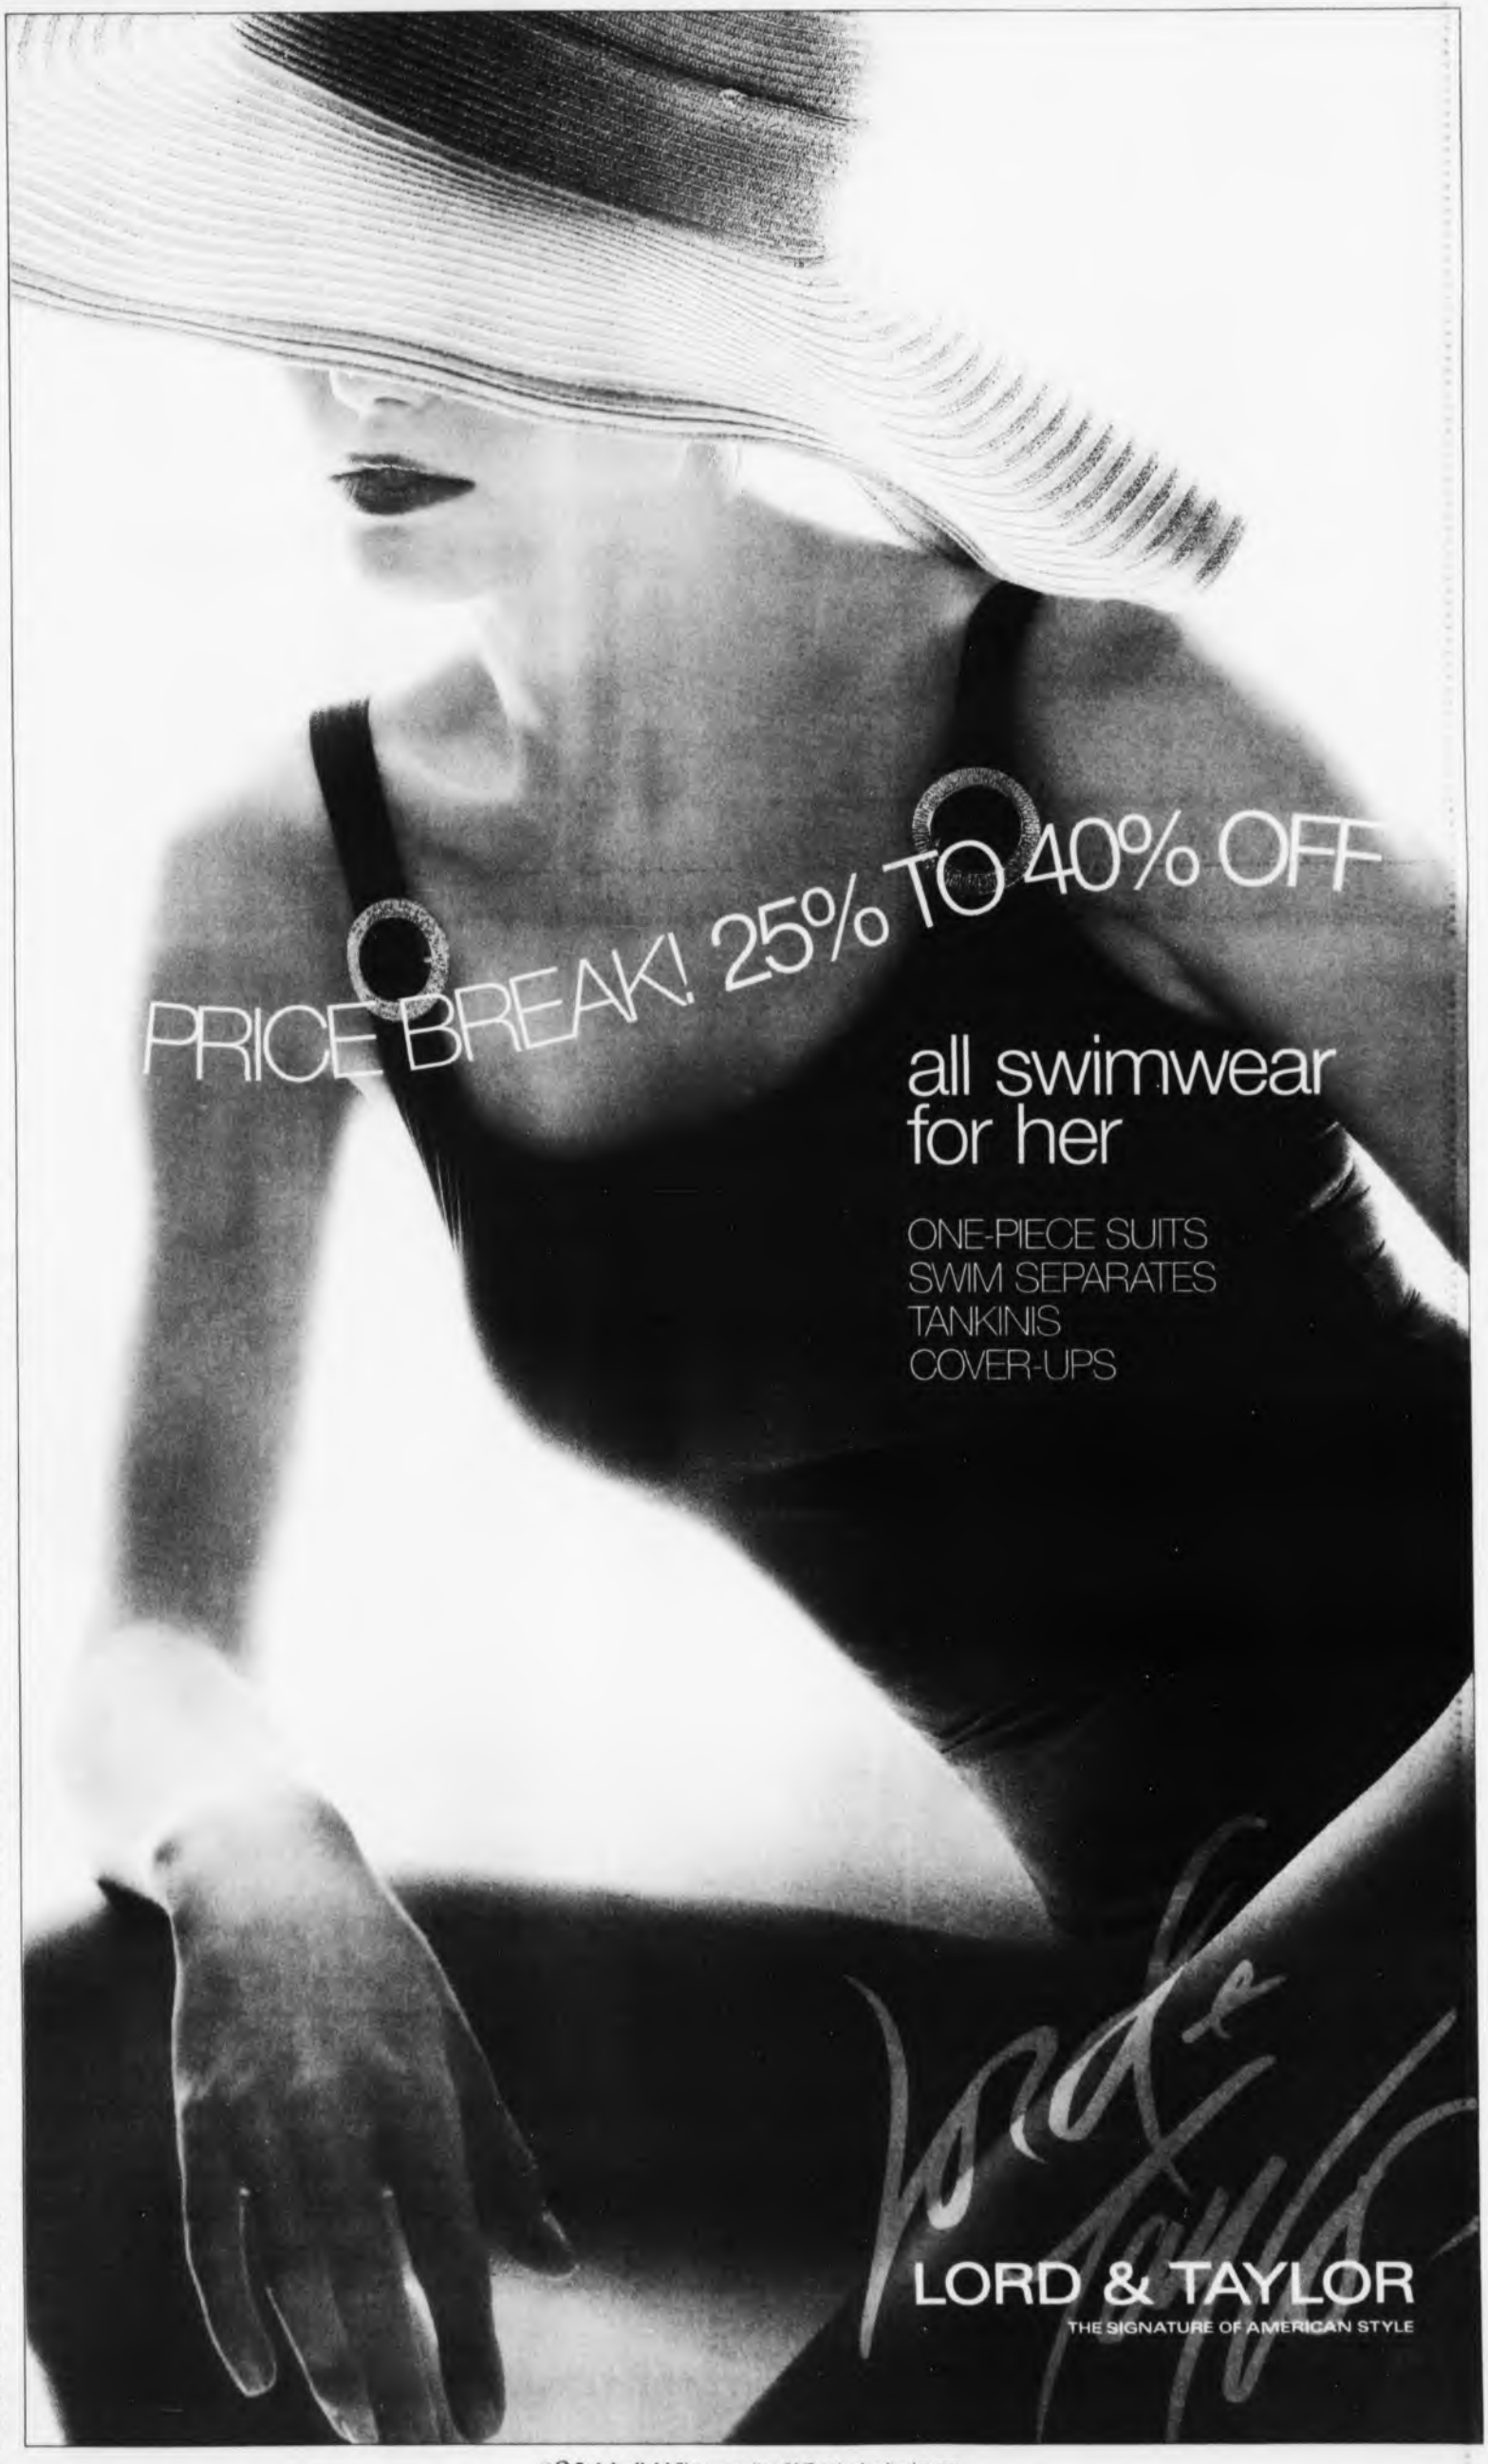
Dog obedience classes offered

Cohasset Recreation Department will offer dog obedience classes taught by Happy Dog Training School.

Beginner and advanced classes will take place Monday evenings on the Town Common in Cohasset. Fee is $110 for five classes, one hour per week program. Dog owners are required to have their dogs' shots/inoculations up to date.

To register, call the Recreation office at 781-383-4109. Classes are limited in size and participants will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis. Sessions are started about every five weeks and callers will be enrolled in the next available session during the summer.

Fitness hike to be held at Wompatuck State Park



Join a nature interpreter for a 5-mile hike within the beautiful Wompatuck State Park at 1 Union St. beginning at 10 a.m., Saturday, June 30. All ages are welcome to join this free event, which will include hiking with stops along the way to identify various species of plants. Be sure to bring plenty of water and dress for the weather. Participants will hike at a comfortable pace for 2 to 2.5 hours. For information or directions call 781-749-7160.

Buttonwood Books to host adult book group

The Buttonwood Book Group for Adults will meet at 7 p.m., Tuesday, July 10, at Buttonwood Books & Toys in Shaw's Plaza off Route 3A.

The selected book is "Wild Swans: Three Daughters of China" by Jung Chang. The facilitator is Sarah Duffield. No reservations are necessary. All are welcome to join. For information call Buttonwood Books & Toys at 781-383-2665.

DESTINATIONS

Warming up to Boulder year round

By Jennifer Skala

Plenty of us here on the east coast are quick to think of Colorado as a winter wonderland. While that description may be accurate for a few months every year, many cities in the Rocky Mountain state experience more than 300 days of gorgeous sunshine. Boulder is one such place.

Located just 35 miles outside of the capital city of Denver, Boulder is a beautiful college town set in the foothills of the Rocky Mountains. Boulder is the perfect destination for the outdoorsy type, although there's something to offer for everyone. With its pleasant weather and countless trails, the city is amenable for walking, running, hiking, and biking.

A great spot for any and all of these activities is Chautauqua Park, a National Historic Landmark located in Boulder. The 40-acre park is made up of green fields, community buildings, rental cottages, and miles of hiking trails. With trails winding beneath the legendary Flatirons rock formations, the park's amazing vistas will delight both shutterbugs and nature buffs. Even novice hikers can enjoy the park on some of Chautauqua's easier trails. In addition to the great outdoors, the Chautauqua also offers a variety of entertainment and educational classes throughout the summer.

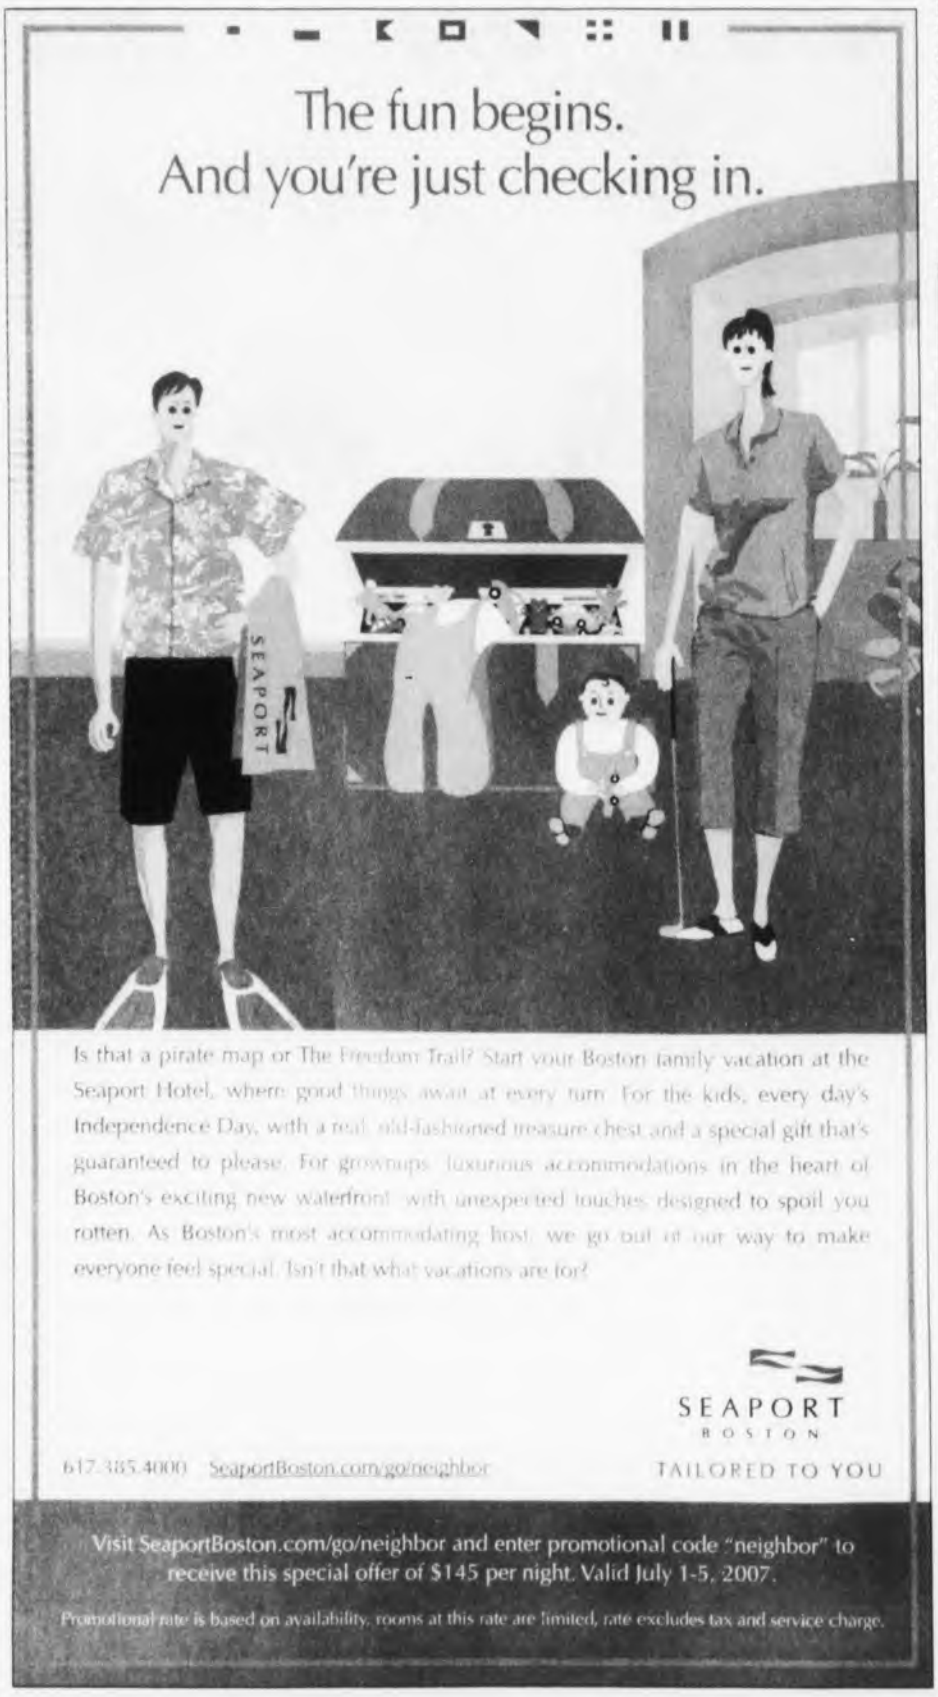
To ease the body's adjustment into the higher altitude, visitors should drink plenty of water and refrain from too much physical activity the first day or two in Boulder.

For the more retail-minded Boulder visitor, the Pearl Street Mall is a must-see. This outdoor pedestrian mall is four blocks of shops and restaurants. The mall's perfectly manicured walkways offer a sunny alternative to the loud, florescent-lit setting of most indoor shopping centers. The Pearl Street Mall is also a popular spot to find musicians and sidewalk performers.



As a true college town, Boulder has a lot of pride for the local team — The University of Colorado Buffaloes. With the university's main campus located in Boulder, touches of CU can be found all over. In fact, daring students even painted "CU" onto the face of one of the Flatirons in the 1940s. The graffiti was painted over in the 1970s, but the nod to CU can still be faintly seen.

The CU campus is beautiful and sprawling — and it doesn't hurt that the breathtaking Rockies can be seen in the distance. For more shopping and dining, try the area of town called University Hill, located right off campus. If traveling to Boulder during football season, definitely stop to root on the home team at the impressive Folsom Field.

A word of warning before venturing to Boulder: be prepared for the high altitude! At 5,430 feet above sea level, Boulder's high elevation causes a decreased level of oxygen in the atmosphere. To ease the body's adjustment into the higher altitude, visitors should drink plenty of water and refrain from too much physical activity the first day or two in Boulder.

Although Boulder may be a popular spot in the winter, its seasonal weather and countless attractions make it an inviting destination all year round.

OBITUARIES

Mary M. (Martin) Hicks

Loved bridge, golf and dancing

Mary M. (Martin) Hicks, 86, of Hull died Wednesday at home after a long illness.

Mrs. Hicks, a homemaker, was born a coalminer's daughter in Kingston, Pennsylvania, where she was raised and educated. She married fighter pilot Warren Hicks at the beginning of World War II and moved to a lakeside log cabin in New Jersey (25 miles west of New York City) after the war. There, she spent 30 years raising seven children.

Mrs. Hicks then spent 20 years in Florida, where she pursued with her husband mutual passions for bridge, golf and dancing. She also enjoyed knitting and was a voracious reader and an occasional "granny sitter" for her friends' mothers.

Mary M. (Martin) Hicks

Since returning north eight years ago, she has lived in Rockland and Cohasset as well as Hull, making many friends at the Cohasset Senior Center.

Wife of the late Warren F. Hicks, she leaves her daughters Molly Pierson and her husband Wigmore of Cohasset and Patricia O'Rourke and her husband, James of Hull; sons Michael and his wife Arlene of Florida, Martin and his wife Lynn of Vancouver, B.C., Edward and his wife Geri of Oconomowac, Wisc., and Daniel of Hull. She was also the mother of the late Timothy.

Mrs. Hicks is also survived by 17 grandchildren and 17 great grandchildren.

A funeral mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. Monday at St. Anthony's Church, 128 S. Main St., Cohasset.

Burial will be at Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Bernadette J. McAuliffe

Funeral Mass Saturday

Bernadette J. (McWeeny) McAuliffe, 93, of Cohasset, died peacefully June 2, 2007, surrounded by her children.

Mrs. McAuliffe was the daughter of the late Marcus W. and Marie C. (Thornton) McWeeny.

Wife of the late Joseph E. McAuliffe, she leaves her children, Joan M. McAuliffe of Hull, Mary Elizabeth O'Brien and her husband, William, of Barnstable Village, John Joseph and his wife, Hawley Hilton McAuliffe, of Greenwich, Conn., and Ellen M. Morrissey of Cohasset; and five grandsons, Sean, William and Christopher O'Brien and Hilton and Justin McAuliffe.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m., on Saturday, June 30, at St. Anthony Church in Cohasset. Visiting hours at McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset, will be from 4 to 8 p.m., on Friday, June 29. Interment in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Bernadette J. McAuliffe

Australian will play varied program on Carillon

The second program in the 83rd season of Summer Carillon Recitals on the Cohasset carillon will be presented at 6 p.m., on Sunday, July 1, by Suzanne Magassy of Canberra, Australia. Magassy's varied program will include original compositions for carillon by John Courter, Gary White and Leen 't Hart, transcriptions from the classics by Van den Gheyn, Telemann, Mozart and Rossini, and arrangements from "My Fair Lady" and "Jesus Christ Superstar."

The hour-long recital is free of charge. It will take place regardless of weather conditions. In case of rain, the bells may be heard from parked cars. Printed programs, schedules and brochures will be distributed on the Cohasset Common, and will also be available in a stand by the courtyard of St. Stephen's Church on Highland Avenue extension. Listeners are invited to bring chairs, blankets and picnics to the common or the church courtyard. Following the program, the tower will be open to visitors for a demonstration by the carillonneur and a look at the bells.

For more information, call St. Stephen's Church at 781-383-1083; the church carillonneur, Sally Slade Warner at 978-475-2599; or the assistant carillonneur, Mary Kennedy at 781-383-9599.

We welcome all to our inclusive spiritual community. We affirm our Unitarian Universalist Principles and put them into action by worshiping together, caring for one another, and working for a safe, just, and sustainable world.

Summer services begin July 8 and run through August 26! All begin at 9 AM and are in the Meeting House.

They are informal, intergenerational, and inviting!

There will be no service on Sunday, July 1.

On July 8, a service on "Friendship" will be led by the Women's Spirit Group. Come join us!

All are welcome as we worship and learn and live our faith together! To learn more about First Parish Unitarian Universalist, please come by the Parish House and pick up the current monthly newsletter, The Common, or visit our website at www.firstparishcohasset.org or contact Rev. McCartney comes of age

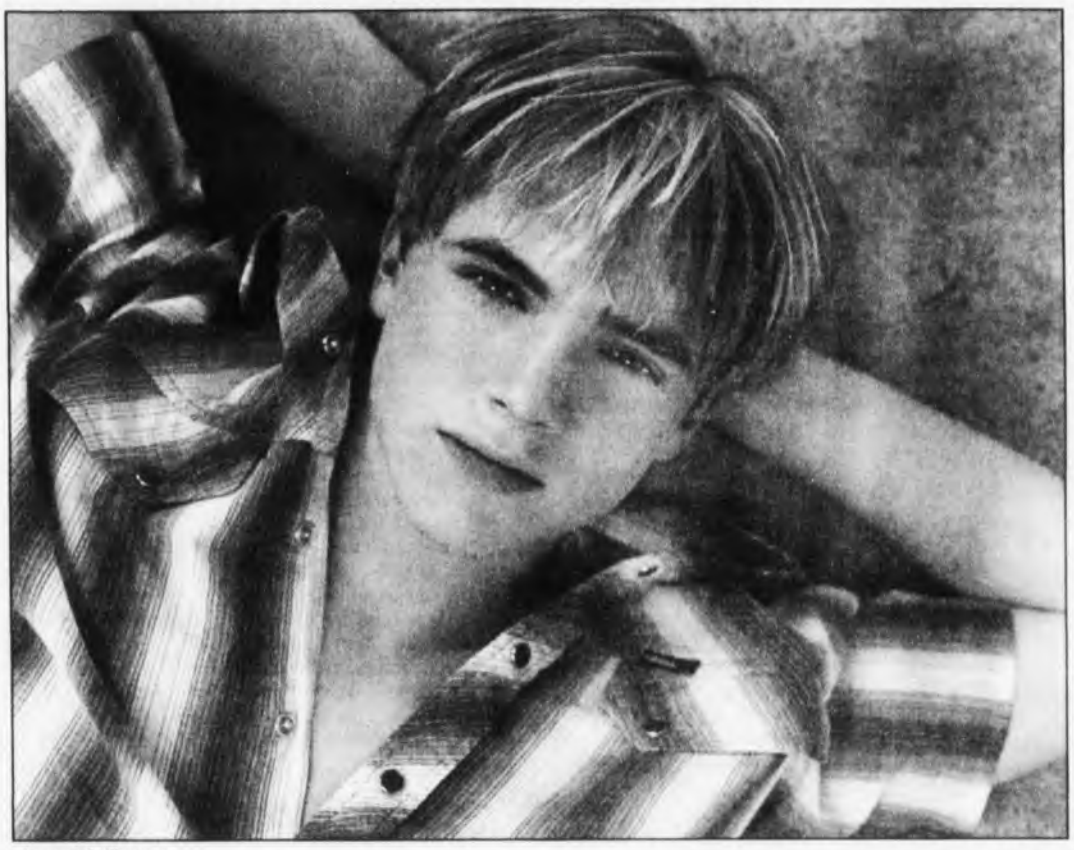
Now 20, boy band star is ready to rock



By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

More than a decade into a career as a singer and actor that saw him earn his first platinum album as part of the boy band "Dream Street" when he was just 12-years-old, Jesse McCartney clearly knows not only what it takes to achieve show business success, but also how to sustain it. McCartney — who will perform in concert at the South Shore Music Circus on July 6 — released his second solo album, "Right Where You Want Me", last fall and is already at work on his third due next year from Hollywood Records.

"I did all the writing for the current album during the 'Beautiful Soul' tour," explained McCartney, 20, recently by telephone, "Vocally it is similar to my first album, but it also has more of a rock edge."

When the title track of his 2004 platinum selling release, "Beautiful Soul", hit number five on the singles charts, the Westchester, N.Y. native knew that the fans he made during "Dream Street" and his three-year-run on ABC-TV's "All My Children" as "Adam Chandler, Jr.," a role that earned him two back to back Daytime Emmy nominations as Best Younger Actor, were very much still in his corner.

"On 'Beautiful Soul,' I was a new artist and so I had few expectations," he said. "With the success of that record, I guess I quickly realized that I could be doing this for a while. I had started writing music maybe three or four years ago about the same time that I started getting the songs together for the first album. I'm very into rhythm singing, so I write with that in mind."

Jesse McCartney

When it came to his second album, "Right Where You Want Me," McCartney co-wrote every track, but one, with his guitarist and musical director Dory Lobel, and also re-teamed with Adam Watts and Andy Dodd, the songwriters behind "Beautiful Soul".

"I wanted to take my music a step forward from 'Beautiful Soul' to show some growth and maturity. It's the difference between being 15 and 20. At the same time, I think my fans have grown up as well and those that liked the first album will like the second one, too. It is very melodic."

McCartney — currently playing a series of tour dates in Italy before heading to Cohasset next week — has earned an American following not just from his music, but also from acting roles on the short-lived WB series, "Summerland," and in other television and film projects.

"I wouldn't have wanted to go right into another series right after 'Summerland.' Television is a great cross-promotion for my music, though, so I would never say never to another TV series, but I would like to concentrate more on films. When I get home, I'm meeting with a bunch of directors. I'm in love with a couple of independent films right now so that is a direction I want to explore. I'd also love to do another stint on Broadway," says McCarthy who appeared with Roger Daltrey in a "A Christmas Carol" in New York in 1997.

The young performer admits to some disappointment when he lost the role of Linc Larkin in the upcoming feature film version of the Broadway musical "Hairspray" to "High School Musical" star Zac Efron, his "Summerland" co-star.

"I wanted to work with John Travolta so I was interested in doing that movie, but Zac is a friend so I am happy for him. He'll be terrific in the role. Disney has talked to me about doing the feature film version of 'High School Musical,' but that's not for me. I thought about it, but I decided I didn't want to do something where I wouldn't be comfortable. I'm not bashing 'High School Musical'. It is hugely popular, but it is not my style."

While he waits for the right film project to come along, McCartney is busy on tour and also writing and recording new music.

"I'm stoked. I've never been happier in my life," says McCartney. "I've let the pressure go completely. I'm just enjoying playing with my band. For me, it isn't about money or fame. If that doesn't happen then it doesn't happen. What it's really all about is the love of the music."

Jesse McCartney will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on Friday, July 6, along with The Jonas Brothers and Girl Authority. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-931-2787 or go online at themusiccircus.org.

Movie review

Daniel (Dan Futterman) and Mariane Pearl (Angelina Jolie) share a quiet, romantic dinner, shortly before tragic events change their lives.

'Heart' ache

"A Mighty Heart" (B-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

A terrible title, a difficult subject, "A Mighty Heart" is a hard sell in spite of solid work by Angelina Jolie.

In the role of Marianne Pearl, the pregnant, French-born wife of doomed American journalist Daniel Pearl (Dan Futterman), Jolie displays grace, wisdom, strength and turmoil. It's a role certain to receive a Golden Globe nomination from the celebrity-crazed Hollywood Foreign Press Association and continues the image makeover from Jolie's Billy-Bob's-Bride-of-Blood days to Evita-meets-Mother-Teresa-like ambassador of good will (Brad Pitt is one of the film's producers).

Directed by the prolific, maddeningly eclectic Michael Winterbottom ("24 Hour Party People," "In This World," "9 Songs"), "A Mighty Heart" demonstrates much of what Winterbottom has learned shooting on streets all over the world, using portable equipment and available light. As a display of guerilla filmmaking art, "A Mighty Heart" is brilliant.

As garden-variety docudrama with expository voiceovers and captions, it is more conventional and somewhat less impressive. The film begins with the reasons the happy-as-clams Pearls are in Karachi, Pakistan in 2002 and their credentials. He works for the Wall Street Journal; she for a French radio station.

The beautiful, Paris-raised Marianne, who has an Afro-Cuban mother and Dutch father (Jolie's accent is hard to pin down), is five months pregnant and radiantly happy. The couple share a gated home with Asra Nomani (Archie Panjabi), a beautiful Muslim-Indian journalist who also works for the Wall Street Journal, where Daniel, who is Jewish, has been on staff since 1990.

Soon, Daniel, who was supposed to meet a Sheik Gilani at a restaurant, is kidnapped by extremists angered by U.S. treatment of Muslim detainees and the long, hostage nightmare ensues.

"A Mighty Heart" blends actual footage of Pakistani President Musharraf and former Secretary of State Colin Powell, for example, with street action shot by Marcel Zyskind ("Tristram Shandy") and achieves a powerful level of you-are-there immediacy. But because of the structure of the film, which was adapted by John Orloff ("Band of Brothers") from the book by Marianne Pearl, Jolie's performance is somewhat monotonous, running the gamut from distraught to extremely distraught.

Plus, we see altogether too many wistful flashbacks and too much fiddling with cell phones and reading of e-mails. The film's air of dreadful inevitability, compounded by the often-dolorous background music, is squirm-inducing, and the game of peek-a-boo with the video of Pearl's beheading is deplorable.

In the supporting cast, Will Patton is reptilian as a U.S. Consulate executive, and Irrfan Khan ("The Warrior"), as a dogged Pakistani cop, once again shows us why he should be an international movie star.

"A Mighty Heart" is wrenching. How could it not be? But it is not great.

Rated R. "A Mighty Heart" contains emotionally-wrenching scenes.

Theater review

Humor heats up the Huntington stage

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Kiki and Herb are the alter egos of Justin Bond and Kenny Mellman.

Whether you're gay, straight, Jewish or Catholic, black, yellow, or Buddhist, Kiki will have something to say about you. She leaves no group uncommented on, and she does it all with devilish wit.

When most of us think of theater at this time of year, we think of the Cape Playhouse or maybe Wellfleet. Don't head to the Sagamore bridge just yet, however, because the Huntington Theatre Company is heating up the early summer with "Kiki & Herb: Alive from Broadway," an outrageously funny addition to a memorable season, now at Boston's Calderwood Pavilion.

Booze-soaked songstress Kiki DuRane and her accompanist, Herb, have been performing together for over 50 years and can trace their friendship back even further, much further if their patter is to be believed. In reality, Kiki and Herb are the alter egos of Justin Bond and Kenny Mellman who have been earning raves on the New York cabaret scene since 1992.

As Kiki explains, she and Herb first met at the birth of Jesus. She isn't kidding either. She and Herb share the stage with a stuffed cow that they say they first met in the manger. Kiki and Herb are old, for sure, but their material is as fresh, funny and clever as any being performed today. If you want to enjoy them fully, however, you would be well advised to check your political correctness at the door.

Whether you're gay, straight, Jewish or Catholic, black, yellow, or Buddhist, Kiki will have something to say about you. She leaves no group uncommented on, and she does it all with devilish wit.

Arriving here earlier this month just three days after the Broadway mounting of this show lost the Tony Award for Best Special Theatrical Event to ventriloquist Jay Johnson for "Jay Johnson: The Two and Only," Kiki was still mad on opening night in Boston.

"We lost the Tony to a puppet. And the winner put the Tony in my face and asked me if I wanted to kiss it," says Kiki, before explaining what she had told Johnson he could kiss in response to his offer. Kiki speaks her mind on everything from her happiness over the recent death of Moral Majority founder Jerry Falwell to the current Pope's fashion choices. "He wears Prada shoes, which just goes to show that the Devil really does wear Prada."

When she herself isn't pontificating on world events, Kiki is singing in a voice that strongly suggests that she may have had vocal training from Carol Channing, that is if she weren't old enough to have babysat for the "Hello, Dolly!" star. As played by Mellman, Herb not only offers Kiki the perfect amount of piano panache to go along with her ribaldry, but also a deadpan devotion that may leave you wishing you had a Herb at your side.

Kiki & Herb may be vintage cabaret performers, but their musical selections are often as contemporary as their social commentary. They pay their own unique homage to Radiohead and The Scissor Sisters and dip further back to prove themselves every bit the equal of Pat Benatar with their take on "Love is a Battlefield." If you were buying albums at Strawberries in Downtown Crossing in the 1980s, then you will also appreciate what they do with Dan Fogelberg's "Same Old Lang Syne" and the classic Bonnie Tyler anthem, "Total Eclipse of the Heart."

Longevity in any business usually requires reinvention, something that Kiki & Herb do masterfully thanks to the considerable performing and writing talents of Bond and Mellman. The rest of the summer theater season can wait. Don't miss this one!

The Huntington Theatre Company will present "Kiki & Herb: Alive from Broadway" at the Stanford Calderwood Pavilion, 527 Tremont St., Boston, through June 30. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-266-0800 or go online at huntingtontheatre.org.

Ready. Set. Go!

Cohasset Tri set for Sunday

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For 720 athletes, Sunday will begin with anything but a lazy morning. The inaugural Cohasset Triathlon will have athletes dive into the cool waters off Sandy Beach then pedal and pound the picturesque streets of Cohasset come 8a.m. on Sunday.

"I have been taken back by the 'buzz' the Triathlon has created in town."
— Bill Burnett, race director

After months of planning with town and community officials, Race Director Bill Burnett hopes the race goes off without a hitch. A safety plan is in place with the police and fire departments. Details and logistics have been worked out over thousands of phone calls and e-mails.

"I have been taken back by the 'buzz' the Triathlon has created in town. I love seeing people swimming, biking, and running to prepare for the event. It's got a real good feel to it," says Burnett. The course, which Burnett says puts Cohasset's best features front and center, will start and finish at Sandy Beach. The bike portion will take athletes along Cohasset's shoreline and through its historic districts while the running leg stars Little Harbor.

Amid the 720 participants, 20 percent hailing from Cohasset, is a hometown Ironman triathlete, Rob Simms. The Cohasset Triathlon will serve a stepping stone to Simms' participation in his fifth Ironman triathlon on July 22 in Lake Placid, N.Y. What many people would consider a hobby, Simms participation in Ironman triathlons has evolved into a way of life.

"There's a fair amount of suffering in an Ironman," he says with a big grin on his face. For him, the motivation to compete and to train is the same as participating in any longer distance endurance event, "the longer the distance, the harder the effort, the bigger the payoff."

An Ironman triathlon is arguably the most grueling athletic competition in the world and officially the longest distance triathlon one can participate in. Over a punishing 140 miles Ironman

Little Harbor bids are in

Sewer expansion to begin this month

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Little Harbor sewer expansion is gearing up to start in the coming month. The long awaited project will result in 485 additional homes on town sewer and an updated (and expanded) wastewater treatment plant.

The town has received two bids on the wastewater treatment plant expansion and a total of 12 bids on the collection system portion of the project, said Town Manager Bill Griffin. Some water main replacement and drainage work was wrapped up into the bid. Earlier this week, bids and references were checked for the low bidders.

"Though we are still reviewing the many bids received, it does appear that the project came in well within our project budget, so that is very good news," said Griffin in an e-mail earlier this week.

Town Meeting has allocated $15.2 million for the Little Harbor sewer expansion project. Little Harbor homeowners will reap the benefit of the sewer expansion but also bear the burden of paying for it. The project timeline should have all homes hooked up to the town sewer by 2011. The homeowners will pay a sewer betterment fee over a twenty-year period.

At the recent annual Town Meeting, voters approved a $1 million allocation to devote to water main replacement and drainage improvements for the flooding prone district.

"There are some big names competing for the bid," said Sewer Commission Chairman Sean Cunning, which led to competitive pricing, "it's looking good."

The Water and Sewer Commissions met jointly on Thursday afternoon (after

Navy veteran to help local veterans

Robert Jackson appointed to post

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Fireworks, parades, cookouts and red, white and blue decorations are Americans' way of showing how proud we are to live in this country. The Fourth of July is an annual reminder of how much patriotism is still alive. But none of the freedoms and liberties celebrated would be possible without the armed services unwavering diligence to protect them.

Robert W. Jackson, Cohasset's recently appointed Director of Veterans' Services, hopes to return the favor by aiding the town's veterans in getting government benefits they deserve.

"When I came back from Vietnam there was not much of a safety net for returning veterans," said Jackson. Now, there are more services and benefits available for veterans, Jackson said, but knowing what they are and how to get them is an entirely new problem.

Robert Jackson, who served in the U.S. Navy both on active duty and in the reserves, is the town's new veterans agent. Jackson says he wants to help Cohasset's veterans take advantage of state and federal benefits.

West Corner culvert repairs coming

Construction could begin next year

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

At the public meeting, several people in attendance expressed concern over the nearby misalignment of Jerusalem Road and the island facing it at the intersection of Route 228.

Three towns have come together to solve a mutual problem. In a cooperative effort, Cohasset, Hingham and Hull have joined forces to reconstruct the West Corner culvert. Funding for the multi-million dollar project was hard to come by and each town wouldn't have been able to repair the bridge on their own.

Now, after years of hard work by citizens, town officials and residents, the design plans for the culvert reconstruction are underway and 25 percent complete. Work is expected to commence as early as next year.

A Mass Highway report in 2000 rated the bridge in poor condition and in need of repair. The now 99-year-old bridge was in desperate need of repair. The bridge passed over the connection between Straights Pond and the Weir River Estuary. While the bridge is primarily a public safety issue, replacement of the culvert—including installing new, wider tidal gates—is expected to increase tidal flow and salinity in Straights Pond and improve the quality of the pond and the neighboring residents.

Because of its unique location, ownership of the culvert is 50 percent Hull, and 25 percent each Cohasset and Hingham. West Corner isn't located west of anywhere, rather it is where East Hingham, South Hull and North Cohasset meet. It was originally called West's Corner after Charles West who operated a general store there a century ago.

Back in April, the Massachusetts Highway Department held a public hearing at Hingham Town Hall to discuss the plans and hear community concerns. Representing Cohasset, Conservation Agent Ed Graham attended the public meeting. In a letter to Town Manager Bill Griffin, he wrote engineering work would continue through December 2007 and, if required, another Mass Highway meeting with the three towns would be scheduled.

The construction schedule will require a closure of the bridge and traffic will be detoured. Traffic coming from Route 228 will be re-routed along Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue. Route 3A and George Washington Boulevard will also be signed as detour routes. The detours could last as long as three months.

"Using Jerusalem Road will in my opinion cause a serious impact on residents entering and leaving their homes. The Town should examine the problem well," stated Graham in a letter to the Town Manager.

At the public meeting, several people in attendance expressed concern over the nearby misalignment of Jerusalem Road and the island facing it at the intersection of Route 228. The lack of sidewalks and crosswalks to facilitate pedestrian and bicycle connectivity was also brought up, reported Town Manager Bill Griffin at the June 18 meeting of the Board of Selectmen. The Town of Hingham suggested they and the town of Cohasset share the cost for design services to alleviate the problem, said Griffin.

"I would recommend we move ahead in this cooperative effort to improve this intersection at the same time the culvert is replaced," stated Griffin in a memo to the Selectmen. Cohasset's portion would come out of the state Chapter 90 funds. The Board of Selectmen agreed unanimously to approve the expenditure. The expense to the town is estimated to be between $5,000 and $7,500.

Funding for the project, with a price tag of $2.7 million, has slowly been coming together over a period of years. In 2004, Senator Robert Hedlund and Representative Garrett Bradley secured state bonding authorizations totaling $1 million to help fund the culvert project. In 2006, Hedlund and Bradley again helped to secure state Mass Highway funding. They worked with the former State Secretary of Transportation John Cogliano to expand the scope of work so the culvert replacement project would meet criteria for state participation in the project. There is a federal commitment for $700,000 for the project.

The three towns are responsible for the cost of the design work for the culvert reconstruction; Town Meeting appropriated $25,000 for engineering costs for the West Corner culvert reconstruction in 2004. Grants have helped with the remaining costs.

POLICE BEAT

Noisy underage party leads to charges

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police broke up a noisy underage party at about 7:50 p.m. Tuesday (June 26) on Black Rock Road. Officers, who were responding to a complaint about the party, came across "multiple young people" outside a house and observed a couple of them drinking alcohol, Chief James Hussey said. Police arrested two Quincy teens and charged them with being minors in possession of alcohol.

They also confiscated a keg of beer as part of the investigation and identified the person who purchased it. Police are summonsing the person who bought the keg, a 21-year-old Cohasset resident, and they are also summonsing to court the teen that lived at the house where the party was taking place. Both will face the charge of furnishing alcohol to persons under 21. Police identified others present at the party, took their names, and contacted their parents, Hussey said.

Erratic driver

A cell caller helped police stop a woman who was allegedly driving erratically last Friday (June 29) at about 1:20 p.m. The caller observed a green Ford Escort station wagon with New Hampshire tags cause a near accident on Route 3A; the caller then reported seeing the car turn right onto Beechwood Street. An officer in an unmarked vehicle (he was conducting warrant service) was parked on Beechwood near Mill Lane and saw the Escort turn right up Bound Brook Lane. The officer stopped the car and identified the woman, a 40-year-old Plymouth resident. Chief Hussey said she told the officer she had an expired license and was unable to produce the registration. A computer check revealed she had been charged with unlicensed operation in Rhode Island and that her New Hampshire license had been suspended. Based on those facts, the officer placed her under arrest and charged her with unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle.

OUI arrest

A 48-year-old Hull woman is facing drunk driving charges following an accident on King Street on Tuesday (June 26) at 7:30 p.m.

Dispatch received a 911 call about a car that had driven into a parked tractor-trailer truck. When officers arrived they saw the truck parked off to the side of the 100 block of King Street (3A) with its flashers on. There was a green Ford sedan in the parking lot with extensive damage to the passenger side. The truck operator reported he was outside the truck and was not hurt when the Ford sedan struck his truck.

Based on their conversation with the woman and observations from the witness who saw her driving, police determined the woman was operating under the influence of alcohol. EMTs evaluated her at the scene and then she was brought the station. She was charged with OUI, driving to endanger and failure to stay in marked lanes.

Run off road

A motorist told police he had to swerve to avoid an oncoming car and drove off the road and into a tree at about the 300 block of Jerusalem Road on Tuesday (June 26) at about 7:30 p.m. The victim, who was transported to the hospital and was complaining of back and neck pain, described the other vehicle as a dark-colored SUV with one headlight out. The car had crossed into his lane.

Chief Hussey said there was no contact between the SUV and the man's car, which sustained front-end damage and had to be towed from the scene. The accident is under investigation.

Stolen bike

Last week a mother and son went to police headquarters to report that the boy's bicycle had been stolen at Sandy Beach. The boy left the bike unlocked in the rack and when he returned the bicycle was gone, Chief Hussey said. The bike is described as green in color with a banana seat and large butterfly handlebars. Hussey said police checked the garage at the station where bikes are stored that have been located and it was not there. "We're asking anyone who has seen the bike to report that to police," he said. The incident, which was reported at 6 p.m. Monday (June 25), is under investigation.

Cat attack

A cat apparently attacked its owner who lives in the Harborview Apartments off Elm Street on Monday (June 25) at about 1 p.m. The cat was also reported to have attacked the woman that does the laundry there. The cat owner was transported to the hospital and treated for a cat bite. The cat is in the custody of a relative until the owner makes a determination whether to keep the animal or have it put down, Chief Hussey said.

Hit and run

Hingham police reported a hit and run involving two cars at about 1:30 p.m. on Tuesday (June 26) in the vicinity of Hull Street and Grace Drive. Hingham police followed the car as it drove toward Hull onto Nantasket Avenue and then onto Berkley Street. The driver turned out to be a junior operator who was transporting four passengers, none of whom met the requirements to allow the teenage driver to operate the vehicle legally.

Chief Hussey said the teen said he knew he "had gotten close" to the car on Hull Street but did not think he had actually hit the car. The alleged incident occurred on the Cohasset side of Hull Street so Cohasset cited the teen, who lives in Brockton, for driving outside the junior operator license parameters. Hussey said the damage to the victim's car was minimal but the officer did observe that the vehicles had made contact so the teen was also cited for leaving the scene after causing property damage.

West Corner culvert repairs coming

Construction could begin next year

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

At the public meeting, several people in attendance expressed concern over the nearby misalignment of Jerusalem Road and the island facing it at the intersection of Route 228.

Three towns have come together to solve a mutual problem. In a cooperative effort, Cohasset, Hingham and Hull have joined forces to reconstruct the West Corner culvert. Funding for the multi-million dollar project was hard to come by and each town wouldn't have been able to repair the bridge on their own.

Now, after years of hard work by citizens, town officials and residents, the design plans for the culvert reconstruction are underway and 25 percent complete. Work is expected to commence as early as next year.

A Mass Highway report in 2000 rated the bridge in poor condition and in need of repair. The now 99-year-old bridge was in desperate need of repair. The bridge passed over the connection between Straights Pond and the Weir River Estuary. While the bridge is primarily a public safety issue, replacement of the culvert—including installing new, wider tidal gates—is expected to increase tidal flow and salinity in Straights Pond and improve the quality of the pond and the neighboring residents .

Because of its unique location, ownership of the culvert is 50 percent Hull, and 25 percent each Cohasset and Hingham. West Corner isn't located west of anywhere, rather it is where East Hingham, South Hull and North Cohasset meet. It was originally called West's Corner after Charles West who operated a general store there a century ago.

Back in April, the Massachusetts Highway Department held a public hearing at Hingham Town Hall to discuss the plans and hear community concerns. Representing Cohasset, Conservation Agent Ed Graham attended the public meeting. In a letter to Town Manager Bill Griffin, he wrote engineering work would continue through December 2007 and, if required, another Mass Highway meeting with the three towns would be scheduled.

The construction schedule will require a closure of the bridge and traffic will be detoured. Traffic coming from Route 228 will be re-routed along Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue. Route 3A and George Washington Boulevard will also be signed as detour routes. The detours could last as long as three months.

"Using Jerusalem Road will in my opinion cause a serious impact on residents entering and leaving their homes. The Town should examine the problem well," stated Graham in a letter to the Town Manager.

At the public meeting, several people in attendance expressed concern over the nearby misalignment of Jerusalem Road and the island facing it at the intersection of Route 228. The lack of sidewalks and crosswalks to facilitate pedestrian and bicycle connectivity was also brought up, reported Town Manager Bill Griffin at the June 18 meeting of the Board of Selectmen. The Town of Hingham suggested they and the town of Cohasset share the cost for design services to alleviate the problem, said Griffin.

"I would recommend we move ahead in this cooperative effort to improve this intersection at the same time the culvert is replaced," stated Griffin in a memo to the Selectmen. Cohasset's portion would come out of the state Chapter 90 funds. The Board of Selectmen agreed unanimously to approve the expenditure. The expense to the town is estimated to be between $5,000 and $7,500.

Funding for the project, with a price tag of $2.7 million, has slowly been coming together over a period of years. In 2004, Senator Robert Hedlund and Representative Garrett Bradley secured state bonding authorizations totaling $1 million to help fund the culvert project. In 2006, Hedlund and Bradley again helped to secure state Mass Highway funding. They worked with the former State Secretary of Transportation John Cogliano to expand the scope of work so the culvert replacement project would meet criteria for state participation in the project. There is a federal commitment for $700,000 for the project.

The three towns are responsible for the cost of the design work for the culvert reconstruction; Town Meeting appropriated $25,000 for engineering costs for the West Corner culvert reconstruction in 2004. Grants have helped with the remaining costs.

POLICE BEAT

Noisy underage party leads to charges

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police broke up a noisy underage party at about 7:50 p.m. Tuesday (June 26) on Black Rock Road. Officers, who were responding to a complaint about the party, came across "multiple young people" outside a house and observed a couple of them drinking alcohol, Chief James Hussey said. Police arrested two Quincy teens and charged them with being minors in possession of alcohol.

They also confiscated a keg of beer as part of the investigation and identified the person who purchased it. Police are summonsing the person who bought the keg, a 21-year-old Cohasset resident, and they are also summonsing to court the teen that lived at the house where the party was taking place. Both will face the charge of furnishing alcohol to persons under 21. Police identified others present at the party, took their names, and contacted their parents, Hussey said.

Erratic driver

A cell caller helped police stop a woman who was allegedly driving erratically last Friday (June 29) at about 1:20 p.m. The caller observed a green Ford Escort station wagon with New Hampshire tags cause a near accident on Route 3A; the caller then reported seeing the car turn right onto Beechwood Street. An officer in an unmarked vehicle (he was conducting warrant service) was parked on Beechwood near Mill Lane and saw the Escort turn right up Bound Brook Lane. The officer stopped the car and identified the woman, a 40-year-old Plymouth resident. Chief Hussey said she told the officer she had an expired license and was unable to produce the registration. A computer check revealed she had been charged with unlicensed operation in Rhode Island and that her New Hampshire license had been suspended. Based on those facts, the officer placed her under arrest and charged her with unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle.

OUI arrest

A 48-year-old Hull woman is facing drunk driving charges following an accident on King Street on Tuesday (June 26) at 7:30 p.m.

Dispatch received a 911 call about a car that had driven into a parked tractor-trailer truck. When officers arrived they saw the truck parked off to the side of the 100 block of King Street (3A) with its flashers on. There was a green Ford sedan in the parking lot with extensive damage to the passenger side. The truck operator reported he was outside the truck and was not hurt when the Ford sedan struck his truck.

Based on their conversation with the woman and observations from the witness who saw her driving, police determined the woman was operating under the influence of alcohol. EMTs evaluated her at the scene and then she was brought the station. She was charged with OUI, driving to endanger and failure to stay in marked lanes.

Run off road

A motorist told police he had to swerve to avoid an oncoming car and drove off the road and into a tree at about the 300 block of Jerusalem Road on Tuesday (June 26) at about 7:30 p.m. The victim, who was transported to the hospital and was complaining of back and neck pain, described the other vehicle as a dark-colored SUV with one headlight out. The car had crossed into his lane.

Chief Hussey said there was no contact between the SUV and the man's car, which sustained front-end damage and had to be towed from the scene. The accident is under investigation.

Stolen bike

Last week a mother and son went to police headquarters to report that the boy's bicycle had been stolen at Sandy Beach. The boy left the bike unlocked in the rack and when he returned the bicycle was gone, Chief Hussey said. The bike is described as green in color with a banana seat and large butterfly handlebars. Hussey said police checked the garage at the station where bikes are stored that have been located and it was not there. "We're asking anyone who has seen the bike to report that to police," he said. The incident, which was reported at 6 p.m. Monday (June 25), is under investigation.

Cat attack

A cat apparently attacked its owner who lives in the Harborview Apartments off Elm Street on Monday (June 25) at about 1 p.m. The cat was also reported to have attacked the woman that does the laundry there. The cat owner was transported to the hospital and treated for a cat bite. The cat is in the custody of a relative until the owner makes a determination whether to keep the animal or have it put down, Chief Hussey said.

Hit and run

Hingham police reported a hit and run involving two cars at about 1:30 p.m. on Tuesday (June 26) in the vicinity of Hull Street and Grace Drive. Hingham police followed the car as it drove toward Hull onto Nantasket Avenue and then onto Berkley Street. The driver turned out to be a junior operator who was transporting four passengers, none of whom met the requirements to allow the teenage driver to operate the vehicle legally.

Chief Hussey said the teen said he knew he "had gotten close" to the car on Hull Street but did not think he had actually hit the car. The alleged incident occurred on the Cohasset side of Hull Street so Cohasset cited the teen, who lives in Brockton, for driving outside the junior operator license parameters. Hussey said the damage to the victim's car was minimal but the officer did observe that the vehicles had made contact so the teen was also cited for leaving the scene after causing property damage.

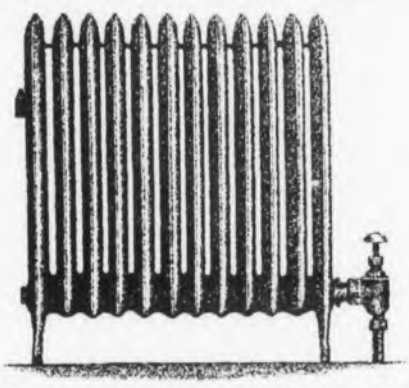
Little Harbor sewer expansion to begin the Mariner went to press) to discuss and vote on a recommendation for bid award. The Town Manager will make the final decision on the bid award, and then the DEP must also approve the contractor, Griffin said.

The town has received all necessary permits to move forward with the project, pending the award of the bids and approval of the contractors by the DEP, Griffin said.



The town sewer expansion to include the Little Harbor district, an addition of 485 homes and 150,000 gallons per day, was mandated by the state through the Second Amended Final Judgment. The agreement goes all the way back to the late 70s, it was handed down by the state as a means of implementing the Clean Waters Act. In 1979, a complaint was filed alleging violation of the Act, which could have cost the town $10,000 per day in fines. As part of the settlement, the town consented to enter the Judgment.

In 1980, the town and the state agreed on the terms of the Judgment, but it was again amended in 1994 and 1997, when it became the Second Amended Judgment. It was modified again in 1998 and then, in 2006, underwent its final amendment.

"Though we are still reviewing the many bids received, it does appear that the project came in well within our project budget, so that is very good news."
— Bill Griffin, Town Manager

As a result of the Judgment, the town embarked on two sewer projects, including an expansion of the Central Sewer District and the North Cohasset sewer project, which allowed residents to tie-in to capacity at the Hull treatment facility.

The Sewer Commission plans to tackle the wastewater treatment plant upgrade as early as possible in the project. They have said previously the updates to the plant will, in addition to increasing the capacity of the plant, alleviate the overflow incidents in Jacob's Meadow and the surrounding residences.

Navy veteran to help local veterans

"I want to help them navigate bureaucracy and get what they are entitled to from the federal and state government," said Jackson.

Jackson is a longtime Cohasset resident. He graduated from Cohasset High School in 1966 then went on to graduate from the University of Virginia in 1970 with a bachelor of arts in foreign affairs. In 1978, he obtained a Bachelor of Science degree from Northeastern University in criminal justice. He served four years on active duty in the United States Navy during the Vietnam War. After his active duty he joined the Naval Reserves, until his retirement with the rank of captain in 2000.

In addition, Jackson served on the Cohasset Police force for 26 years until he retired from his position of Police Chief in 2004.

Jackson has wasted no time getting his feet wet. He has already received phone calls from veterans seeking assistance. The first annual V-8 Veterans Summit held in Hingham on June 25 gave Jackson the opportunity to get some points of contact and hear about some of the issues facing veterans today.

"It was very worthwhile," noted Jackson.

Town Manager Bill Griffin announced his appointment of Jackson at the June 18 meeting of the Board of Selectmen.

"I am very confident that Mr. Jackson will represent the needs and interests of Cohasset veterans in his capacity of director," stated Griffin in a memo to the Selectmen. In accordance to the Town Manager Act, the Board of Selectmen had 15 days to reject Griffin's appointment, however, the Selectmen unanimously waived that right on their June 18 meeting.

"I want veterans to feel comfortable coming to me for help."
— Robert Jackson, veterans agent

"I was impressed with Bob's commitment to serve the needs of Cohasset veterans and to be available on an as needed basis to provide them guidance," said Griffin in an e-mail, who also noted Jackson was "well-respected among the veterans in the community."

As a case in point, Griffin said one of the other applicants told him during the interview process that if Jackson had applied for the position, he would support Jackson's appointment.

Jackson is looking forward to helping Cohasset's veterans to take advantage of the state and federal benefits, whether it's for education, employment or medical assistance. He hopes to keep the process as low key and private as possible.

"I want veterans to feel comfortable coming to me for help," he said. The annual stipend for the part-time position is $1,600.

Jackson follows in the footsteps of the late Mary Jeanette Murray, Cohasset's longtime state representative, who served as veteran's agent in 2006. Murray passed away in October at the age of 81. He has long been interested in the position; he applied for the job at the time Murray was appointed in 2004.

"I thought it was something I could do to give back to the community," said Jackson.

Groningen Duo to perform on carillon

The 83rd season of Summer Carillon Recitals on the 57-bell carillon of St. Stephen's Church, will continue at 6 p.m., on Sunday, July 8, with a performance by the Groningen Duo featuring, Adolph Rots and Auke de Boer, carillonneurs from Groningen, The Netherlands. Their program will include baroque, American, classical, romantic and popular pieces, and a group of tunes by Leroy Anderson, all arranged for two carillonneurs.

The hour-long recital is free of charge. It will take place regardless of weather conditions. In case of rain, the bells may be heard from parked cars. Printed programs, schedules and descriptive brochures will be distributed on the Cohasset Common, and will also be available in a stand by the courtyard of St. Stephen's Church on Highland Avenue extension. Listeners are invited to bring chairs, blankets and picnics to the common or the church courtyard. Following the recital, visitors will be welcome to climb the tower for a demonstration of the instrument, and to view the bells.

For more information, call St. Stephen's Church at 781-383-1083 weekdays between 9 a.m. and noon; St. Stephen's Church carillonneur Sally Slade Warner at 978-475-2599; or assistant carillonneur, Mary Kennedy at 781-383-9599.

Water bill woes

Commission vows to correct problem

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The next billing cycle will be shorter to limit it to 180 days in total across two completed billing periods.

Cohasset Water users recently received their quarterly bills — the first bill to include the rate increase passed at the March 31 Annual Town Meeting. Some residents were taken aback at how much water they had used in the last quarter— and how much their bill had skyrocketed. Even with the rate increase passed a Town Meeting in late March to explain the charge increase, some households were left scratching their heads to explain the atypical usage.

But the Water Commission quickly realized the issue and has vowed to correct the affected users. In a letter to water users dated June 19, the Water Commission names a "greater than 90 day billing cycle (for the Fourth Quarter, Fiscal Year 2007 bills)" as the culprit for the skewed usage and subsequent billing issues.

The longer billing cycle resulted in approximately 350 households showing greater than 2,000 cubic feet of usage where there was otherwise no history of that volume, the letter states. As a result, the cubic feet in excess of 2,000 cubic feet was charged at the higher second tier rate.

The Water Commission's new rate structure, effective April 15, has two rate tiers. For usage less than or equal to 2,000 cubic feet per quarter, the rate is $5.16 per cubic feet. The second tier, which begins at 2,001 cubic feet per quarter, doubles the rate to $10.32 per cubic foot. This is the first billing quarter where the new rate structure has taken effect.

The Water Commission is taking measures to compensate affected residents. The next billing cycle will be shorter to limit it to 180 days in total across two completed billing periods.

"Usage and billed amount should be similarly reduced" in the upcoming quarterly bill, states the letter.

For households where usage exceeding 2,000 cubic feet was not typical, residents will see a credit for the difference on their next quarterly bill. The shorter quarterly cycle should "even out" residents' bills.

"Our goal is to have 90 days in a quarter to the greatest extent possible," says Water Commissioner Nathaniel Palmer, but when a labor-intensive, time consuming process is involved it doesn't always go to plan.

The process was delayed this quarter due to insufficient help for the meter reading process, which Water Commissioner John McNabb says the Water Commission was not aware of at the time. The issue is not expected to occur again, according to the letter.

The water quarterly billing cycles roughly run from February to April, May to July, August to October, November to January. Although different households will have different start and end dates for the quarter, all water bills are sent out on the same day, says Palmer.

Although Town Meeting voted to authorize the water rate increase effective as of April 15, 2007, the rate is applicable for the entire billable quarter.

"The rate applies to the date of the bill, not the date of usage," says Palmer. The reason being it would be impossible for the Water Department to determine how many gallons were used previous to April 15 and how many were used after the effective date, Palmer says. Water users should have also noticed a new line item on the bills—the fire protection charge, which for most residences is $15 per quarter.

Residents concerned with any aspect of their bills, or if they have questions about their water service are encouraged to notify the Water Department at (781) 383-0057

"People don't realize how seriously we take their concerns," says Palmer.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

GREAT FOURTH

Hey Cohasset, I hope everyone has had a wonderful Fourth of July week and enjoyed the holiday in whatever way you celebrated. The parades were wonderful, weather sort of held off and fun was had in celebration with fireworks, family and friends. The summer now seems to go in a super fast mode so make sure to enjoy it!

TRIPLE WINNER

Congratulations go out to all the winners of the Cohasset Little League Calendar Drawing for the month of June, especially to Wayne Robbins as he won not once but three times, including the final drawing of $1000. All of the winners and players are smiling, great job by all.

HARRY POTTER

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, celebrates the release of "Harry Potter and The Deathly Hallows" by J.K. Rowling on July 21 with a party on Fri., July 20 at 10 p.m. Many wonderful and magical events are planned for the evening. A substitute teacher for the Care of Magical Creatures will be available with some of her favorite Hogwarts pets: a Great Horned Owl, a Screech Owl, a Black Rat Snake, a toad and a rat. Other party plans include Harry Potter Trivia and Crossword, the showing of a Harry potter movie, activities, raffles, and arts and crafts. Light refreshments will be served. We invite everyone to come in costume. Buttonwood is offering a 20 percent discount off the cover price of "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows". Books purchased in advance will receive a ticket that will determine book distribution at 12:01 AM. An adult must accompany all children. This is a free event and the public is most welcome. Please call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 or order online at www.buttonwoodbooks.com to order your copy if unable to attend.

LOCKS OF LOVE

Christine Guinee of Cohasset recently had her hair cut and donated her ponytail to the Locks of Love Foundation in Lake Worth, Florida. The web address is www.locksoflove.org This is the third time Christine has donated her hair to this wonderful organization. The Foundation requires the hair to be at least 10 inches long (this year, the hairdresser cut 13 inches)! It takes an average of 3-4 hair donations to make just one wig for a child going through chemotherapy treatments. Christine is 10 years old and a student at Deer Hill School entering fifth grade in September. She is always so excited when her hair is long enough to cut and send it to Locks of Love. She is a member of the Cohasset Swim Team and said that it was so easy to put her swim cap on this week now that her hair is so short! This was wonderful news Christine and you should be so proud as we know your family and friends are.

Christine Guinee shows off the ponytail she donated to Locks of Love, a non-profit organization that helps children with medical hair loss. This is the third time Christine has donated her hair to Locks of Love.

PHYSICS STAR

Congratulations to Timothy Smith from here in Cohasset, a 2007 graduate of Boston High School, recently won a special award at Senior Class Night, an evening set aside to celebrate and reward its seniors. Timothy won an Excellence Award in Physics, naming him best in his class. Super work!

Timothy Smith was tops in his class in physics at BC High.
